Mideast Battles Apparently End; Unsure Soviets Call U.N. Session

Truce Observers Claim Combatants Okay Terms

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Scattered fighting in the Middle East war apparently ended Saturday night after the two remaining combatants agreed to cease fire in the six-day war that left Israeli forces in control of all the land between the Suez Canal and the eastern shore of Galilee.

While there were no fresh reports of fighting from the Middle East, the Soviet Union, requested a meeting of the U.N. Security Council on Saturday night and said that Israel was continuing to fight.

Some clashes were reported between Israel and Syria as the 12:30 p.m. EDT cease-fire deadline passed, but U.N. truce observers said that both Israel and Syria had accepted arrangements to make the cease-fire effective.

Secretary-General U Thant told the hastily called night Security Council session he had fragmentary reports of fighting still in progress after the deadline. Thant said U.N. truce chief Lt. Gen. Odd Bull of Norway reported his truce observers were not in position to make a thorough check as to whether the fihting had actually ceased.

Thant said Bull's reports told of an Israeli paratroop drop as late as 3:53 p.m. EDT, 3 hours and 23 minutes after the cease-fire.

AP correspondent Hans Benedict reported from the Syrian front that shooting had subsided and "everything is quiet," indicating the cease-fire acceptance had filtered down to field units.

An Israeli military spokesman said shortly before midnight Saturday that all was quiet on the Syrian front.

A Syrian broadcast claimed Syrian forces shot down two Israeli planes over the Damascus area five minutes after the cease-fire deadline.

In the hours before the U.N. cease-fire call, Israeli troops wiped out Syrian guns on two hills near the Sea of Galilee and drove to occupy others in an area Israel says has been a springboard for harassing attacks on Israel's border villages for 19 years.

U.N. observer reports read to the Security Council in New York said the Israeli air strikes had been made outside the capital, not within it.

In the first days of the war, Israeli ground and air forces swept across the Sinai Peninsula to the east bank of the Suez Canal and southward to Sharm el Sheik to break Nasser's proclaimed blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba to Israeli shipping. Actually, the Israelis never challenged the blockade. Nasser's Soviet-supplied military equipment and planes lay destroyed or captured after the Israeli blitz.

The Israeli war machine also marched into Jordan and occupied all Jordanian territory to the west bank of the Biblical Jordan River including all of Jerusalem and Bethlehem.

The Soviet Union has demanded that the Israelis withdraw from the occupied territories to positions held before the outbreak of hostilities last Monday.

Israel is not likely to do so without negotiations in which it would hope to win free passage into the Gulf of Aqaba as well as the Suez Canal. Nasser has barred Israeli shipping from the canal.

Nasser's decision to remain at his post was preceded by Arab demonstrations in almost every Middle East capital demanding that his resignation be rejected by the Egyptian National Assembly. Before the assembly could act, Nasser changed his mind.

His decision set off wild cheering in Cairo.

In Beirut, Lebanese officials imposed an indefinite curfew as 20,000 pro-Nasser demonstrators attempted to march on the U.S. and British Embassies. A Coca-Cola bottling plant and an American auto showroom were set afire. Windows of three stores of a British grocery chain were smashed.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Soviet Union on Saturday night charged Israel was continuing to attack Syria despite a cease-fire agreement, but Israel insisted that hostilities had stopped completely.

At a hurriedly called meeting of the U.N. Security Council, Soviet Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko and Syrian Ambassador George J. Tomeh declared Israel was violating the U.N. cease-fire resolutions and must be stopped.

The secretary-general read to the council a cable from Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban stating that the cease-fire had gone "effectively into force" at 6:30 p.m. local time—12:30 p.m. EDT—and has continued without interruption.

"Israeli forces," Eban declared, "are scrupulously and maintaining fully the cease-fire arrangement."

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, meanwhile, introduced a resolution condemning any and all violations and calling upon the U.N. secretary-general to investigate all allegations of violations.

The council recessed for consultations on the conflicting reports.

The meeting was called at the request of Fedorenko who declared the council "is being dragged into a shameful farce."

Fifth District Voters Reject Sales Tax By 27,229 To 20,818

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Fifth District voters combined Saturday in a light turnout to reject a proposed one-cent sales tax, thus delivering a defeat to the concept of district-wide levies in its first test at the polls. Complete but unofficial returns late Saturday from Ouachita and the district's 13 other parishes counted 27,229 opposition votes against 20,818 votes for the tax.

Despite vigorous backing from 14 of the 15 school boards in the district and strong support from municipalities led by Monroe and West Monroe, as well as parish police juries, including Ouachita Parish, the levy was beaten in nine parishes.

It carried only in Catahoula, Lincoln, Madison, Tensas and West Carroll. Officials early in the evening with trends becoming evident sounded particular disappointment in the small turnout.

The district vote amounted to only slightly more than 40 per cent of registration, while in Ouachita, despite a record absentee total, the figure was just 46 per cent of those who could have voted.

(Related Material, Page 5A)

In Ouachita Parish, the tax, winning in but six of 50 precincts, claimed 7,194 votes, against an opposing total of 10,520.

Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard, a leader in the drive to pass the levy for school, municipal and parish pay raises, came out fighting after the final returns arrived.

"I may have a further statement to make in a day or two with reference to the personal attack made upon me and all other public officials from the governor down by the opposition," he said.

The campaign, with opposition intensifying in the last week, had taken a bitter edge.

These were the parish by parish returns late Saturday with all 279 of the district's precincts reporting (for votes listed first):

Caldwell, 601, 1325; Catahoula, 944, 708; Concordia, 1,120, 1,456; East Carroll, 714, 766; Franklin, 1,274, 1,723; Jackson, 1,021, 2,192; Lincoln, 1,587, 1,426; Madison, 1,167, 777; Morehouse 1,232, 1,710; Ouachita, 7,194, 10,520; Richland, 1,256, 1,670; Tensas, 592, 387; Union, 1,147, 1,586; and West Carroll, 969, 933.

One precinct in Concordia Parish, customarily late in reporting, was estimated by officials in that parish. The final total will vary by "only a few votes one way or the other," they said.

In Jonesville, where his Catahoula Parish voters had given the tax narrow approval, School Board President Henry Taliaferro Jr. predicted the results would mean a worsening of the teacher pay problem.

"I expect the situation to get worse, particularly since a sales tax to raise teacher pay was passed Tuesday in Caddo Parish and the City of Shreveport," Taliaferro, president of the Northeast Louisiana Sales Tax District, said. "We're hurting and I just cannot understand the heavy vote against us.

"I believe everyone did all that could be done, but taxes are hard to pass." He stressed that the vote was a "sound democratic action," however, and was accepted by all, "although it puts our small parishes in an untenable position.

"The problem of teacher pay is still with us," he said.

Howard in Monroe noted a narrow victory for the tax in Monroe in expressing "appreciation to the people of Monroe for their favorable vote and support." He added, however, that, "We and our employes are tremendously disappointed.

"Those employes desperately need raises and I can see no way whatever whereby the city could secure the minimum of $600,000 need to provide the in-

Judges Take Grants Bill For Study

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The fate of Louisiana's tuition grants program for private school pupils was in the hands of three federal judges Saturday.

A three - judge federal panel, headed by Circuit Judge John Minor Wisdom of New Orleans Friday took under advisement an attack made on the grants-in-aid by the federal government and a group of Negroes.

The court heard testimony in the suit earlier this year. Friday's proceedings consisted of oral arguments by opposing lawyers.

ATTACK CONSIDERED

Justice Department attorney Hugh Fleischer told the judges that the government was considering an attack on a standby grant-in-aid bill passed recently by the legislature.

In Baton Rouge, meanwhile, Gov. John McKeithen told a news conference Friday he would sign the new grants-in-aid program. It sets up tuition payments based on a family's financial needs.

The original grant-in-aid program grew out of the 1960 legislative battle to circumvent school desegregation in New Orleans. Under the present law, tuition grants of $2 per day per pupil are available for those enrolled in private, non-sectarian schools.

A rash of private schools sprung up in the New Orleans area after the bill was passed. Many students at long established private schools also applied for the grants.

The federal government contends the grants were designed solely to circumvent intergration. The state contends that Negroes and whites alike may benefit from the program.

Two Killed In Madison Shootout; Four Arrested

TALLULAH (Special) — Four Madison parish men were charged by the Madison Parish Sheriff's Department with murder Saturday in connection with the deaths of two other men who were killed in a gunbattle on an old abandoned stretch of U. S. Highway 80 about five miles east of Tallulah.

Dead from gunshot wounds received in the shootout are Robert Weems and John Stephens, also of Madison Parish.

According to Chief Deputy R. R. Mitchell, Weems and Stephens started arguing over money. A fight started and pistols were drawn. Weems was shot in the chest and Stephens was shot in the leg.

Two other men, Edward Grigsby and Harold Nevels, tried to place Weems in an automobile to take him to a hospital. Before they could get Weems into the car, gunfire broke out between Grigsby and Stephens, Mitchell said.

The gunfire ended, and Grigsby and Nevels managed to get Weems into the car. They took the wounded man to the Delhi Clinic in Delhi where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

According to Dr. J. C. Ellington of Rayville, Richland Parish coronor, Weems died from a gunshot wound in the right chest which resulted in a massive hemmorage and death.

Madison Parish Sheriff C. E. Hester said that the gunbattle apparently occurred sometime between 10 p.m. Friday and midnight.

Stephens was found Saturday morning lying dead in a ditch near his car by Sheriff's officials.

Besides the wound in the leg, which Stephens received in the exchange of fire with Weems, he had been shot in the chest. Dr. George M. Webb, Madison Parish Coronor, said that Stephens' death was due to the chest wound.

Sheriff Hester said that his deputies had learned that Melvin Hudson and Devon McNeese had also been involved in the shooting incident. The two men were arrested and charged along with Grigsby and Nevels with murder.

The sheriff said that officials from his office were still investigating.

Funeral services for Mr. Weems, 37, of Tallulah, will be held at 4 p.m. today in the First National Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Clarence Young officiating assisted by the Rev. Marion Byrd and the Rev. Hoke Dupree.

Burial will be in Harris Cemetery near Winnsboro.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Shirley Weems of Tallulah; two daughters, Misses Patricia and Janet Weems, also of Tallulah; one son, Ralph Weems of Winnsboro; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Weems of Delhi; one brother, Ray Weems of Delhi; one sister, Mrs. Hazel Hill of Winnsboro; and a number of nieces and nephews.

Mr. Stephens body was taken to the First National Funeral Home in Oak Grove where funeral services will be held in the funeral home chapel Monday at 2 p.m.

Burial will be in the Oak Grove Cemetery.

Stephens is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Lou Stephens of Tallulah; two sons, Albert and Johnny Stephens, both of Tallulah; one daughter, Miss Winnie Stephens, also of Tallulah; his mother, Mrs. Ora L. Stephens of Oak Grove; three brothers, Paul H. Stephens, James David Stephens, and Billie Dean Stephens, all of Oak Grove; five sisters, Mrs. James Madden and Mrs. Doris Watson, both of Oak Grove, Mrs. Gale Moore and Mrs. Jean Glass, both of Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. Rachel Howell, Silsbee, Tex.

Tornadoes Hit Midwest

By United Press International

A tornado threat hovered over the Great Plains and Midwest Saturday, hours after twisters struck in the same area. Thunderstorms were the rule from the Rockies to New England.

A tornado watch was in effect through late evening for portions of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

A driving thunderstorm blackened the skies over Chicago for more than an hour. Police said reports of traffic accidents jumped to 15 every 30 minutes during the storm. Visibility was cut to 100 feet in the loop and expressways leading into the city were blocked by waters up to 9 inches high.

A tornado touched down early Saturday southeast of Leedey, Okla., another swooped down between Butler and Custer City, Okla. A third was reported west of Okarche, Okla.

All the twisters came down in open country and apparently caused no damage or injury.

A funnel was sighted Saturday afternoon near Elkhart, Ind. Another funnel was sighted early Saturday by utilities crews north of Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Friday night, a tornado touched down southwest of Concordia, Kan., killing a woman and injuring her son and another woman. A Rice, Kan., couple also was injured and a number of other minor injuries were reported in the area.

The Concordia tornado also knocked out power to the city and forced a radio station off the air.

A hangar was unroofed at the Concordia airport and a television tower toppled. A dozen homes were unroofed and car windows smashed. National Guardsmen were called to emergency duty.

Israelis Want City Undivided

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago's American reported Saturday in a copyright story that Israel's peace terms include demands for guaranteed free passage through the Gulf of Aqaba annnn the Suez Canal and the promise that Jerusalem will not be divided.

The American quoted an aid of Levi Eshkol, Israel prime minister, as saying that other peace terms include promises that United Nations forces be banned from Israel and that Israel retains a presence in Sharm el Sheikh near the Straits of Tiran to insure safety of its shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba.

The American said that it reached Aviad Yafeh, Eshkol's press secretary, by overseas radio-telephone.

"The war was a very costly one," Yafeh said, "but all we had in mind was securing the lives of the people of Israel. Now we would like to achieve a complete peace with our Arab neighbors."

With the exception of Jerusalem and Sharm el Sheikh, other territorial gains made by the Israeli armed forces are open to negotiation. Yafeh told the American.

Navy Pilots Hit Depots In Hanoi Vicinity Raid

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Navy pilots reported Sunday inflicting "heavy damage" on a North Vietnamese army supply and missile depot during a triple raid Saturday on an electric power plant in Hanoi and two targets on the city's outskirts.

The carrier-based planes flew through heavy ground fire for the first strikes in the immediate vicinity of Hanoi since May 22.

U.S. headquarters said an F8 Crusader was downed during the Hanoi raids and that its pilot is missing. North Vietnam claimed to have shot down four U.S. planes and captured several pilots.

While Navy pilots struck at Hanoi, U.S. Air Force jets from Thailand bases ranged deep into North Vietnam to hit at rail yards, trains and bridges far north of the capital.

U.S. headquarters said two 70-car trains were blown up in a rail siding 40 miles north of Hanoi and multiple rail cuts were inflicted in yards 50 and 55 miles northeast of Hanoi.

In addition, headquarters said, F105 Thunderchiefs destroyed 12 cars and damaged 13 others at the Kep rail yards 38 miles northeast of Hanoi. Thunderchief pilots also were reported to have destroyed a railroad bridge 36 miles north of Hanoi.

In South Vietnam, U.S. B52 bombers of the Strategic Air Command struck before dawn Sunday at enemy fortifications and storage areas in Phuoc Long Province facing the Cambodian border.

The day marked a full month that the giant, eight-engine bombers had refrained from bombing enemy positions in northernmost Quang Tri Province. The big bombers apparently have been staying away from the northern end of the country to avoid Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles which the Communists have installed just above the demilitarized zone.

Also in South Vietn, Viet Cong guerrillas shelled the Vinh Long airfield in the Mekong delta Saturday with 20 rounds of recoilless rifle and mortar fire. U.S. headquarters said there were no casualties and that damage to aircraft was so light that all planes were operational by Sunday morning. The airfield is about 75 miles southwest of Saigon. Also in the delta, a unit of the 3rd Brigade, 9th U.S. Infantry Division, engaged a small Viet Cong force attempting to cross a river about 20 miles southwest of Saigon on Saturday night.

The infantry men called in helicopter gunships, artillery, and rapid-firing "dragon ships" and after 2½ hours of fighting reported 42 enemy killed and 20 sampans destroyed. A U.S. spokesman said there were no American casualties.

The power plant hit by the Navy jets Saturday a little more than a mile from the center of Hanoi is said to be the only such power source for the city and military units in the area. It was damaged in two previous attacks, May 19 and May 21.

New Mexico Police Jail Man As Leader Of Raid

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Reies Tijerina was captured and jailed Saturday as the leader of a Spanish-American group chased by New Mexico State Police and National Guard troops after an armed raid on a rural courthouse.

State Police said Tijerina, 40, was charged on warrants from Dist. Atty. Alfonso Sanchez on counts of kidnaping and assault with intent to commit murder.

Two officers were shot and wounded, and more than 20 persons held hostage during the raid Monday at the courthouse in Tierra Amarilla, about 65 miles north of Santa Fe.

More than 20 of Tijerina's followers in the militant move to press claims to old Spanish land grant properties were jailed earlier in the week.

Tijerina had eluded a 500-man task force of State Police and Guard troops since the raid. His capture came shortly after midnight Saturday on a telephone tip from a service station at San Ysidro northwest of Bernalillo.

The station attendant, who did not want his name used, said a man resembling Tijerina got out of a car to get a drink of water from a hose. State Police Lt. Jess Sosa and two officers stopped the car south of Bernalillo, heading toward Albuquerque, and found Tijerina lying on the back seat.

One of the arresting officers, Tony Gonzales, said Tijerina submitted meekly, saying only that he had "a pain in the liver."

Driving the car was Tijerina's son, Hugh Reyes Tijerina, 19. Also in the car was a man identified as Uvaldo Velasquez, 47. They were charged with aiding or harboring a felon.

Tijerina was jailed in Santa Fe where Rio Arriba County Sheriff Benny Naranjo, one of those held captive in the court house at Tierra Amarilla, talked to the prisoner.

"He seems like a guy that's in jail," Naranjo said, "they never feel too well."

Tijerina, talking to newsmen commented, "I don't expect any more violence in the Rio Arriba County."

After Tijerina had been jailed two of his brothers arrested earlier, Anselmo and Ramon, were transferred from the jail to the state prison south of Santa Fe for safekeeping. Seven other followers of Tijerina were taken to the state prison during the week.

Still at large in the manhunt were Baltazar Martinez and another of Tijerina's brothers, Cristobal Martinez, about 20, was identified as the man who took two of the hostages from the courthouse when the armed band fled into the forest and hills near Tierra Amarilla and Canjilon.

This week's raid, shootout, massive search and arrests climaxed many months of increasingly militant activity by the Tijerina group in its claims to millions of acres in the Southwest under old Spanish land grants.

Tijerina led the attempted take-over of a campground in the Carson National Forest last fall, which ended without any shooting.

"I believe everyone did all that could be done, but taxes are hard to pass." He stressed that the vote was a "sound democratic action," however, and was accepted by all, "although it puts our small parishes in an untenable position.

Judges Take Grants Bill For Study

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The fate of Louisiana's tuition grants program for private school pupils was in the hands of three federal judges Saturday.

A three - judge federal panel, headed by Circuit Judge John Minor Wisdom of New Orleans Friday took under advisement an attack made on the grants-in-aid by the federal government and a group of Negroes.

The court heard testimony in the suit earlier this year. Friday's proceedings consisted of oral arguments by opposing lawyers.

ATTACK CONSIDERED

Justice Department attorney Hugh Fleischer told the judges that the government was considering an attack on a standby grant-in-aid bill passed recently by the legislature.

In Baton Rouge, meanwhile, Gov. John McKeithen told a news conference Friday he would sign the new grants-in-aid program. It sets up tuition payments based on a family's financial needs.

The original grant-in-aid program grew out of the 1960 legislative battle to circumvent school desegregation in New Orleans. Under the present law, tuition grants of $2 per day per pupil are available for those enrolled in private, non-sectarian schools.

A rash of private schools sprung up in the New Orleans area after the bill was passed. Many students at long established private schools also applied for the grants.

The federal government contends the grants were designed solely to circumvent intergration. The state contends that Negroes and whites alike may benefit from the program.

Two Killed In Madison Shootout; Four Arrested

TALLULAH (Special) — Four Madison parish men were charged by the Madison Parish Sheriff's Department with murder Saturday in connection with the deaths of two other men who were killed in a gunbattle on an old abandoned stretch of U. S. Highway 80 about five miles east of Tallulah.

Dead from gunshot wounds received in the shootout are Robert Weems and John Stephens, also of Madison Parish.

According to Chief Deputy R. R. Mitchell, Weems and Stephens started arguing over money. A fight started and pistols were drawn. Weems was shot in the chest and Stephens was shot in the leg.

Two other men, Edward Grigsby and Harold Nevels, tried to place Weems in an automobile to take him to a hospital. Before they could get Weems into the car, gunfire broke out between Grigsby and Stephens, Mitchell said.

The gunfire ended, and Grigsby and Nevels managed to get Weems into the car. They took the wounded man to the Delhi Clinic in Delhi where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

According to Dr. J. C. Ellington of Rayville, Richland Parish coronor, Weems died from a gunshot wound in the right chest which resulted in a massive hemmorage and death.

Madison Parish Sheriff C. E. Hester said that the gunbattle apparently occurred sometime between 10 p.m. Friday and midnight.

Stephens was found Saturday morning lying dead in a ditch near his car by Sheriff's officials.

Besides the wound in the leg, which Stephens received in the exchange of fire with Weems, he had been shot in the chest. Dr. George M. Webb, Madison Parish Coronor, said that Stephens' death was due to the chest wound.

Sheriff Hester said that his deputies had learned that Melvin Hudson and Devon McNeese had also been involved in the shooting incident. The two men were arrested and charged along with Grigsby and Nevels with murder.

The sheriff said that officials from his office were still investigating.

Funeral services for Mr. Weems, 37, of Tallulah, will be held at 4 p.m. today in the First National Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Clarence Young officiating assisted by the Rev. Marion Byrd and the Rev. Hoke Dupree.

Burial will be in Harris Cemetery near Winnsboro.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Shirley Weems of Tallulah; two daughters, Misses Patricia and Janet Weems, also of Tallulah; one son, Ralph Weems of Winnsboro; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Weems of Delhi; one brother, Ray Weems of Delhi; one sister, Mrs. Hazel Hill of Winnsboro; and a number of nieces and nephews.

Mr. Stephens body was taken to the First National Funeral Home in Oak Grove where funeral services will be held in the funeral home chapel Monday at 2 p.m.

Burial will be in the Oak Grove Cemetery.

Stephens is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Lou Stephens of Tallulah; two sons, Albert and Johnny Stephens, both of Tallulah; one daughter, Miss Winnie Stephens, also of Tallulah; his mother, Mrs. Ora L. Stephens of Oak Grove; three brothers, Paul H. Stephens, James David Stephens, and Billie Dean Stephens, all of Oak Grove; five sisters, Mrs. James Madden and Mrs. Doris Watson, both of Oak Grove, Mrs. Gale Moore and Mrs. Jean Glass, both of Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. Rachel Howell, Silsbee, Tex.

Tornadoes Hit Midwest

By United Press International

A tornado threat hovered over the Great Plains and Midwest Saturday, hours after twisters struck in the same area. Thunderstorms were the rule from the Rockies to New England.

A tornado watch was in effect through late evening for portions of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

A driving thunderstorm blackened the skies over Chicago for more than an hour. Police said reports of traffic accidents jumped to 15 every 30 minutes during the storm. Visibility was cut to 100 feet in the loop and expressways leading into the city were blocked by waters up to 9 inches high.

A tornado touched down early Saturday southeast of Leedey, Okla., another swooped down between Butler and Custer City, Okla. A third was reported west of Okarche, Okla.

All the twisters came down in open country and apparently caused no damage or injury.

A funnel was sighted Saturday afternoon near Elkhart, Ind. Another funnel was sighted early Saturday by utilities crews north of Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Friday night, a tornado touched down southwest of Concordia, Kan., killing a woman and injuring her son and another woman. A Rice, Kan., couple also was injured and a number of other minor injuries were reported in the area.

The Concordia tornado also knocked out power to the city and forced a radio station off the air.

A hangar was unroofed at the Concordia airport and a television tower toppled. A dozen homes were unroofed and car windows smashed. National Guardsmen were called to emergency duty.

Israelis Want City Undivided

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago's American reported Saturday in a copyright story that Israel's peace terms include demands for guaranteed free passage through the Gulf of Aqaba annnn the Suez Canal and the promise that Jerusalem will not be divided.

The American quoted an aid of Levi Eshkol, Israel prime minister, as saying that other peace terms include promises that United Nations forces be banned from Israel and that Israel retains a presence in Sharm el Sheikh near the Straits of Tiran to insure safety of its shipping in the Gulf of Aqaba.

The American said that it reached Aviad Yafeh, Eshkol's press secretary, by overseas radio-telephone.

"The war was a very costly one," Yafeh said, "but all we had in mind was securing the lives of the people of Israel. Now we would like to achieve a complete peace with our Arab neighbors."

With the exception of Jerusalem and Sharm el Sheikh, other territorial gains made by the Israeli armed forces are open to negotiation, Yafeh told the American.

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Navy pilots reported Sunday inflicting "heavy damage" on a North Vietnamese army supply and missile depot during a triple raid Saturday on an electric power plant in Hanoi and two targets on the city's outskirts.

The carrier-based planes flew through heavy ground fire for the first strikes in the immediate vicinity of Hanoi since May 22.

U.S. headquarters said an F8 Crusader was downed during the Hanoi raids and that its pilot is missing. North Vietnam claimed to have shot down four U.S. planes and captured several pilots.

While Navy pilots struck at Hanoi, U.S. Air Force jets from Thailand bases ranged deep into North Vietnam to hit at rail yards, trains and bridges far north of the capital.

U.S. headquarters said two 70-car trains were blown up in a rail siding 40 miles north of Hanoi and multiple rail cuts were inflicted in yards 50 and 55 miles northeast of Hanoi.

In addition, headquarters said, F105 Thunderchiefs destroyed 12 cars and damaged 13 others at the Kep rail yards 38 miles northeast of Hanoi. Thunderchief pilots also were reported to have destroyed a railroad bridge 36 miles north of Hanoi.

In South Vietnam, U.S. B52 bombers of the Strategic Air Command struck before dawn Sunday at enemy fortifications and storage areas in Phuoc Long Province facing the Cambodian border.

The day marked a full month that the giant, eight-engine bombers had refrained from bombing enemy positions in northernmost Quang Tri Province. The big bombers apparently have been staying away from the northern end of the country to avoid Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles which the Communists have installed just above the demilitarized zone.

Also in South Vietn, Viet Cong guerrillas shelled the Vinh Long airfield in the Mekong delta Saturday with 20 rounds of recoilless rifle and mortar fire. U.S. headquarters said there were no casualties and that damage to aircraft was so light that all planes were operational by Sunday morning. The airfield is about 75 miles southwest of Saigon. Also in the delta, a unit of the 3rd Brigade, 9th U.S. Infantry Division, engaged a small Viet Cong force attempting to cross a river about 20 miles southwest of Saigon on Saturday night.

The infantry men called in helicopter gunships, artillery, and rapid-firing "dragon ships" and after 2½ hours of fighting reported 42 enemy killed and 20 sampans destroyed. A U.S. spokesman said there were no American casualties.

The power plant hit by the Navy jets Saturday a little more than a mile from the center of Hanoi is said to be the only such power source for the city and military units in the area. It was damaged in two previous attacks, May 19 and May 21.

New Mexico Police Jail Man As Leader Of Raid

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Reies Tijerina was captured and jailed Saturday as the leader of a Spanish-American group chased by New Mexico State Police and National Guard troops after an armed raid on a rural courthouse.

State Police said Tijierina, 40, was charged on warrants from Dist. Atty. Alfonso Sanchez on counts of kidnaping and assault with intent to commit murder.

Two officers were shot and wounded, and more than 20 persons held hostage during the raid Monday at the courthouse in Tierra Amarilla, about 65 miles north of Santa Fe.

More than 20 of Tijerina's followers in the militant move to press claims to old Spanish land grant properties were jailed earlier in the week.

Tijerina had eluded a 500-man task force of State Police and Guard troops since the raid. His capture came shortly after midnight Saturday on a telephone tip from a service station at San Ysidro northwest of Bernalillo.

The station attendant, who did not want his name used, said a man resembling Tijerina got out of a car to get a drink of water from a hose. State Police Lt. Jess Sosa and two officers stopped the car south of Bernalillo, heading toward Albuquerque, and found Tijerina lying on the back seat.

One of the arresting officers, Tony Gonzales, said Tijerina submitted meekly, saying only that he had "a pain in the liver."

Driving the car was Tijerina's son, Hugh Reyes Tijerina, 19. Also in the car was a man identified as Uvaldo Velasquez, 47. They were charged with aiding or harboring a felon.

Tijerina was jailed in Santa Fe where Rio Arriba County Sheriff Benny Naranjo, one of those held captive in the courthouse at Tierra Amarilla, talked to the prisoner.

"He seems like a guy that's in jail," Naranjo said. "they never feel too well."

Tijerina, talking to newsmen, commented, "I don't expect any more violence in the Rio Arriba County."

After Tijerina had been jailed, two of his brothers arrested earlier, Anselmo and Ramon, were transferred from the jail to the state prison south of Santa Fe for safekeeping. Seven other followers of Tijerina were tkaen to the state prison during the week.

Still at large in the manhunt were Baltazar Martinez and another of Tijerina's brothers, Cristobal. Martinez, about 20, was identified as the man who took two of the hostages from the courthouse when the armed band fled into the forest and hills near Tierra Amarilla and Canjilon.

This week's raid, shootout, massive search and arrests climaxed many months of increasingly militant activity by the Tijerina group in its claims to millions of acres in the Southwest under old Spanish land grants.

Tijerina led the attempted take-over of a campground in the Carson National Forest last fall, which ended without any shooting.

U.S. Authorizes Oil Firms To Assure Adequate Flow

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department authorized Saturday emergency action by U.S. oil companies to assure a continued flow of oil to free world countries in the face of the Middle East crisis.

Officials said the action is needed mainly to help West European nations which receive much of their oil from the Middle East and through the Suez Canal.

Only a small amount of U.S. oil imports come from that area.

The Interior Department announced that Assistant Secretary J. Cordell Moore made a determination today that "events in the Middle East have created a disuation requiring emergency action" under the voluntary agreement relating to foreign petroleum supply.

He therefore "called upon the foreign petroleum supply committee to prepare a plan of action to meet that emergency," the announcement said.

Officials said that under this determination of an emergency by the U.S. government, American companies would be able to undertake joint tanker and other operations which otherwise would be barred by U.S. antitrust laws.

The oil industry committee had recommended action at a meeting here Thursday, but the formal government declaration was needed to put emergency plans into effect.

Israeli Armor Snaps Back Of Syrian Army

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)—Israeli armor and infantry, supported by air strikes, broke the back of the Syrian army Saturday and sent it in full retreat toward Damascus. Arab resistance crumbled and a United Nations truce prevailed.

In the final hours of the war, Syria charged that Israeli planes bombarded Damascus, the Syrian capital, "almost continuously" beginning at daybreak Saturday.

Each side accused the other of breaking an original U.N. cease-fire, but agreed at a Security Concil meeting in New York to a new one effective at 6:30 p.m. EDT Saturday.

Fighting was reported to have continued past the deadline as the cease-fire word filtered down to the fighting lines.

The end came when Israeli forces smashed Syrian positions on the high ground along the 48-mile frontier and sent Syrian infantrymen reeling back toward Damascus.

A Syrian military communique broadcast by Radio Damascus said Israeli planes flew over the city shortly after the cease-fire was to have gone into effect and claimed two were shot down. Earlier communiques claimed four Israeli jets downed during the day.

(An Israeli military spokesman in Tel Aviv said Syrian artillery shelled Israeli border settlements in the north after the 6:30 p.m. deadline and Israeli planes and troops hit back.

(He said Israel in any case did not expect the cease-fire to become effective immediately despite agreement on both sides "because Syria takes some time to get to its field commanders.")

Observers here said the Israeli push into Syria was designed primarily to cripple its armed forces and topple the Soviet-backed regime in Damascus.

Conflicting reports here made it impossible to assess the exact extent of the Israeli penetration.

Israel reported, and Syria confirmed, the capture of El Quneitra, 10 miles inside Syrian territory. The city controls the only highway pass through the mountain range between the Plain of Galilee and Damascus.

An early morning Syrian communique said Syrian forces were "fighting with fierceness and firmness and preventing the enemy from completely occupying the city."

Unofficial reports in the Israeli Sea of Galilee town of Tiberias, however, claimed Israeli tanks had pushed about 40 miles beyond El Queitra to the outskirts of Damascus. Official Israeli sources said they had no knowledge of such a penetration.

There were some suggestions here that Israeli troops might be holding back from the capital in hope that invasion panic might encourage moderate Syrians to overthrow the far-left Socialist government of President Nureddin Atassi.

Damascus Radio broadcasts also claimed Israeli jets had bombed Damascus "almost continuously" since dawn Saturday.

The Israelis said there had been only a few raids, aimed at the airport and radio station.

Long Hits Integration Guidelines

WASHINGTON — Sen. Russell B. Long, D - La., Saturday termed the Fifth Circuit Court's decision on school integration guidelines an "incredibel hipocrisy" that overturned that court's own previous decisions.

"Merely to avoid discrimination is not enough, we are now told," said Long of the 8 - 4 circuit court decision handed down last December, "despite what the constitution said last year, it now says it is necessary for local school officials to take steps to insure that all of these aspects of our educational system are fully integrated."

This interpretation, said Long, "is absurd to the point of being ridiculous. Not even the most radical decision heretofore would require that a salt - and-pepper pattern of integration must be forced upon school children in situations where children and parents of neither race ask for it or want it."

Long quoted then - Sen. Hubert Humphrey, manager of the 1964 Civil Rights Bill, as then saying, "this case makes it clear that while the constitution prohibits segregation it does not require integration."

This principle, according to Long, has been upheld repeatedly by the U.S. Supreme Court and by courts throughout the country, including the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

"In fact, in its reckless drive to bring about a racial stereotype, this court, by its own admission, actually overturned at least nine of its own previous decisions in reaching its latest decision," said Long.

A Syrian military communique broadcast by Radio Damascus said Israeli planes flew over the city shortly after the cease-fire was to have gone into effect and claimed two were shot down. Earlier communiques claimed four Israeli jets downed during the day.

(An Israeli military spokesman in Tel Aviv said Syrian artillery shelled Israeli border settlements in the north after the 6:30 p.m. deadline and Israeli planes and troops hit back.

(He said Israel in any case did not expect the cease-fire to become effective immediately despite agreement on both sides "because Syria takes some time to get to its field commanders.")

Observers here said the Israeli push into Syria was designed primarily to cripple its armed forces and topple the Soviet-backed regime in Damascus.

Conflicting reports here made it impossible to assess the exact extent of the Israeli penetration.

Israel reported, and Syria confirmed, the capture of El Quneitra, 10 miles inside Syrian territory. The city controls the only highway pass through the mountain range between the Plain of Galilee and Damascus.

An early morning Syrian communique said Syrian forces were "fighting with fierceness and firmness and preventing the enemy from completely occupying the city."

Unofficial reports in the Israeli Sea of Galilee town of Tiberias, however, claimed Israeli tanks had pushed about 40 miles beyond El Queitra to the outskirts of Damascus. Official Israeli sources said they had no knowledge of such a penetration.

There were some suggestions here that Israeli troops might be holding back from the capital in hope that invasion panic might encourage moderate Syrians to overthrow the far-left Socialist government of President Nureddin Atassi.

Damascus Radio broadcasts also claimed Israeli jets had bombed Damascus "almost continuously" since dawn Saturday.

The Israelis said there had been only a few raids, aimed at the airport and radio station.

Long Hits Integration Guidelines

WASHINGTON — Sen. Russell B. Long, D - La., Saturday termed the Fifth Circuit Court's decision on school integration guidelines an "incredibel hipocrisy" that overturned that court's own previous decisions.

"Merely to avoid discrimination is not enough, we are now told," said Long of the 8 - 4 circuit court decision handed down last December, "despite what the constitution said last year, it now says it is necessary for local school officials to take steps to insure that all of these aspects of our educational system are fully integrated."

This interpretation, said Long, "is absurd to the point of being ridiculous. Not even the most radical decision heretofore would require that a salt - and-pepper pattern of integration must be forced upon school children in situations where children and parents of neither race ask for it or want it."

Long quoted then - Sen. Hubert Humphrey, manager of the 1964 Civil Rights Bill, as then saying, "this case makes it clear that while the constitution prohibits segregation it does not require integration."

This principle, according to Long, has been upheld repeatedly by the U.S. Supreme Court and by courts throughout the country, including the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

"In fact, in its reckless drive to bring about a racial stereotype, this court, by its own admission, actually overturned at least nine of its own previous decisions in reaching its latest decision," said Long.

State Angus Association Holds Field Day Locally

A crowd of some 500 attended the annual field day Saturday of the Louisiana Angus Association held at the Highlander Angus Farm of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Davis Jr., of Monroe.

Located near Calhoun, the farm is said to boast some of the best Angus cattle in Louisiana.

Ed Horton, owner and manager of Macedon Farms, Birmingham, Ala. addressed the group concerning the improvement of Angus breeding. Horton urged the cattleman to use well - bred American cattle rather than the imported breeds.

Horton told the organization's statewide representatives that "Angus breeders were overlooking the better bred cattle in the U.S. to import poorer quality cattle just for the sake of owning imported registered Angus cattle."

Highlighting the meet was the selection of the LGA's officers for 1967 and selection of the winning 4-H and FFA teams in the Angus cattle judging contest.

Those new officers elected were:

Dr. A. L. Morrow, president, Lake Charles; Dr. H. H. Davis Jr., vice - president, Monroe, and Dr. L. H. Pease, secretary-treasurer, Lafayette.

Directors chosen for the coming year were John Woods, Joel Landon, Roy Bunklin, L. C. Lee, Rivers Nelson, T. A. Calloway, H. B. Fairchild, Mrs. Ann B. Foster, Leo Lensing and Dwight Young.

In the cattle judging, 18 teams of 4-H and FFA youths from throughout the state competed.

Selected for their ability to judge the breed quality and confirmation of the cattle on exhibition the winning teams were:

Calcasieu Parish, first; Union Parish, second; Ouachita Parish, third; Franklin Parish, fourth and East Baton Rouge Parish, fifth.

JOHNNY McFarland, of the Downsville 4-H Club accepts the "Dr. A. V. Young Trophy" from Dr. L. H. Pease, secretary of the Louisiana Angus Association, after McFarland took top honors in the individual judging competition Saturday at the LAA's field day held at the Highlander Angus Farm of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Davis, Jr., near Calhoun.

Arkansas Editor Fights Hostility

By ROBERT L. SHAW

MORRILTON, Ark. (AP)—It has been six years and six days since Gene Wirges went to the Conway County Courthouse to get the results of a city manager election for his newspaper, encountered a hostile crowd and was escorted away by state troopers.

That was one of the first inklings the young publisher had that he faced more than the usual problems of operating a politically aggressive weekly, he says, although he knew he had aroused the hostility of county officials.

Two weeks later, Wirges says, tax assessor W.O. "Bus" Hice knocked him down on a Morrilton street, and Wirges was convicted.

From there his troubles burgeoned into a raft of litigation, economic hardship and personal threats in a battle with Conway County officials. But things look brighter now.

The Arkansas Supreme Court reversed and dismissed his perjury conviction and three-year prison sentence Monday and virtually cleared up the bewildering maze of litigation.

"It's doggone strange," the 39-year-old newspaperman said from the office of the Morrilton Democrat, now ostensibly published by his wife, Betty. "I haven't quite adjusted to it yet. It's been a long time since we've been in this position and I'm very delighted and pleased. I feel our position has been vindicated."

Winges, however, has not won his battle against the Democratic political organization headed by Sheriff Marlin Hawkins. It still controls the courthouse, as it has for the past 16 years.

"I think our fight has considerable distance to go," Wriges said, "but I think we've made some headway. I should certainly hope so.

"I think at least the whole fight has awakened not only our community but people all over the state that they have been saddled with machine politics and has awakened them to a need for a change to a better government."

Wirges, who says he is a political independent, has had the support throughout much of the fight of Republican Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller, who took office in January. His detractors charge that Rockefeller supported Wriges financially to help his own campaign to establish a two-party system in Arkansas.

Wirges claims, however, that the only money Rockefeller has given him has been a partial financing of an investigation into the handling of traffic fees that led to a 1964 grand jury indictment of Wirges for slander and conspiracy against Hawkins.

"He will continue his attacks on me and our county government as long as he is a paid hired hand of the Republican party," said Hawkins, 54.

"When they cease to pay him, he will go somewhere else, for he has demonstrated his inability to make a success of a legitimate newspaper."

Hawkins believes the fact that he won his largest majority in his 26-year public career, 16 as sheriff, last year over a Republican candidates proves the voters do not fault his administration.

Wirges contends, however, that Conway County officialdom is more interested in persecuting him than investigating his charges of vote fraud, rigged elections and suspicious operations by county officials.

He estimates that he has been involved in 50 separate court cases, either as plaintiff, defendant or interested party. At one time, he said, he was involved in about 25 simultaneously.

Baptists Eye School Fund At Meeting

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Southern Baptists will take another close look this week at a continuing crisis, mostly financial, at Baptist-supported institutions of higher education.

The occasion will be the second national conference of the Baptist Education Study Task Best, a two - year in - depth study of problems facing church schools.

More than 300 top baptist leaders are expected for the conference. The most controversial issue on the agenda is the question of federal aid to Baptist colleges.

The federal aid issue, intertwined with that of separation of church and state, is listed by some educators as the main cause of a financial crisis.

They point out that church schools are unable to keep pace with institutions which accept federal grants in expansion and improvement of college programs. In some cases, officials fear loss of accreditation.

The issue affects 68 Baptist schools, mostly in the southeast and southwest, with an overall enrollment of approximately 100,000 students. The largest institution involved is Baylor University with an enrollment of 8,000.

Policy on accepting federal loans or grants is set by each of the state conventions. Most schools do not accept grants, but some take federal loans.

Golfer Found Dead At Tree

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 43-year-old golfer was found dead under an oak tree Saturday on Audubon Park Golf Course.

Police oficers attempted to revive Alfred Fayard of New Orleans after another golfer spotted his body. The coroner's office listed the death as unclassified but said Fayard apparently suffered a heart attack.

Shreveport Man Now Recovering

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A Shreveport man was reported resting comfortably in a hospital here after suffering a heart attack when he was notified that his son is among those missing in the Israeli torpedoing of a U.S. Navy ship in the Mediterranean.

Clyde Lupton collapsed and was hospitalized after being informed by the Navy that his son. James M. Lupton, was one of the casualties aboard the U.S. Liberty.

Israel said the attack on the ship earlier this week was accidental and apologized to the United States.

Cranes Hatch Two Whoopers

LAUREL, Md. (UPI) — The dwindling whooping crane population was increased Friday with the hatching of two baby whoopers at an Interior Department research station here.

The two birds bring the worlds' whooping crane flock to 52, seven of which are in captivity. Friday's hatches were from eggs taken from nests in Northern Canada last week.

Man Dies Of Injuries In Wreck

Eli Tatum, 42, of Columbia died early Saturday at the E. A. Conway Memorial Hospital in Monroe of injuries received Thursday night in a two-car crash on U. S. Highway 165 north of Columbia.

Beatrice English, 47, of Bastrop, was pronounced dead on arrival at Conway Memorial Thursday night of injuries received in the same accident.

James English, 25, and Clarence English, 12, both of Bastrop, were injured in the accident.

State police said that Tatum was the driver and sole occupant of one car, and that the second auto was driven by James English.

Father Charged With Murder

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A Jackson man was charged Saturday with murder in the death of his 21-year-old son, sheriff's officers said.

Hinds County Deputy Tom Shelton said Harold Mitchell, 48, was charged with shooting his son, Walter J. Mitchell. The younger Mitchell was shot just before midnight Friday and died early Saturday in a Jackson hospital.

Ouachita Rejects Sales Tax, 10,520 To 7,194

By MILO DAKIN
World Staff Writer

Ouachita Parish voters solidly rejected the one-cent Fifth District Sales Tax Saturday, leading all 14 parishes in defeating the proposal and throwing local municipal police and fire departments into a financial dilemma.

Complete but unofficial returns showed the tax failed with 7,194 votes for it and 10,520 against.

Rejection of the proposal designed primarily as a means to increase salaries of teachers, school board, municipal and police jury employes was on a popular vote basis.

Only six precincts out of 50 in Ouachita Parish approved the one-cent proposal.

Defeat of the tax was a bitter pill for school, municipal and police jury officials in Ouachita Parish. The City of Monroe has been fighting for the tax almost one year in order to implement salary increases for policemen and firemen, as well as other city employes.

But parish voters left no doubts Saturday that a majority did not favor a sales tax as a means for public employes salaries.

The five precincts that carried the tax were precincts 2 and 5 in Ward 3 and precincts one, 7 and 12 in Ward 10.

Early returns on the tax vote put it behind by a 3-1 margin and it never led in the balloting as return from the 50 precincts came in to the parish courthouse. The first box in was Ward 5, precinct 4, and the tax lost 148 to 75.

The strongest vote against the tax in Ouachita Parish showed in Ward 5, precinct 13 where the vote was 483 against and 112 for.

The strongest support for the proposal was in Ward 10, precinct one with a 467-373 vote.

As had been expected the voter turnout was comparatively light with approximately 47 per cent of eligible voters balloting. The district wide average was about 40 per cent.

The 5th District Sales Tax was originated as a legislative proposal in mid-May, 1966 by Rep, Lantz Womack, Franklin Parish. It passed the legislature and was signed by Gov. John McKeithen but errors in the final act forced school officials to take the measure back to Baton Rouge in the December special session. There Rep. David Patten, Catahoula Parish, had it introduced again.

There was some internal friction between municipal, police jury and school officials over receipts from the tax proposal, but these were apparently ironed out early this year and a concentrated effort was made to pass the measure.

Ouachita Parish was the hub of the tax since more than half of the total revenues would be collected within the parish, primarily in Monroe. However, defeat of the tax in Ouachita Parish would not necessarily have meant defeat since the vote was district wide.

But rural voters also flatly rejected the one - cent proposition, leaving public officials with no where to turn for extra revenues except the legislature.

Gov. John McKeithen had supported the tax when it was in the Legislature but offered no verbal support after it became a local campaign. He had told local governing officials that school teachers will not be able to turn to Baton Rouge for any further salary increases.

Had this tax been approved, every teacher in the district with a degree would have received a minimum $500 annual raise.

Parish and city voters have shown some hesitance to taxes prior to the rejection Saturday. Parish and City school maintenance taxes that usually pass with margins that run as high as 40 - 1, barely passed this year by margins of less than 2 - 1.

Based on this showing in early May, officials noted an awareness that a great sales effort would have to be made in order to pass a sales tax.

A previous attempt to pass a sales tax in Monroe failed soon after Howard assumed office as as mayor.

Monroe Police Chief James C. Kelly Jr., is presently running a staff about 75 per cent complete and several officers have said they were waiting for Saturday's returns before making their decisions.

Defeat of the one-cent tax means that starting salaries for Monroe policemen will remain at $340 per month and at $325 in West Monroe.

Both cities pay beginning firemen $300 per month.

A beginning salary of $400 per month was seen if the tax had passed.

First Time In 107 Years

Presbyterians Dilute Reapportioning Move

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — A move to reapportion the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. for the first time in 107 years was watered down Saturday as the denomination's general assembly, heading off immediate changes, voted to call for a one-year study.

The assembly also directed the Synod of Mississippi to make certain that tests given to ministers seeking admission from other Presbyteries do not discredit the minister's vows and that congregations not be deprived of their right to call a pastor of their own choice.

In effect, the assembly also told the central Mississippi Presbytery to elect commissioners to the General Assembly without regard to whether they represent divergent opinions.

"While dissent is recognized as a right, it does not justify a refusal to support the assembly's causes and programs," the assembly told the Synod of Mississippi.

The synod was told to advise the 1968 assembly of the steps taken to implement the directive, and a special committee which looked into the Mississippi matter was told to work with the synod and to report back in 1968.

"The Presbyterians in the Synod of Mississippi are not different from any other presbyterians," said the Rev. Charles K. King, Houston, Tex., the committee chairman. "There are many as fine elders and leaders as any to be found in other sections of the church."

Earlier Saturday, the assembly overwhelmingly passed a 1965 directive that all member presbyteries admit churches to membership without regard to racc.

The action sustained the Alabama Synod's order that the Tuscaloosa, Ala., Presbytery admit three Negro churches. The synod directive was appealed to the general assembly.

Another denomination, the Reformed Church in America, is meeting here and voted Saturday to proceed "as rapidly as possible" toward a merger with the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. The merger question will be considered by the Presbyterian Assembly Monday.

Voters Reject Sales Tax In District

creases we had pledged if the tax passed.

Bobby C. Wilson, assistant principal of Riser School and tax chairman for the district's teachers, was looking ahead to another move to boost school pay though he did not elaborate. "Something has to be done," he said, reached at Riser. "We will have another plan to present to our people in the very near future."

At the same time, he expressed "deep appreciation to each and every citizen who voted Saturday for the welfare of our teachers and children, and special appreciation to all the elected officials and news media in the area — most particularly to the Morning World and News-Star in Monroe for their work on behalf of the welfare of our children."

Taliaferro saw no immediate prospect for a new avenue to raises, stressing, "Now, I am looking to the Legislature for help.

"I think they have got us into this position by being slow in implementing raises approved in 1964 and, secondly, in passing legislation allowing parish-by-parish sales taxes."

Since the Legislature, three years ago, okayed parish sales taxes, 30 school systems in the state have passed them and are benefiting from them.

Reached at the Ouachita Courthouse where parish returns flooded Saturday night, Monroe City School Supt. Van D. Odom stated "sincere disappointment" at the outcome, noting, "We had planned to use this as the means to raise the salaries of our teachers and other school workers."

He saw no other immediate prospect for securing increases.

Passage of the tax, officials reminded, would have meant mmimum $500 pay raises for teachers in the district, ranging up to more than $600 in Monroe and Ouachita Parish, as well as across - the - board five per cent hikes for other school employes.

Also wrapped up in the package, approved at the special Legislature last fall, were raises for city and parish workers. In Monroe and West Monroe, the figure would have been from $25 to $40 per month, together with the elevation of police and fi department base pay to $400 p month.

The defeat represented the first action on the concept of district-wide sales taxes. It was expected to leave in doubt preliminary plans in the Eighth District to attempt passage of a similar levy.

The sales tax district governing body, made up of the Fifth District's 15 school board presidents, will meet in Monroe next Wednesday to promulgate and make official the Saturday election total.

Investigation Of Stabbing Is Reported

West Monroe police Saturday were investigating the stabbing of a West Monroe man at 113 Cherry St.

Officers said Louis Champion 502 Phillips St., was admitted to Glenwood Memorial Hospital with a stab wound in his back.

Hospital officials said his condition was not believed to be critical.

Charged with aggravated and simple battery in connection with the incident was Gladies Robinson, 24, 113 Cherry St.

Both Champion and Robinson are Negroes.

In Monroe, officers arrested John Henry Williams, 41, 309 N. 11th St. on six counts of theft by check.

Officers said Williams was arrested in connection with the forging of checks on the Ussery Lumber Company account at a local bank.

Officers said Prentis L. Jackson, Rt. 1, Box 146, Chatham, was discovered missing from the work group Friday afternoon.

Officers said Jackson was serving a sentence for driving while intoxicated and reckless driving.

In other action Roy T. Crumitz, 25, 802 Coleman St., West Monroe, was charged by officers with simple battery and disturbing the peace.

Gilbert Boy Hit By Auto; Leg Broken

GILBERT (Special) — Whitfield Arnold Jr., three-and-one-half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Whitfield Arnold Sr. of Gilbert suffered a broken leg after being hit by a car here Saturday afternoon.

According to Gilbert Marshal J.D. Jones, the accident occured about 3 p.m. on La. 15 inside the Gilbert city limits. The boy started across the street and ran in front of a northbound car driven by William Thomassie, 39, of Harvey, the marshal said.

The boy was taken to Rogers Clinic in Winnsboro, and then to St. Francis in Monroe by his father, where he was listed in satisfactory condition.

No charges have been filed, according to Jones.

War Sends Tremors Through Businessmen

By JAC KLEFLER

NEW YORK (AP) — War in the Middle East sent tremors through the business and financial world this past week.

First to be affected were the stock markets, then airlines and shipping and the oil industry.

Prices tumbled Monday on stock exchanges in New York, London, Paris, Tokyo, Montreal and Toronto after hostilities erupted between Israel and the Arab nations.

The New York Stock Exchange was rocked by one of its most severe losses in early trading and then came back somewhat.

In an effort to reassure panicky investors, stock analysts pointed out the market usually reacts violently, but only momentarily, to crises and calamities.

This proved true. On Tuesday and Wednesday the market more than recovered its Monday loss.

Investors were encouraged by reports of Israeli victories which, they felt, lessened the chances of United States involvement.

Brokers said most of the early selling was by small investors while the big institutions stood pat and then moved in to pick up bargains.

The oil industry took the hardest blows from the hostilities which engulfed its most productive area.

Production was closed down in Iraq, Libya, Saudi Arabia and the Arabian Gulf sheikdoms, in some instances in retaliation for alleged United States and British support of Israel and in others because of local disorders.

This shut off output of about seven million barrels of oil daily. Egypt closed the Suez Canal, through which most of the oil flows to Europe.

There was little likelihood that the war would cause an oil shortage in the United States because domestic production, along with imports from sources other than the Middle East, would be sufficient.

However, a prolonged conflict could seriously affect Western Europe, Japan, Australia and New Zealand.

The Middle East furnishes roughly one-third of the oil supply. Western Europe imports more than 80 per cent of its needs of nine million barrels daily from the Middle East and North Africa.

Association Picks Slate Of Officers

The Fifth District Pharmaceutical Association Saturday announced that they had elected officers for the 1967 - 68 year.

Electing the officers at a meeting following the organization's recent annual Grant-Collens Lecture, Thursday, the group elected Neal McEachern, of Delhi, president, Bobby Crouch, of Oak Grove, vice-president and Mrs. Brenda Geiger, of Monroe, secretary-treasurer.

Elected to serve on the group's board of directors were Tommy "Doc" Murphy, Truman Potts, Wirt Rogers, Dr. Dale Cronk and Dr. Ben Cooper.

Louisiana Attorney General, Jack P. F. Gremillion was the featured speaker at the Grant-Collens Lecture, honoring the late Fred Grant and John Collens, past president of the Louisiana State Pharmaceutical Association.

'Male' Ostrich, Zoo Lay Eggs

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Zoo officials learned something new when one of three ostriches at the St. Louis Zoo laid an egg. They had thought all their ostriches were males.

A zoo spokesman said of the now recognized female ostrich, "she had black plumage when she arrived here, and that usually indicates a male. It's most unusual."

Ouachita Rejects Sales Tax, 10,520 To 7,194

By MILO DAKIN
World Staff Writer

Ouachita Parish voters solidly rejected the one-cent Fifth District Sales Tax Saturday, leading all 14 parishes in defeating the proposal and throwing local municipal police and fire departments into a financial dilemma.

Complete but unofficial returns showed the tax failed with 7,194 votes for it and 10,520 against.

Rejection of the proposal designed primarily as a means to increase salaries of teachers, school board, municipal and police jury employes was on a popular vote basis.

Only six precincts out of 50 in Ouachita Parish approved the one-cent proposal.

Defeat of the tax was a bitter pill for school, municipal and police jury officials in Ouachita Parish. The City of Monroe has been fighting for the tax almost one year in order to implement salary increases for policemen and firemen, as well as other city employes.

But parish voters left no doubts Saturday that a majority did not favor a sales tax as a means for public employes salaries.

The five precincts that carried the tax were precincts 2 and 5 in Ward 3 and precincts one, 7 and 12 in Ward 10.

Early returns on the tax vote put it behind by a 3-1 margin and it never led in the balloting as return from the 50 precincts came in to the parish courthouse. The first box in was Ward 5, precinct 4, and the tax lost 148 to 75.

The strongest vote against the tax in Ouachita Parish showed in Ward 5, precinct 13 where the vote was 483 against and 112 for.

The strongest support for the proposal was in Ward 10, precinct one with a 467-373 vote.

As had been expected the voter turnout was comparatively light with approximately 47 per cent of eligible voters balloting. The district wide average was about 40 per cent.

The 5th District Sales Tax was originated as a legislative proposal in mid-May, 1966 by Rep, Lantz Womack, Franklin Parish. It passed the legislature and was signed by Gov. John McKeithen but errors in the final act forced school officials to take the measure back to Baton Rouge in the December special session. There Rep. David Patten, Catahoula Parish, had it introduced again.

There was some internal friction between municipal, police jury and school officials over receipts from the tax proposal, but these were apparently ironed out early this year and a concentrated effort was made to pass the measure.

Ouachita Parish was the hub of the tax since more than half of the total revenues would be collected within the parish, primarily in Monroe. However, defeat of the tax in Ouachita Parish would not necessarily have meant defeat since the vote was district wide.

But rural voters also flatly rejected the one - cent proposition, leaving public officials with no where to turn for extra revenues except the legislature.

Gov. John McKeithen had supported the tax when it was in the Legislature but offered no verbal support after it became a local campaign. He had told local governing officials that school teachers will not be able to turn to Baton Rouge for any further salary increases.

Had this tax been approved, every teacher in the district with a degree would have received a minimum $500 annual raise.

Parish and city voters have shown some hesitance to taxes prior to the rejection Saturday. Parish and City school maintenance taxes that usually pass with margins that run as high as 40 - 1, barely passed this year by margins of less than 2 - 1.

Based on this showing in early May, officials noted an awareness that a great sales effort would have to be made in order to pass a sales tax.

A previous attempt to pass a sales tax in Monroe failed soon after Howard assumed office as as mayor.

Monroe Police Chief James C. Kelly Jr., is presently running a staff about 75 per cent complete and several officers have said they were waiting for Saturday's returns before making their decisions.

Defeat of the one-cent tax means that starting salaries for Monroe policemen will remain at $340 per month and at $325 in West Monroe.

Both cities pay beginning firemen $300 per month.

A beginning salary of $400 per month was seen if the tax had passed.

First Time In 107 Years

Presbyterians Dilute Reapportioning Move

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — A move to reapportion the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. for the first time in 107 years was watered down Saturday as the denomination's general assembly, heading off immediate changes, voted to call for a one-year study.

The assembly also directed the Synod of Mississippi to make certain that tests given to ministers seeking admission from other Presbyteries do not discredit the minister's vows and that congregations not be deprived of their right to call a pastor of their own choice.

In effect, the assembly also told the central Mississippi Presbytery to elect commissioners to the General Assembly without regard to whether they represent divergent opinions.

"While dissent is recognized as a right, it does not justify a refusal to support the assembly's causes and programs," the assembly told the Synod of Mississippi.

The synod was told to advise the 1968 assembly of the steps taken to implement the directive, and a special committee which looked into the Mississippi matter was told to work with the synod and to report back in 1968.

"The Presbyterians in the Synod of Mississippi are not different from any other presbyterians," said the Rev. Charles K. King, Houston, Tex., the committee chairman. "There are many as fine elders and leaders as any to be found in other sections of the church."

Earlier Saturday, the assembly overwhelmingly passed a 1965 directive that all member presbyteries admit churches to membership without regard to race.

The action sustained the Alabama Synod's order that the Tuscaloosa, Ala., Presbytery admit three Negro churches. The synod directive was appealed to the general assembly.

Another denomination, the Reformed Church in America, is meeting here and voted Saturday to proceed "as rapidly as possible" toward a merger with the Presbyterian Church in the U.S. The merger question will be considered by the Presbyterian Assembly Monday.

Charged with aggravated and simple battery in connection with the incident was Gladies Robinson, 24, 113 Cherry St.

According to officers Champion would be charged with trespassing, aggravated battery and simple battery.

Both Champion and Robinson are Negroes.

In Monroe, officers arrested John Henry Williams, 41, 309 N. 11th St. on six counts of theft by check.

Officers said Williams was arrested in connection with the forging of checks on the Ussery Lumber Company account at a local bank.

Officers said Prentis L. Jackson, Rt. 1, Box 146, Chatham, was discovered missing from the work group Friday afternoon.

Officers said Jackson was serving a sentence for driving while intoxicated and reckless driving.

In other action Roy T. Crumitz, 25, 802 Coleman St., West Monroe, was charged by officers with simple battery and disturbing the peace.

Gilbert Boy Hit By Auto; Leg Broken

GILBERT (Special) — Whitfield Arnold Jr., three-and-one-half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Whitfield Arnold Sr. of Gilbert suffered a broken leg after being hit by a car here Saturday afternoon.

According to Gilbert Marshal J.D. Jones, the accident occured about 3 p.m. on La. 15 inside the Gilbert city limits. The boy started across the street and ran in front of a northbound car driven by William Thomassie, 39, of Harvey, the marshal said.

The boy was taken to Rogers Clinic in Winnsboro, and then to St. Francis in Monroe by his father, where he was listed in satisfactory condition.

No charges have been filed, according to Jones.

Association Picks Slate Of Officers

The Fifth District Pharmaceutical Association Saturday announced that they had elected officers for the 1967 - 68 year.

Electing the officers at a meeting following the organization's recent annual Grant-Collens Lecture, Thursday, the group elected Neal McEaucharn, of Delhi, president, Bobby Crouch, of Oak Grove, vice-president and Mrs. Brenda Geiger, of Monroe, secretary-treasurer.

Elected to serve on the group's board of directors were Tommy "Doc" Murphy, Truman Potts, Wirt Rogers, Dr. Dale Cronk and Dr. Ben Cooper.

Louisiana Attorney General, Jack P. F. Gremillion was the featured speaker at the Grant-Collens Lecture, honoring the late Fred Grant and John Collens, past president of the Louisiana State Pharmaceutical Association.

'Male' Ostrich. Zoo Lay Eggs

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Zoo officials learned something new when one of three ostriches at the St. Louis zoo laid an egg. They had thought all their ostriches were males.

A zoo spokesman said of the now recognized female ostrich, "she had black plumage when she arrived here, and that usually indicates a male. It's most unusual."

Beirut Under Army Curfew Indefinitely

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese army slapped an indefinite curfew on Beirut Saturday after a mob of 20,000 pro-Nasser demonstrators tried to march on the American and British Embassies.

Earlier, mobs had set fire to a Coca-Cola bottling plant, smashed windows of three grocery stores owned by a British chain, and set fire to an American auto showroom in the city center.

These demonstrations ostensibly had as their purpose a call for President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt to resume his post, which he has done.

Until the curfew was ordered, shortly after noon, demonstrators chanting "Nasser, Nasser!" surged through the streets with portraits of the Egyptian leader.

Last week, despite a partial curfew, demonstrators dynamited six apartment blocks in scattered areas of the city.

No injuries were reported then or Saturday. News of the incidents was kept under wraps, and no official would comment on them.

At midday crowds gathered in the capital's amusement section and started surging down the city's coastal boulevard toward the British and American Embassies.

Several of the demonstrators stripped sidewalk sunshades and carried the poles as weapons. Others knocked down a wooden telegraph pole and took it along as a battering ram.

Riot police tried to block their path but were brushed aside. Then helmeted troops moved in and turned back the tide only a few hundred yards from the embassies.

Wall Posters Tell Of Fight

TOKYO (AP) — Wall posters in Peking said bloody skirmishes between Maoists and anti-Maoists took place in Chungking last Wednesday, resulting in more than 300 persons killed and scores injured, a Japanese report from Peking said Saturday.

Yomiuri's Peking-based correspondent said the report was contained in wall posters in the form of a letter appealing for help in suppressing Mao Tse-tung's enemies. The letter was addressed to Premier Chou En-lai, Mao's wife Chiang Ching, purge chief Chen Po-ta and the purge committee, Yomiuri added.

The report said anti-Maoists totaling about 20,000 encircled Mao's supporters and assaulted them with swords, stones, iron rods and dynamite.

Chungking was China's World War II capital.

BETHLEHEM, Jordan (UPI) —It was strictly forbidden and not very safe but Israeli families piled into their cars and drove up the weed-grown road from Jerusalem for their first look in 19 years at this Holy City in the occupied west bank of the Jordan River.

The ride from Jerusalem takes an hour. The growth of two decades and the ruts of tank tracks two days old make it bad for automobiles.

But it was a special kind of joyride.

Israel Offers Damage Pay For Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel formally offered Saturday to pay compensation for the loss of American lives and damage in the attack on the U.S. electronics ship Liberty.

Ambassador Avraham Harman called at the State Department with an Israeli note containing the offer. There has been no official U.S. estimate yet of the damage sustained.

The casualty toll from the Liberty has been estimated at 33 dead and 75 wounded from Thursday's attack by Israeli jet planes and torpedo boats.

The Israeli note voiced "deep regret for the tragic accident."

"The government of Israel is prepared to make amends for the tragic loss of life and material damages,' the note said.

The Israeli government also voiced again "its deep condolences to the government of the United States and its sympathy to all the bereaved families."

State Department officials said Harman was received by Undersecretaries Eugene Rostow and Nicholas Katzenbach. Secretary Dean Rusk was temporarily away on a speaking trip.

Meanwhile the aircraft carrier USS America reported the Liberty heading for Crete, where a search will be made for 24 crewmen missing and believed trapped in flooded holds of the ship.

Nine bodies and the wounded were transferred to the America and the cruiser Little Rock Friday afternoon.

"We didn't even have a chance to load our guns", said Petty Officer Virgil L. Brownfield, 19, of Palo, Iowa, describing the sudden, 15-minute attack which took place while the Liberty stood off Sinai. "It was incredible."

The Navy said the ship was near the combat zone during the brief war between Israel and Egypt, to help protect Americans in the area.

Catahoula Escapee Still Being Sought

HARRISONBURG (Special)—Officials are continuing a search for Kerry Lee Chapman, 26, of Texas City, Tex., who broke out of the Catahoula Parish Jail here this week, according to the sheriff's department.

Chapman was being held in the parish jail on a charge of theft of an outboard motor in Jonesville, officials said. He was arrested in Alexandria on June 1 and placed in the local jail under $500 bond. He escaped last Sunday night, the sheriff's department reported.

Officials said that he was being kept in a cell, seldom used because of its location and an opening which had been made near the roof during remodeling. The hinged opening of the bars had been secured by means of a chain and locks, but Chapman obtained a piece of pipe and broke the chains, the sheriff's department said. It was not known where he obtained the pipe.

After gaining access to the roof, Chapman made his way to an oak tree on the north side of the court house and climbed down it to the ground, it was reported.

Anti-U.S. Mobs

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI)—Mobs of Arab youth burned a Coca-Cola plant, wrecked other American businesses and damagd an American school Saturday in anti-Western rampages through downtown Beirut that were finally stopped by troops in armored cars.

One mob was stopped in a fashionable shopping district only when troops fired over the rioters' heads.

A curfew was ordered at 1:30 p.m. and troops and police roamed the streets enforcing it.

Even hamburger stands and American-style snack bars were attacked and wrecked, although they were owned by Lebanese.

Ford Motor Co. showrooms were smashed. A British bank was attacked and the windows of the American Community School were shattered. The school was empty. Its 143 students had been evacuated from Beirut along with 3,000 other Americans.

Navy Secretary Succeeds Cyrus Vance In Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson announced Saturday the resignation of Cyrus R. Vance as deputy secretary of defense and selection of Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze as his successor.

This set in motion two other high level changes in the Defense Department:

The new secretary of the Navy will be John T. McNaughton, now assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs. Into McNaughton's present job will go the Defense Department's general counsel, Paul C. Warnke.

Vance has been bothered by back trouble, and the White House said his resignation was for personal reasons. There was no intimation that any policy shifts dictated the shifting of the assignments resulting from his resignation, which will be effective June 30.

Vance has been in the Pentagon for more than six years and Johnson said it was with the deepest reluctance and regret that he accepted the deputy secretary's decision to give up his post.

"For the past 6½ years, in its hours of maximum danger, you have served our nation with maximum devotion," the President said in a letter. "You can be supremely proud of your crucial role in bringing our nation's military forces to their present state of unprecedented strength and readiness. Your sound judgment, wise counsel, and manifold abilities will be most sorely missed."

Nitze is 60 and has been secretary of the navy for 3½ years. After he was graduated with honors from Harvard in 1928, he was with the New York investment bankers, Dillon, Reed & Co. until 1941.

Since then he has been in federal government off and on with an eight-year gap while he served as president of the Foreign Service Educational Foundation in Washington, from 1953 to 1961. Before taking this post, he put in seven years with the State Department and rose to the post of director of its policy planning staff.

In 1961, he became assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, and then in November 1963, the 57th secretary of the navy.

The Nitze family lives in Washington but maintains a legal residence at Bel Alton, Md.

The man Johnson intends to nominate as the 58th secretary, McNaughton, was a naval officer during World War II, reaching the rank of lieutenant. He commanded a Navy gun crew on a merchant ship in the Caribbean and North Atlantic and then served on a destroyer escort in the Pacific. McNaughton is 46 and a native of Bicknell, Ind.

A Harvard law school graduate of 1948, he embarked on a varied career-Rhodes scholar, government attorney, columnist and editor for the Pekin, Ill., Daily Times, and a law professor at Harvard. He put in a year as deputy assistant secretary of defense for arms control before becoming general counsel of the Defense Department on July 1, 1962. Two years later he shifted to the post he now holds.

Warnke has been general counsel at the Pentagon since Oct. 3, 1966. Before that he practiced law in Washington. He was born in Webster, Mass., 47 years ago, was graduated from Yale in 1941, and was a Coast Guard officer in the Atlantic and Pacific during the second World War.

"PASSMAN'S PLEASURE IS PLEASING YOU"

Navy Secretary Succeeds Cyrus Vance In Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson announced Saturday the resignation of Cyrus R. Vance as deputy secretary of defense and selection of Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze as his successor.

This set in motion two other high level changes in the Defense Department.

The new secretary of the Navy will be John T. McNaughton, now assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs. Into McNaughton's present job will go the Defense Department's general counsel, Paul C. Warnke.

Vance has been bothered by back trouble, and the White House said his resignation was for personal reasons. There was no intimation that any policy shifts dictated the shifting of the assignments resulting from his resignation, which will be effective June 30.

Vance has been in the Pentagon for more than six years and Johnson said it was with the deepest reluctance and regret that he accepted the deputy secretary's decision to give up his post.

"For the past 6½ years, in its hours of maximum danger, you have served our nation with maximum devotion," the President said in a letter. "You can be supremely proud of your crucial role in bringing our nation's military forces to their present state of unprecedented strength and readiness. Your sound judgment, wise counsel, and manifold abilities will be most sorely missed."

Nitze is 60 and has been secretary of the navy for 3½ years. After he was graduated with honors from Harvard in 1928, he was with the New York investment bankers, Dillon, Reed & Co. until 1941.

Since then he has been in federal government off and on with an eight-year gap while he served as president of the Foreign Service Educational Foundation in Washington, from 1953 to 1961. Before taking this post, he put in seven years with the State Department and rose to the post of director of its policy planning staff.

In 1961, he became assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, and then in November 1963, the 57th secretary of the navy.

The Nitze family lives in Washington but maintains a legal residence at Bel Alton, Md.

The man Johnson intends to nominate as the 58th secretary, McNaughton, was a naval officer during World War II, reaching the rank of lieutenant. He commanded a Navy gun crew on a merchant ship in the Caribbean and North Atlantic and then served on a destroyer escort in the Pacific. McNaughton is 46 and a native of Bicknell, Ind.

A Harvard law school graduate of 1948, he embarked on a varied career-Rhodes scholar, government attorney, columnist and editor for the Pekin, Ill., Daily Times, and a law professor at Harvard. He put in a year as deputy assistant secretary of defense for arms control before becoming general counsel of the Defense Department on July 1, 1962. Two years later he shifted to the post he now holds.

Warnke has been general counsel at the Pentagon since Oct. 3, 1966. Before that he practiced law in Washington. He was born in Webster, Mass., 47 years ago, was graduated from Yale in 1941, and was a Coast Guard officer in the Atlantic and Pacific during the second World War.

Portrayer Of American, Spencer Tracy, Dies

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Spencer Tracy, 67, the craggy-faced, two-time Academy Award winner who typified the America character in starring films from 1930 to 1967, died Saturday.

He suffered a massive heart attack at 6 a.m. His housekeeper summoned the family physician, Dr. Mitchell Covel, but Tracy died before his arrival.

Tracy was alone, except for the housekeeper, in the West Hollywood home he rented from director George Cukor. The actor had a long-time heart ailment, but had been feeling well in recent days, a spokesman said.

The doctor arrived with Tracy's brother, Carroll, shortly after the actor's death. Next to arrive were Tracy's estranged wife, Louise, and their children, John, 43, and Louise, 35. Cukor came next with actress Katherin Hepburn Tracy's long-time friend, and Ross Evans, his agent.

Tracy had suffered a series of ailments since he was stricken with a lung congestion in July, 1963, while preparing for a picture with Miss Hepburn.

Three weeks ago Tracy finished his last film, "Guess Who's Coming for Dinner," his eighth costarring vehicle with Miss Hepburn. The actor played a vigorous scene in which he contended with a drive-in attendant.

Said Director Stanley Kramer afterward: "He did the scene with all his usual strength. It was a sentimental moment, when everyone realized that Spencer Tracy had played his last scene in his last movie. I was bawling, and so was Spence."

At the postproduction party, Miss Hepburn refused to admit that it was Tracy's last film.

"He says he's quitting after every movie," she said.

Kramer had husbanded the actor's strength during the filming of "Guess Who's Coming for Dinner," directing him only a few hours a day.

"But three or four hours of Tracy is better than a full day with most actors," the director added.

The death of Tracy erases from the Hollywood scene a performer whom most other actors considered the best in American film history. His career provided a panorama of indelible portrayals:

The light-hearted Portuguese fisherman of "Captains Courageous," which won him the first Oscar in 1937; the stern, but human, Catholic priest who ran "Boys Town," which brought Oscar No. 2 in 1938; the brawling companion of Clark Gable in "Test Pilot" and "Boom Town"; the explorer in "Stanley and Livingston"; and the inventor in "Edison-the Man".

The touching romancer of Miss Hepburn in "Adam's Rib," "Pat and Mike" and "The Desk Set"; the harried parent in "Father of the Bride" and "Father's Little Dividend"; the aging politico in "The Last Hurrah"; and the Darrow-like orator in "Inherit the Wind."

There seemed to be nothing Tracy could not do on the screen.

But basically he portrayed the American spirit—a rugged man with a basic core of goodness.

Tracy was a powerfully built man of slightly under six feet with a handsome Irish face, which often lighted up in a sly grin. As he aged, his face became craggy, but the handsomeness remained.

Tracy was born April 5, 1900, in Milwaukee, Wis., where he grew up with his latest costar Pat O'Brien. After two years at Ripon College in Wisconsin, Tracy decided to enter the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York. His roommate was O'Brien, and the struggling young actors often dined on pretzels and rice.

Tracy made his Broadway debut in 1922 as a mechanical monster in "R.U.R." His stage career continued in New York and on the road until he had his first starring role in "Yellow" in 1926. After that he rarely appeared in less than starring roles.

His portrayal of killer Mears in "The Last Mile" brought Hollywood offers, and he appeared as another convict in "Up the River" for Fox in 1930. He remained under contract for three years of mediocre films, then moved to MGM where his greatness was realized. Then came the procession of screen classics.

SPENCER TRACY
. . . Heart Attack Fatal

In 1923 Tracy married Louise Treadwell, an actress he had met in a stock company in White Pines, N.Y. The following year their son John was born. The boy was deaf from birth, and friends theorized that this caused Tracy's moodiness in later years.

He was a strangely ambivalent man in his dealings with fellow workers, changing moods quickly from moments of outgoing Irish charm to black moods when he was unapproachable. Miss Hepburn seemed to be the only person who could handle him, and set workers marveled at the ease with which she cajoled him into performing her will.

The friendship of Tracy and Miss Hepburn extended off the screen as well. They were constant companions during the actor's later years when he was estranged from his wife.

Catahoula Farmers Protest Loose Stock

HARRISONBURG (Special)—A spokesman for the soybean and cotton farmers of Ward 4, 5 and 6 of Catahoula Parish has announced that no new plans have been formulated in their fight for a stock law within the three-ward area.

The farmers lost their bid before the Catahoula Parish Police Jury Monday in seeking action to make it mandatory for cattlemen to fence in their cattle.

Reminiscent of the pioneer days, the open range controversy came to a "boiling point" in the courtroom of the parish courthouse here. The regular meeting place of the police jury was too small to accomodate the large crowd of both cattlemen and farmers.

C. M. Tolbert of Ward 6 presented a petition with 450 signatures in favor of a three-ward stock law before the jury. Mike McMillin, also of Ward 6, and Police Juror Colvin Manning, Ward 6, led the opposition.

Following heated arguments, the police jury voted unanimously against the petition which sought mandatory fencing by the livestock growers in the area.

In presenting the petitition, Tolbert told the jury and the some 75 persons assembled there, that he felt that 85 per cent of the persons in the three wards favored fencing to keep livestock from roaming freely.

"We feel that now is the time for a stock law," he said. "Twenty-five years ago, people in these parts depended entirely on stock for a livelihood. This is now past. The old time free grazing rights benefit only a chosen few. The law whould be for the protection of the majority," he added.

"Why should the farmers, who have to pay a high lease on their land, in turn have to pay another big sum to have it fenced?" Tolbert asked. "Why shouldn't the cattle owners not buy or lease land for their animals and fence them in instead of farmers fencing them out?"

Tolbert said that his statements were ". . . "the voice of my neighbors for a cause I think is just."

Thousands of acres in Catahoula Parish have either been purchased by large corporations or leased by individuals recently for planting soybeans, where acres of gums, willows, oaks and cotton wood trees once stood.

Manning led the questioning for the jurors and also acted as moderator for the debate.

McMillian, speaking against the petition and in favor of the cattlemen, said, "I admit these boys have a problem . . . My daddy made his living and raised his family fighting the backwater in this area and I came up in the saddle behind him. We've raised a many a cow in these woods," he added.

Manning entered the discussion on the side of the cattlemen and told the farmers to see if they could get any help through their state representative. He then made a resolution that the police jury let the law stand as it is, adding that to pass the issue would be depriving some families of milk and bread money.

Assistant District Attorney R. P. Boyd Jr. told the jury that it could enact an ordinance pertaining to policing of livestock in any ward or any part of a ward, but that it could not be forced to pass such measures.

Boyd said another state law provides that an election could be called to determine the issue, but it would have to be presented as a ward-wide measure.

In other action, the police jury adopted a resolution requesting that the second reach of the diversion canal between Catahoula Lake and Black River be completed prior to completion of the second reach of the levee being constructed to protect the area between Larto and Jonesville in order that drainage would not be affected in that area.

Wedon T. Smith made a report to the jury to the present status of the parish hospital plans. He reported that Hill-Burton representatives have assured him that the parish will be given priority to consideration of its plans as projects lose funds if plans are not approved by July 1. Smith said that the hospital board hopes to award the building contract in August or September.

Peach Festival Has Added New Features

RUSTON (Special) — Several new features have been added to this years Louisiana Peach Festival, slated June 2 through June 25. These new events are added to the long list of regular annual events.

Railroad Park will be a busy place this year, for in addition to the second annual Sidewalk Art Exhibit on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, there will be military displays from Fort Polk and Barksdale Air Force Base. Providing music for the festive atmosphere will be a caliope furnished by E. R. McDonald, owner of Dutch Gardens in Newellton. These attractions will be held on each of the three days.

Another new feature, opening Thursday morning and continuing throughout the festival, will be a Kiddie Carnival, featuring merry-go-rounds, ferris wheels, bumper cars and horses. It will be held at the City Parking Lot near the Post Office.

Another new feature, planned for the equestrian enthusiasts of the area, is a Rodeo Playday and Barbeque, to be held Friday at 4:30 p.m. at the Silver Spur Arena on the Farmerville Highway. Mrs. Lucille Carroll is chairman of this event.

The Peach Classic Swim meet, AAU sanctioned, has been expanded to extend for three days this year.

Annual events of the Festival have been set, including:

Peach Cookery Contest: Thursday, 10 a.m., Holiday Inn; Mrs. Edith Bise, Chairman.

Peach Growers Prize Peach Contest, 10 a.m. Thursday; F. O. LeVasseur, chairman.

Queen Dixie Gem Pagent, 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Howard Auditorium, Louisiana Tech.

Merchants Sidewalk Sale, downtown, 8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m., Friday; Jim Davis, Chairman.

Peach Festival Awards Luncheon, 12 noon, Friday, Student Center, Louisiana Tech; Dr. P. B. Mosely, Chairman.

Peach Festival Parade, downtown, Friday, 3 p.m., Frank Jerome, chairman.

Peach Orchard Tours, time to be announced, F. O. Le Vasseur, chairman.

Peach Classic Golf Tournament, tee-off time 8 a.m. Saturday and Sunday at Ruston Country Club; R. P. Hand, Chairman.

Budget Cut Foreseen By Rep. Passman

The refusal Wednesday by the U. S. House of Representatives to increase the Treasury Department's borrowing authority by the $29 billion requested by the Johnson Administration should have the effect of "forcing some substantial Great Society budget cutting," according to Fifth District U. S. Congressman Otto E. Passman, in a statement made Saturday.

Passman also said, "This action by the House means that the Johnson Administration will have to recognize some of the economic facts of life. Reductions in Great Society spending are essential."

Passman noted that the public debt is "the amount of money spent over and above the taxes collected."

He added that in addition to the borrowed-money debt, there is another obligation of $800. billion. This was created, he said, "by 115 statutes calling for the payout of money in subsequent years for services rendered in previous years, and the government established no reserves for the payment of these statutory obligations."

He continued, "the total overdraft for the first 178 years of our government amounts to one trillion, 130 billion dollars." That means that "every man woman and child in the United States today owes $5,750 to the government for his or her share of governmental extravagance."

MAJORITY ASSURED

SEOUL (UPI)—The ruling party of President Park Chung-Hee was assured of at least 129 seats in Thursday's elections for the 175-member National Assembly. Unofficial Saturday results gave 44 seats to the major opposition party, with two races still in doubt.

MINI UPROAR

HEREFORD, England (UPI)—Three teen aged girls quit the Hereford Engineering Company after chairman Leslie Colam ordered 40 women employes to stop wearing mini-skirts to work or face dismissal.

"This is not a strip tease joint," Colam said.

Ruston Merchants Vote Action Over Shoplifting

RUSTON (Special) — Ruston's retail merchants, voicing extreme concern over a rising tide of theft by shoplighting and theft by worthless checks, have voted to take action to curb these offenses.

The Retail Merchants Committee, meeting Tuesday, voted to request the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors to purchase a film for training store personnel on detection and prevention of shoplifting, and to get information on the publication of a phamplet on the dangers of shoplifting, to be distributed to teenagers in the area.

Jim Davis, chairman of the committee, told a large crowd of merchants that their support is needed to seek stronger penalties in the courts against such thefts. The usual punishment, Davis said, is a $50 fine and suspended jail sentence.

Davis and W. A. J. Lewis, a merchant, both cited numerous instances of shoplifting by teenagers, many of whom appear not to understand the serious nature of the crime and undertake it as an adventure.

Lewis displayed a copy of a pamphlet, "Teenagers Beware Shoplifting is a Crime," published by the Oklahoma City Retailers Association. He stated that the phamplet is prepared for teenagers and distributed through the school system in Oklahoma City. It calls attention to the fact that shoplifting is a crime, and that conviction confers a police record which remains with a person throughout life.

To acquaint merchants with their rights in preventing shoplifting, Davis distributed copies of the Louisiana shoplifting law. The law states that a police officer, a merchant, or the merchant's employe may use "reasonable force" to detain for questioning any person whom he has reasonable grounds to suspect of theft. The person may be detained up to one hour.

Wilful concealments of goods, either inside the store or outside, is to be taken as evidence of the intent to steal, the law states.

On the subject of bad checks, merchants were reminded that if checks are not paid within 10 days of notification of the writer of the check of its nonpayment at the bank, arrest can be made.

Catahoula Farmers Protest Loose Stock

HARRISONBURG (Special)—A spokesman for the soybean and cotton farmers of Ward 4, 5 and 6 of Catahoula Parish has announced that no new plans have been formulated in their fight for a stock law within the three-ward area.

The farmers lost their bid before the Catahoula Parish Police Jury Monday in seeking action to make it mandatory for cattlemen to fence in their cattle.

Reminiscent of the pioneer days, the open range controversy came to a "boiling point" in the courtroom of the parish courthouse here. The regular meeting place of the police jury was too small to accomodate the large crowd of both cattlemen and farmers.

C. M. Tolbert of Ward 6 presented a petition with 450 signatures in favor of a three-ward stock law before the jury. Mike McMillin, also of Ward 6, and Police Juror Colvin Manning, Ward 6, led the opposition.

Following heated arguments, the police jury voted unanimously against the petition which sought mandatory fencing by the livestock growers in the area.

In presenting the petitition, Tolbert told the jury and the some 75 persons assembled there, that he felt that 85 per cent of the persons in the three wards favored fencing to keep livestock from roaming freely.

"We feel that now is the time for a stock law," he said. "Twenty-five years ago, people in these parts depended entirely on stock for a livelihood. This is now past. The old time free grazing rights benefit only a chosen few. The law whould be for the protection of the majority," he added.

"Why should the farmers, who have to pay a high lease on their land, in turn have to pay another big sum to have it fenced?" Tolbert asked. "Why shouldn't the cattle owners not buy or lease land for their animals and fence them in instead of farmers fencing them out?"

Tolbert said that his statements were ". . . "the voice of my neighbors for a cause I think is just."

Thousands of acres in Catahoula Parish have either been purchased by large corporations or leased by individuals recently for planting soybeans, where acres of gums, willows, oaks and cotton wood trees once stood.

Manning led the questioning for the jurors and also acted as moderator for the debate.

McMillian, speaking against the petition and in favor of the cattlemen, said, "I admit these boys have a problem . . . My daddy made his living and raised his family fighting the backwater in this area and I came up in the saddle behind him. We've raised a many a cow in these woods," he added.

Manning entered the discussion on the side of the cattlemen and told the farmers to see if they could get any help through their state representative. He then made a resolution that the police jury let the law stand as it is, adding that to pass the issue would be depriving some families of milk and bread money.

Assistant District Attorney R. P. Boyd Jr. told the jury that it could enact an ordinance pertaining to policing of livestock in any ward or any part of a ward, but that it could not be forced to pass such measures.

Boyd said another state law provides that an election could be called to determine the issue, but it would have to be presented as a ward-wide measure.

In other action, the police jury adopted a resolution requesting that the second reach of the diversion canal between Catahoula Lake and Black River be completed prior to completion of the second reach of the levee being constructed to protect the area between Larto and Jonesville in order that drainage would not be affected in that area.

Wedon T. Smith made a report to the jury to the present status of the parish hospital plans. He reported that Hill-Burton representatives have assured him that the parish will be given priority to consideration of its plans as projects lose funds if plans are not approved by July 1. Smith said that the hospital board hopes to award the building contract in August or September.

Peach Festival Has Added New Features

RUSTON (Special) — Several new features have been added to this years Louisiana Peach Festival, slated June 2 through June 25. These new events are added to the long list of regular annual events.

Railroad Park will be a busy place this year, for in addition to the second annual Sidewalk Art Exhibit on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, there will be military displays from Fort Polk and Barksdale Air Force Base. Providing music for the festive atmosphere will be a caliope furnished by E. R. McDonald, owner of Dutch Gardens in Newellton. These attractions will be held on each of the three days.

Another new feature, opening Thursday morning and continuing throughout the festival, will be a Kiddie Carnival, featuring merry-go-rounds, ferris wheels, bumper cars and horses. It will be held at the City Parking Lot near the Post Office.

Another new feature, planned for the equestrian enthusiasts of the area, is a Rodeo Playday and Barbeque, to be held Friday at 4:30 p.m. at the Silver Spur Arena on the Farmerville Highway. Mrs. Lucille Carroll is chairman of this event.

The Peach Classic Swim meet, AAU sanctioned, has been expanded to extend for three days this year.

Annual events of the Festival have been set, including:

Peach Cookery Contest: Thursday, 10 a.m., Holiday Inn; Mrs. Edith Bise, Chairman.

Peach Growers Prize Peach Contest, 10 a.m. Thursday; F. O. LeVasseur, chairman.

Queen Dixie Gem Pagent, 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, Howard Auditorium, Louisiana Tech.

Merchants Sidewalk Sale, downtown, 8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m., Friday; Jim Davis, Chairman.

Peach Festival Awards Luncheon, 12 noon, Friday, Student Center, Louisiana Tech; Dr. P. B. Mosely, Chairman.

Peach Festival Parade, downtown, Friday, 3 p.m., Frank Jerome, chairman.

Peach Orchard Tours, time to be announced, F. O. Le Vasseur, chairman.

Peach Classic Golf Tournament, tee-off time 8 a.m. Saturday and Sunday at Ruston Country Club; R. P. Hand, Chairman.

Budget Cut Foreseen By Rep. Passman

The refusal Wednesday by the U. S. House of Representatives to increase the Treasury Department's borrowing authority by the $29 billion requested by the Johnson Administration should have the effect of "forcing some substantial Great Society budget cutting," according to Fifth District U. S. Congressman Otto E. Passman, in a statement made Saturday.

Passman also said, "This action by the House means that the Johnson Administration will have to recognize some of the economic facts of life. Reductions in Great Society spending are essential."

Passman noted that the public debt is "the amount of money spent over and above the taxes collected."

He added that in addition to the borrowed-money debt, there is another obligation of $800. billion. This was created, he said, "by 115 statutes calling for the payout of money in subsequent years for services rendered in previous years, and the government established no reserves for the payment of these statutory obligations."

He continued, "the total overdraft for the first 178 years of our government amounts to one trillion, 130 billion dollars." That means that "every man woman and child in the United States today owes $5,750 to the government for his or her share of governmental extravagance."

MAJORITY ASSURED

SEOUL (UPI)—The ruling party of President Park Chung-Hee was assured of at least 129 seats in Thursday's elections for the 175-member National Assembly. Unofficial Saturday results gave 44 seats to the major opposition party, with two races still in doubt.

MINI UPROAR

HEREFORD, England (UPI)—Three teen aged girls quit the Hereford Engineering Company after chairman Leslie Colam ordered 40 women employes to stop wearing mini-skirts to work or face dismissal.

Sen. Kennedy Tries Block Of Draft Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is trying to block Senate approval of the compromise military draft bill which rules out a lottery selection system.

The Massachusetts Democrat, long an advocate of draft reform, objects to the no-lottery provision and to other parts of the four-year extension bill approved Wednesday by Senate-House conferees. A Senate showdown is expected Monday.

It will pit Kennedy against the Senate Armed Services Committee and its prestigious chairman, Richard B. Russell, D-Ga.

Senate-House conferees ruled out any lottery-like selection system for determining the order of induction unless approved by Congress in a separate bill. That seemed to doom the proposal of the special commission which studied draft reform for President Johnson.

Kennedy contends, however, that the Senate-House conferees went beyond the provisions of either bill when they wrote in the lottery prohibition. The original Senate bill was silent on the lottery plan and the House measure provided only that any such plan be submitted with 60-days notice during which Congress could veto it.

Funny Money

An American Bar Association feature by Will Bernard.

What if you discover that a dollar bill, recently acquired by you, is a counterfeit? Your quick reaction might be:

"This thing is a hot potato. I'd better unload it onto somebody else as fast as I can."

But if you do, you will be committing the serious crime of passing counterfeit money. True, you do have a hot potato on your hands. But it is folly to add to the minor mistake of accepting the money the major mistake of passing it along.

Your duty is plain. Notify the local police department or the United States Secret Service at once, giving as much information as you can about when, where and from whom you received the bill.

No, you will not be reimbursed for the one dollar. But you will be helping to curb one of the most ancient and persistent of crimes—one that has been given a new lease on life by modern techniques of printing and engraving.

In the roster of criminals the counterfeiter is something of a maverick. He is seldom motivated by sudden passion or by grinding poverty or by personal inadequacies. He has time enough for planning, money enough for equipment, and talent enough for manufacturing. He is a cool customer who knows exactly what he is doing.

However, merely passing — unlike manufacturing — counterfeit money may occur in perfect innocence. It is part of the government's job in prosecuting to prove that the person who passed the counterfeit money knew (or at least thought) that it was counterfeit. Consider this case:

An intoxicated fellow, caught spending counterfeit money in a bar, denied that he knew it was bogus. At the trial, the government told the court:

"Shortly before this man's arrest, he burned a $5 bill to light his cigar. So he must have known the money was no good."

But the court was not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, and dismissed the charge. The judge said it was quite possible for a drinking man to burn real money — just to show off.

In another case, though, there was evidence that the defendant, when he realized detectives were on his trail, flushed his counterfeit money down a toilet.

This time, the defendant was convicted. The court found no reasonable explanation for this behavior except a guilty conscience.

Conference At LSU Sets 5 Activities

BATON ROUGE (Special) — The LSU Leadership Conference for next fall's high school seniors will offer training and experience in five activities when it opens Tuesday on the Baton Rouge campus.

Archie L. Lejeune, director of the conference, said two separate sessions are scheduled. The first will run from June 13-21; the second from June 22-29.

Approximately 700 boys and girls from high schools in Louisiana will attend. All were recommended by their principals for their qualities of leadership. The conference is sponsored by the University's Division of High School Relations.

Lejeune said the purpose of the conference is to develop leadership in high school group activities. The two sessions of the conference, identical in scope, cover the areas of speech, recreation, yearbook and newspaper publication and library.

Northeast Sets Meet At Orleans

Northeast Louisiana State College has scheduled a banquet in New Orleans Wednesday, June 14, to pay tribute to Mrs. Eleanore Hussey Meade, in whose name an Honor Professorship was established at the College last year with the approval of the Louisiana State Board of Education.

The banquet will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Carnival Room of the Fontainebleau Hotel.

Mrs. Meade, of New Orleans, is the only woman ever elected to the State Board of Education and has also served for nearly 20 years as a member of the board of trustees of George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn.

A native of Alabama, Mrs. Meade is a graduate of Peabody. She taught English in two Louisiana high schools, Abbeville and Lutcher, and served as assistant principal before marrying Dr. George P. Meade, an internationally known sugar chemist, in 1912. After her marriage, Mrs. Meade lived with her husband in Cuba for 10 years before they returned to Louisiana.

In 1927, Mrs. Meade was appointed to the State Board of Education to fill an unexpired term. At the end of that term, she was elected to the post and served for 35 years as a member of that body before retiring on Dec. 31, 1962. Among the first women to be elected to any public office in Louisiana, she served on the board under seven state administrations.

Mrs. Meade was vice president of the board for 16 years, from 1937 through 1952, and was elected president in 1953. She also served as chairman of the Committee on Vocational Schools.

Mrs. Meade has served Louisiana education in many other capacities also. In addition to teaching, she was active as an organizer and coordinator in the Louisiana Parent - Teacher Association and served as state PTA president. She was cited by the St. James Parish School Board for her services to the state and parish.

For many years Mrs. Meade was the only woman on the Peabody board of trustees, to which she was elected in 1947.

While she and Dr. Meade lived in Cuba, she taught English in the Presbyterian School at Cardenas, Cuba, for three years.

Her interest in the education of young people is evidenced by the fact that she and Dr. Meade have contributed financially to helping 14 deserving students attend college.

Mrs. Meade is an active member of the Episcopalian Church and taught the Bible class at the Lutcher Community Church for more than 30 years. She has also been active in the Daughters of the American Revolution and the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Dr. George T. Walker, president of Northeast, will preside at the June 14 banquet and present Mrs. Meade with a certificate and a gift. J. Marshall Brown of New Orleans, current president of the State Board of Education, and William J. Dodd, state superintendent of education, will speak briefly. Dr. William R. Hammond, dean of Northeast's School of Liberal Arts, will give a tribute to Mrs. Meade. Miss Louisiana, Northeast student Joy Woods of New Orleans, will be presented in an Oboe solo and Davis Bingham of the Northeast music faculty in a vocal solo.

Northeast's three honor professorships were established last August in honor of Mrs. Meade, former Gov. James A. Noe of Monroe and the late Col. George T. Madison of Bastrop.

Graduating Class Of 1967--A Portrait Of The Future

Diplomas in hand, the nation's college seniors step into a complex world—more criticized, more examined and more wondered about than any other commencement group in years. Are there many long-haired, marijuana-smoking rebels? Or are they just a security conscious, play-it-safe generation with a couldn't care attitude about the world they are to enter. The Associated Press checked campuses all over the nation to find the asnswers.

By JULES LOH
Associated Press Writer

This month more than half a million college seniors, in solemn processions of black, will graduate into a bewildering world of unrivaled wealth and unsettled woe.

Capped and gowned, they will take their diplomas and go on. Perhaps to work. Perhaps to war.

Capped and gowned — and labeled.

Watching them as students, with their peace placards and uncut hair, their LSD and their crazy lapel buttons, watching them and listening to their impassioned outcries, the labelmakers seized the obvious and put down the class of '67 as "the protest generation."

Protest? Last month a small group at Detroit's Wayne State University demonstrated in protest. In protest of student apathy.

That was a week after the Texas Christian University student newspaper lamented, "There just isn't anything to write an editorial about," and Penn State's Daily Collegian wound up an editorial plea for more student dissent with the piteous wail, "Is anybody listening?"

Generalizations about this year's grads are too easy. Too risky.

One thing can be safely said of them. They are probably the most criticized, examined and wondered about commencement group in years.

At a meeting of college officials in Philadelphia last spring, the seminar on student dissent drew a standing-room-only crowd. At the American Psychiatric Association's annual meeting in May in Detroit, no fewer than three scholarly papers dealt with campus activism.

Concerned about his elders' concern, an astute senior at Michigan State University arched his eyebrows and said: "Something bothers me. There seems to be some sort of youth worship going on. Is there?"

No, not worship, but the certain knowledge that voices heard on today's campuses will echo tomorrow in legislative halls and corporate board rooms. If this year's grad represents a symptom, he ought to be diagnosed.

What to make of him, then, this 1967 college graduate? What are his passions and who are his heroes and why does he act as he does?

To find out, The Associated Press visited colleges of all sizes and shapes, from the sprawling multiversity of Michigan State with its branch libraries and 12-story dorms, to intimate, idyllic Colby College in central Maine, where every senior dines with the president at least once and there is no waiting for a tennis court.

We talked with scores of students, sat with them in class, lounged with them in frat houses and rathskellers, chatted with them about picketing and politics, morals and marijuana, the war, the draft, the bill. Some discoveries might startle the graying heads of another generation. Other findings might amuse them. One discovery, which might comfort many, and then again might not, was this:

The strident chorus of campus dissent, trademark of the class of '67, has won an importance in America far beyond its numbers. Among nearly seven million undergraduates, the ranks of the anguished protesters are picayune. Their less-noticed classmates, when they refer to them at all, call them kooks.

When 80 cowbell-ringing, slogan-chanting demonstrators lurched among the crisp ranks of 6,300 Ohio State ROTC cadets passing in review before 1,500 spectators, they knew the press could not ignore their disruption.

But overlooked amid the din of pickets is a fact equally significant in its implications: On nearly every campus visited, administrators and faculty members were chagrined that there was not more critical dissent, more "vocal thinking," as one prof put it, among the great gray student body.

"I just haven't sensed a with-it-ness on this campus," says J. D. Williams, a political science professor at the University of Utah.

PROTESTED APPOINTMENT

In May, about 200 Utah students marched to the administration building to protest, not some burning social issue, but the appointment of a student editor. Including spectators, the crowd represented one-85th of the student population and it was their largest campus demonstration in memory. The dean of students, who seemed heartened, told the crowd from the steps, "Thank you for behaving as you do."

Margaret Larson, a 21-year-old senior in journalism at Utah, who has with-it-ness in abundance, tells of a small experiment she conducted.

"For three weeks I went around trying to strike up an intellectual conversation in the Huddle," the Student Union coffee shop. "I brought up Vietnam, the new left, education, drugs. Not one conversation lasted more than 10 minutes before we were back to who's dating whom Friday night."

Margaret attributes a large measure of her classmates' docile acceptance of the "revealed truths" of those in authority to the pervading influence of Mormonism on the Salt Lake City campus.

APATHY, NOT PROTEST

Could be. But other thoughtful students at other schools also find apathy, not protest, a characteristic of the class of '67 and have no such ready explanation at hand.

Pamela Daviau, writing in her student newspaper in Massachusetts, says, "The lack of activity in most classes suggests that Mount Holyoke is a campus of vegetating note-takers."

The recurrent theme heard at a number of colleges was that sweating for grades left little time to think about much else. That could be, too. An all but total lack of newspapers and magazines amid the dormitory clutter of textbooks was obvious and striking on every campus. Robert Dickeson, director of student activities at the University of Missouri, says most students he knows "view college as a four-year obstacle course."

Attend to what matters and let the rest go. That seems to be the credo of the huge middle group of the class of '67. And what matters most is a diploma. To them, a sheepskin is the one essential amulet in a diabolocally competitive world.

One other thing matters to them, deeply and personally. Vietnam.

But the typical grad regards the war more as a cruel intrusion on his life than as an assault on his principles. If called, he would go, no question. But he does not view the war as a crusade. On the contrary, his attitude is, who needs it?

Graduate school applications have spurted, and some seniors frankly admit they seek not higher wisdom but draft deferment. ROTC enrollment also is up — more than triple at the University of California at Berkeley, that citadel of antiwar protest. At Utah University, one ROTC cadet said it seemed to him less torture to accept military service and fit into a tolerable plan than to sit around and fret over the draft.

The hirsuite activists have set the tone and won the label for the class of '67. But they are few, their influence on their fellows slight.

Neither the war nor the draft nor anything else, it seems, has been able to inflame the pragmatic soul of the average senior graduating this month. To him, protest demonstrations are a foolish waste of time, bucking the system quixotic, pep rallies gauche. At the beginning of their last semester the seniors at Rhode Island College assembled for the traditional singing of the alma mater, but it was a ludicrous flop because nobody knew the words.

But to imply that the class of '67 is a generation of apathy is no less superficial than to label it the generation of protest.

STUDIED HARDER

This year's grads have studied harder, absorbed more and are better educated than any who preceded them. Among them are many — call them the "involved" — who might not be typical but represent a sizable minority.

There is no lack of idealism among this group. They are intense, thoughtful, informed. "These students have too much on their minds to be excessive," says Ian Robertson, an instructor at Colby. "They possess an enormous amount of discipline and creativity, and their numbers are growing every year."

They are a highly principled group, and highly skeptical.

"Today's student isn't ready any more to accept everything the professor says," observes Davida Trochtengerg. After 11 years away from a campus, Miss Trochtengerg has returned to get a graduate degree from the University of Missouri.

HEATED DISCUSSION

"In one class," she says, "we were in a heated discussion and two students walked out. You wouldn't have seen that in the 40s."

On every issue, but especially Vietnam, members of this group hunger for facts. When a knowledgeable speaker, a Maxwell D. Taylor, say, appeared on campus they jam the hall. They listen, and question, and challenge, and generally ignore the inevitable gaggle of protesters outside.

This group of grads, shaven and combed, might well know more about the history and nature of the conflict than many of their congressmen.

Most of them object to the war, on principle. They object to the law that denies them freedom to excuse themselves from this particular war, which offends their conscience, for they are not conscientious objectors in the legal sense. And they object to those who attack the patriotism of those who refuse to serve because they feel it takes more courage to face social scorn than bullets.

Thom Rippen, student body president at Colby College, thoughtful and sincere, is one such "involved" student. He recently did a 30-page research paper on Vietnam.

"There is just no way we can justify our presence there," he says. "Would I go? Fortunately, I'm going to graduate school and don't have to confront myself with that yet. It's a real hang up."

Jim Graham is student leader at Michigan State who plans to become a criminal lawyer, knows his decision.

"I would not serve," he says. "I feel no responsibility to my country in this immoral, undeclared war. At Nuernberg our government hanged people for refusing to take the stand I take. Now I'm damned for taking it. How's that for irony?"

Gil Peach, a lean, crewcut sociology major at MSU and a member of the University Christian Movement, would suffer jail rather than fight in Vietnam. He is not a conscientious objector.

"The life of a Vietnamese peasant means as much to me as the life of a guy in my high school class who is over there," he says. "That might be hard for some to understand, though I don't know why it should be."

The war aside, what sort of creatures are June's grads?

Background, geography, size and type of their college, all contribute to their values and attitudes. But some traits ignore these influences and recur like a figure, at times strong, at times subtle.

One such characteristic is an almost universal unwillingness to make judgments about others. The class motto could well be, "Live and let live," written bold.

REFUSE TO SUGGEST

They refuse to suggest standards of behavior for others and resent others imposing any on them. They insist that any act is permissible so long as nobody gets hurt -- though the impression is strong that the ones they don't want to hurt are mainly of their own generation.

Arguments are rare. "We don't battle to convince others," says a Colby College senior. "Everybody is entitled to his own view."

Andy Mollison, a mature, perceptive senior at Michigan State observes that the word square is now used only by squares but nobody has coined a word to take its place. "We don't need one," says Mollison. "To call a person a square would be passing judgment."

At Gorham State College in Maine, the senior class refused this year to elect the two outstanding grads for what had been an annual award. Far be it from them.

"These kids grew up under relativism," says Howard L. Koonce, an assistant professor of English at Colby. "The last generation created the 'let's talk it over' school -- permissiveness, progressive education, all of that. The kids are taking this into society, which their parents did not do."

Koonce, 35, finds the study of students as fascinating as the study of literature. He says a heroic figure among his students is Huckleberry Finn. Why? Huck represents private morality in opposition to public morality.

The live and let live syndrome underlies the students' attitudes toward the two big issues that give their parents the most concern and the kids the most kicks. Sex and drugs.

The kicks come not from hedonistic indulgence but from wry amusement over what they consider inordinate alarm on the part of their parents, and the police. "The fuzz is everywhere, trying to go unnoticed," says a Michigan State honor student. "It's a panic."

One afternoon last spring an MSU student got a letter from his girl, a check from his dad, and a good grade in a big test. He bounded out of the dorm onto the lawn, whopped, turned cartwheels, swung from a limb. A cop pounced on him demanding to know where he got the LSD.

Marijuana and LSD were available on every campus where he bothered to pursue the search.

ATTENTION TO DRUGS

Student newspapers pay a good deal of attention to drugs, and students are knowledgeable about their effects. But the overwhelming majority couldn't care less about using them. They, too, are for the kooks.

Even so, most of the seniors who had an opinion felt marijuana ought to be legalized. Not for their own use, they insist, but they regard the weed as harmless and, what the hell, live and let live.

"Besides," says Steve Carpenter, a Colby art major with intense, blue eyes and deep feelings about society, "it would be the lifting of a censorship, a retreat from middle - class values."

As with drugs, the class of '67 regards social or religious taboos concerning sex as Victorian and unenlightened. They discuss the subject in all its aspects with unblushing candor.

They view premarital sex as neither good nor bad in itself. Rather it is an intimate and spontaneous expression of "love," preferably, or at very least "tenderness," and if those emotions are handy that's all that matters. One is considered promiscuous only if gross or immature about it. Like going to a motel; patently calculated.

"If a fellow has a girl and uses her and leaves her, he would have few friends," says Carpenter.

THE "PROTEST GENERATION" is the label pinned by some on the 1967 college graduates who will receive their diplomas this month. But in the colleges — both among "involved" students and among members of faculties and administration — greater concern is felt over the small numbers of protesters and the apathy of the majority. Margaret Larsen, a senior at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, says that she made a three - week experiment, trying to stir up talk about such subjects as Vietnam, the New Left, drugs — but always found the conversation back on dating. Here she is seen at a campus meeting protesting naming of a student editor. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

CENSORSHIP, OR any threat of it, arouses activists on America's college campuses. Here Paul Taylor, a senior at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, speaks at a demonstration he organized. It started when the administration proposed a successor to Taylor as editor of the student paper. Taylor, who felt this was an effort to gag the paper, quit, organized the protest meeting, and started an off - campus paper. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Earring Spectaculars Swing Into Orbit

By PAT HERLEVIC
Staff Writer

The fashion pendulum swings and the origins of jewelry are lost in the mists of antiquity. But swinging into orbit today the pendulum brings with it earring spectaculars that can't be lost.

The ear gear of the jet-age is strictly swing. There are daring geometrics, cubes, circles, pyramids, rectangles, triangles and ovals of feather-weight plastic, metal, enamel and papier mache. These are dipped into a paint pot to come up with neon colors in every shade imaginable and in unimaginable color combinations.

One set is a pair of waist-length earrings. The sparkling rope is composed of rhinestones, simulated gems and tiny mirrors.

Big and bold are some of the earring designs for '67. A pair featured on the cover of the June issue of a leading fashion magazine illustrate the trend. The earrings are long cords of beads which feature clear balls similar in size and shape to a Christmas tree ornament. The balls are also decorated with beads.

Today there is an immense collection of fashion earrings to tune you "In" whatever the scene or mood. There are groovy "op" tricks, spinning, swirling, coiling. For daytime wear the modern woman can choose from golden triangles and large hoop earrings. Moonlight moments call for circle upon circle of transparent stones, a myriad of crystal droplets, glitter balls or "jewel" sparkles. All are hung or chained in some distinctive fashion. For "anytime" wear there are all kinds of geometric designs from swinging ropes and discs to triangles, squared off circles and ball-and-chains.

The today spirit of mod styles can be found in the pierced - look or the pierced earrings.

The pierced - look earrings offer the look of pierced ears without the expense or pain of the real thing.

Doctors, jewelers, even friends are being asked to perform the surgery for those who do want their ears pierced. Regardless of who does the piercing, however, a certain amount of skill is required. One must be sure to get the angles of piercing just right and the holes symmetical. If the holes are too low a heavy earring will cut the lobe or stretch it out of shape. If the holes are too high a stud earring may rub against the ear cartilage.

Most doctors perform the piercing with a large - gauge needle, a special ear-piercing instrument or the earring itself. He then sends the patient home with instructions to keep the earring in for one to six weeks. He also tells her to clean the area at least once a day with soap and water or an antiseptic.

Three of the more popular methods used by amateur ear punchers who pierce their friends' ears are the "ice cube," "Clothes pin" and "slow-piercing" methods. In using one of these methods the amateur needs a fat sewing needle and some thick white thread to keep the breach open.

Though rather uncomfortable, the ice cube method is probably the safest. This method employs the use of ice cubes to deaden and numb the earlobe before piercing with a pin.

The "clothes pin" method is probably the most painful of the three. Some coeds agree that it is a grueling experience to have clothes pins hung from the ears. The length of time for leaving the pins on the ears varies from person to person. The best time to remove them is before the girl faints.

Many coeds agree that the self-piercing post is the most dangerous method. The self-piercing post is an earring that pierces the ear slowly. This method increases the possibility of infection.

Cases of infection arise when one does not continue to clean the ear lobes and earrings properly. The lobes and earrings must be cleaned regularly, even years after they have been pierced.

But with today's styles to get an "earfull" it doesn't really matter if a woman has her ears pierced or not. All she needs to do is follow the fashion pendulum's swing toward earrings.

Diplomas in hand, the nation's college seniors step into a complex world—more criticized, more examined and more wondered about than any other commencement group in years. Are there many long-haired, marijuana-smoking rebels? Or are they just a security conscious, play-it-safe generation with a couldn't care attitude about the world they are to enter. The Associated Press checked campuses all over the nation to find the asnswers.

By JULES LOH
Associated Press Writer

This month more than half a million college seniors, in solemn processions of black, will graduate into a bewildering world of unrivaled wealth and unsettled woe.

Capped and gowned, they will take their diplomas and go on. Perhaps to work. Perhaps to war.

Capped and gowned — and labeled.

Watching them as students, with their peace placards and uncut hair, their LSD and their crazy lapel buttons, watching them and listening to their impassioned outcries, the labelmakers seized the obvious and put down the class of '67 as "the protest generation."

That was a week after the Texas Christian University student newspaper lamented, "There just isn't anything to write an editorial about," and Penn State's Daily Collegian wound up an editorial plea for more student dissent with the piteous wail, "Is anybody listening?"

Generalizations about this year's grads are too easy. Too risky.

One thing can be safely said of them. They are probably the most criticized, examined and wondered about commencement group in years.

At a meeting of college officials in Philadelphia last spring, the seminar on student dissent drew a standing-room-only crowd. At the American Psychiatric Association's annual meeting in May in Detroit, no fewer than three scholarly papers dealt with campus activism.

Concerned about his elders' concern, an astute senior at Michigan State University arched his eyebrows and said: "Something bothers me. There seems to be some sort of youth worship going on. Is there?"

No, not worship, but the certain knowledge that voices heard on today's campuses will echo tomorrow in legislative halls and corporate board rooms. If this year's grad represents a symptom, he ought to be diagnosed.

What to make of him, then, this 1967 college graduate? What are his passions and who are his heroes and why does he act as he does?

To find out, The Associated Press visited colleges of all sizes and shapes, from the sprawling multiversity of Michigan State with its branch libraries and 12-story dorms, to intimate, idyllic Colby College in central Maine, where every senior dines with the president at least once and there is no waiting for a tennis court.

We talked with scores of students, sat with them in class, lounged with them in frat houses and rathskellers, chatted with them about picketing and politics, morals and marijuana, the war, the draft, the bill. Some discoveries might startle the graying heads of another generation. Other findings might amuse them. One discovery, which might comfort many, and then again might not, was this:

The strident chorus of campus dissent, trademark of the class of '67, has won an importance in America far beyond its numbers. Among nearly seven million undergraduates, the ranks of the anguished protesters are picayune. Their less-noticed classmates, when they refer to them at all, call them kooks.

When 80 cowbell-ringing, slogan-chanting demonstrators lurched among the crisp ranks of 6,300 Ohio State ROTC cadets passing in review before 1,500 spectators, they knew the press could not ignore their disruption.

But overlooked amid the din of pickets is a fact equally significant in its implications: On nearly every campus visited, administrators and faculty members were chagrined that there was not more critical dissent, more "vocal thinking," as one prof put it, among the great gray student body.

"I just haven't sensed a with-it-ness on this campus," says J. D. Williams, a political science professor at the University of Utah.

PROTESTED APPOINTMENT

In May, about 200 Utah students marched to the administration building to protest, not some burning social issue, but the appointment of a student editor. Including spectators, the crowd represented one-85th of the student population and it was their largest campus demonstration in memory. The dean of students, who seemed heartened, told the crowd from the steps, "Thank you for behaving as you do."

Margaret Larson, a 21-year-old senior in journalism at Utah, who has with-it-ness in abundance, tells of a small experiment she conducted.

"For three weeks I went around trying to strike up an intellectual conversation in the Huddle," the Student Union coffee shop. "I brought up Vietnam, the new left, education, drugs. Not one conversation lasted more than 10 minutes before we were back to who's dating whom Friday night."

Margaret attributes a large measure of her classmates' docile acceptance of the "revealed truths" of those in authority to the pervading influence of Mormonism on the Salt Lake City campus.

APATHY, NOT PROTEST

Could be. But other thoughtful students at other schools also find apathy, not protest, a characteristic of the class of '67 and have no such ready explanation at hand.

Pamela Daviau, writing in her student newspaper in Massachusetts, says, "The lack of activity in most classes suggests that Mount Holyoke is a campus of vegetating note-takers."

The recurrent theme heard at a number of colleges was that sweating for grades left little time to think about much else. That could be, too. An all but total lack of newspapers and magazines amid the dormitory clutter of textbooks was obvious and striking on every campus. Robert Dickeson, director of student activities at the University of Missouri, says most students he knows "view college as a four-year obstacle course."

Attend to what matters and let the rest go. That seems to be the credo of the huge middle group of the class of '67. And what matters most is a diploma. To them, a sheepskin is the one essential amulet in a diabolocally competitive world.

One other thing matters to them, deeply and personally. Vietnam.

But the typical grad regards the war more as a cruel intrusion on his life than as an assault on his principles. If called, he would go, no question. But he does not view the war as a crusade. On the contrary, his attitude is, who needs it?

Graduate school applications have spurted, and some seniors frankly admit they seek not higher wisdom but draft deferment. ROTC enrollment also is up — more than triple at the University of California at Berkeley, that citadel of antiwar protest. At Utah University, one ROTC cadet said it seemed to him less torture to accept military service and fit into a tolerable plan than to sit around and fret over the draft.

The hirsuite activists have set the tone and won the label for the class of '67. But they are few, their influence on their fellows slight.

Neither the war nor the draft nor anything else, it seems, has been able to inflame the pragmatic soul of the average senior graduating this month. To him, protest demonstrations are a foolish waste of time, bucking the system quixotic, pep rallies gauche. At the beginning of their last semester the seniors at Rhode Island College assembled for the traditional singing of the alma mater, but it was a ludicrous flop because nobody knew the words.

But to imply that the class of '67 is a generation of apathy is no less superficial than to label it the generation of protest.

STUDIED HARDER

This year's grads have studied harder, absorbed more and are better educated than any who preceded them. Among them are many — call them the "involved" — who might not be typical but represent a sizable minority.

There is no lack of idealism among this group. They are intense, thoughtful, informed. "These students have too much on their minds to be excessive," says Ian Robertson, an instructor at Colby. "They possess an enormous amount of discipline and creativity, and their numbers are growing every year."

They are a highly principled group, and highly skeptical.

"Today's student isn't ready any more to accept everything the professor says," observes Davida Trochtengerg. After 11 years away from a campus, Miss Trochtengerg has returned to get a graduate degree from the University of Missouri.

HEATED DISCUSSION

"In one class," she says, "we were in a heated discussion and two students walked out. You wouldn't have seen that in the 40s."

On every issue, but especially Vietnam, members of this group hunger for facts. When a knowledgeable speaker, a Maxwell D. Taylor, say, appeared on campus they jam the hall. They listen, and question, and challenge, and generally ignore the inevitable gaggle of protesters outside.

This group of grads, shaven and combed, might well know more about the history and nature of the conflict than many of their congressmen.

Most of them object to the war, on principle. They object to the law that denies them freedom to excuse themselves from this particular war, which offends their conscience, for they are not conscientious objectors in the legal sense. And they object to those who attack the patriotism of those who refuse to serve because they feel it takes more courage to face social scorn than bullets.

Thom Rippen, student body president at Colby College, thoughtful and sincere, is one such "involved" student. He recently did a 30-page research paper on Vietnam.

"There is just no way we can justify our presence there," he says. "Would I go? Fortunately, I'm going to graduate school and don't have to confront myself with that yet. It's a real hang up."

Jim Graham is student leader at Michigan State who plans to become a criminal lawyer, knows his decision.

"I would not serve," he says. "I feel no responsibility to my country in this immoral, undeclared war. At Nuernberg our government hanged people for refusing to take the stand I take. Now I'm damned for taking it. How's that for irony?"

Gil Peach, a lean, crewcut sociology major at MSU and a member of the University Christian Movement, would suffer jail rather than fight in Vietnam. He is not a conscientious objector.

"The life of a Vietnamese peasant means as much to me as the life of a guy in my high school class who is over there," he says. "That might be hard for some to understand, though I don't know why it should be."

The war aside, what sort of creatures are June's grads?

Background, geography, size and type of their college, all contribute to their values and attitudes. But some traits ignore these influences and recur like a figure, at times strong, at times subtle.

One such characteristic is an almost universal unwillingness to make judgments about others. The class motto could well be, "Live and let live," written bold.

REFUSE TO SUGGEST

They refuse to suggest standards of behavior for others and resent others imposing any on them. They insist that any act is permissible so long as nobody gets hurt — though the impression is strong that the ones they don't want to hurt are mainly of their own generation.

Arguments are rare. "We don't battle to convince others," says a Colby College senior. "Everybody is entitled to his own view."

Andy Mollison, a mature, perceptive senior at Michigan State observes that the word square is now used only by squares but nobody has coined a word to take its place. "We don't need one," says Mollison. "To call a person a square would be passing judgment."

At Gorham State College in Maine, the senior class refused this year to elect the two outstanding grads for what had been an annual award. Far be it from them.

"These kids grew up under relativism," says Howard L. Koonce, an assistant professor of English at Colby. "The last generation created the "let's talk it over' school — permissiveness, progressive education, all of that. The kids are taking this into society, which their parents did not do."

Koonce, 35, finds the study of students as fascinating as the study of literature. He says a heroic figure among his students is Huckleberry Finn. Why? Huck represents private morality in opposition to public morality.

The live and let live syndrome underlies the students' attitudes toward the two big issues that give their parents the most concern and the kids the most kicks. Sex and drugs.

The kicks come not from hedonistic indulgence but from wry amusement over what they consider inordinate alarm on the part of their parents, and the police. "The fuzz is everywhere, trying to go unnoticed," says a Michigan State honor student. "It's a panic."

One afternoon last spring an MSU student got a letter from his girl, a check from his dad, and a good grade in a big test. He bounded out of the dorm onto the lawn, whopped, turned carthweels, swung from a limb. A cop pounced on him demanding to know where he got the LSD.

Marijuana and LSD were available on every campus where he bothered to pursue the search.

'There's Always Uncle Sam'

There was a time when the United States, which frequently went to the assistance of England and France, could depend on those nations for help in handling the world situation. Now, France, under President Charles de Gaulle, has become a "lone wolf," with friendy actions toward Russia. England is "pulling in its horns" and there is grave doubt that it will ever again act militarily except in direct self - defense. Australia, long protected by Britain's widespread troop and naval wings, has been rudely awakened to the fact that it can no longer depend on that protection.

In 1956, when the situation in the Middle East was much the same as it is now and when Israel and the Arab countries were embroiled in war, England joined the United States in telling the Arab nations to "lay off." At that time, President Dwight D. Eisenhower gave Israel assurance that the United States would keep the Gulf of Aqaba open. Eisenhower then undoubtedly expected Britain would join in whatever action was necessary to keep the gulf open.

The question is, what would England do now if the situation should become explosive again? Also being highly debated is the question of what the United States can or should do. We can be certain France won't give us any assistance in holding back communist advances, unless it happens to serve its own purpose. We can't be certain that England would give any help.

This virtually leaves the United States alone in its policing job if it attempts to continue that role.

The United States now pays 33 per cent of the cost of maintaining the United Nations and gets nothing in return. The United Nations is valuless as a peace-keeping agency and in helping to preserve the independence of nations. Under U Thant, it has acted more to enslave nations.

In Australia, one expressed what seems to be the concensus of his countrymen when he said:

"I suppose the days of looking to Mother England are over."

He said this slowly, as if he had come to a hard conclusion after days of agonizing indecision.

He had expressed with earthy simplicity what the members of parliament in Canberra had been saying for weeks to each other and their 12,000,000 constituents: The day is near at hand when Australia will have to face the real world, an alien Asia, and face it pretty much alone.

"We've relied on the might and protection of Britain far too long," Sir Wilfred Kent-Hughes, a member of the national House of Representatives from the state of Victoria, told his colleagues. Britain just can't afford to keep big forces east of Suez. Australia must see the position with realism and face the responsibilities."

Britain's decision to cut sharply its troop strength in Malaysia and Singapore has hit Australia like a slap in the face. Asia without the British tommy? The South Seas without the majestic Union Jack fluttering from a fleet of imperial ships? In Melbourne, Australia's most important commercial center and the nation's most graceful city, the astonishment, disbelief and incredulity is complete.

What Britain proposes to do seems clear enough. It intends to cut its Malaysia - Singapore garrison this year by 30,000 soldiers. This would leave about 20,000 men in Singapore but there are hints that these will go soon too. These troops cost Britain about $225 million last year.

One of the ironies in Australia, amusing in a bitter, wry sort of way, is that colonial Britain is, for once, being begged to stay by her erstwhile colonial subjects. They don't want "freedom."

Another irony in Britain's inability to keep troops around the world is that, after World War II, the United States joined with Russia in demanding that England be divested of its colony empire. Naturally, with not much of an empire left and not receiving much revenue from what is left, England is no longer able to retain a force sufficient to enable it to retain the title of Queen of the Seas.

But we are wondering just how for Uncle Sam can or should go without an ally.

Why, That TV Star, Reagan, Is Using Real Bullets!

Views Of Our Readers

SBC And NCC

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Recently the Southern Baptist Convention was held at Miami Beach, Florida. The convention approved a motion to take a "hard" look at U.S. involvment in Vietnam. They also approved what I never expected to see in the Southern Baptist, integration. This disturbed me greatly because of my church membership in the Southern Baptist Convention. I certainly do not approve of integration of any races in our schools or churches, be they white and black, yellow and black, or any other combination of mongrelization. I would not have been surprised at all to hear this from the National Council of Churches, but it is quite a shock to hear it from the SBC. Also, by a vote 264-189 the Louisiana Annual Methodist Conference approved integration of their churches.

Three years ago it was clear to everyone what was happening in America. Or maybe it wasn't so clear! Some people couldn't hardly believe that Congress could pass such a socialistic piece of "legislation" as the Civil Rights Bill of 1964. The 1964 Civil Rights Bill is a blank check for dictatorship which cancels out more major individual freedoms, according to a past president of the American Bar Association, than all the bills ever passed by Congress since the inception of our republic.

We are now told whom we can hire, who we can serve, who must go to school with our children, and now even high religious officials are duped into accepting the doctrines which have been laid out by the collectivist conspirators in the U.S. since Dr. Harry F. Ward set up the first Communist-front, the Methodist Federation for Social Service, in America in 1907. (Notice that this was 12 years before the organization of the Communist Party, U.S.A. in 1919.) Next he set up the Federal Council of Churches in 1908. In 1950, in Cleveland, Ohio, the FCC changed its name to what is now called the National Council of Churches. Dr. Ward, a communist, still lives today, and was the first man believed to bring the Communist cancer to American soil. The National Council of Churches has openly advocated U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, admission of Red China to the UN, racial integration, and (get this) abolition of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. At one time the NCC sent 75 lobbyists to Washington to try to stir up sentiment to get out of Vietnam. On another occasion, the Council sent 100 lobbysits to Washington to try to create emotions for the abolition of the HUAC. This only a mere sample of the action of the National Council of Churches. The Council sent 300 lobbyists to Washington for the passage of the Civil Rights Bill. All of this violates Internal Revenue Code, but nothing is done about it. Why?

No one in Washington seems to care about it; that is, as long as it is something from the "liberal" crowd. All the time they were in Washington, they were claiming to represent 40 million Protestants. The National Council does not represent 40 million Protestants, and it is a completely false statement when they say that they do. Members of individual churches cannot help it if their church is affiliated with the NCC. But they can pull out any time. I don't think that the majority of the people who belong to churches belonging to the NCC think along the same lines as the NCC. I don't even think 5 per cent of them do. But the great danger of the socialist - riddled leadership is that they "claim" to represent them. You ought to see some of the publications that they recommend for children from Junior High on down. Many written by known communists such as Langston Hughes and W. E. B. DuBois. (Incidently, W. E. B. DuBois, a self-admitted Communist, was the ONLY Negro of the seven men who founded the NAACP. The rest were WHITE men. Negroes are not allowed to become president of the organization.)

The centralized welfare state brings slavery in the ultimate end, not freedom. Property rights are the very basis of human rights. The right of self-determination of associates is the very essence of human dignity. Forced equality is false equality and is not democracy, but dictatorship. Forced equality is not freedom, but in the end, slavery. Freedom is not free, free men are not equal, and equal men are not free!

This all goes to prove that if the socialist - minded in government today, cannot get what they want done by means of legislation, such as integration of churches, they will find some other way. This is the way the liberal mind works.

To the Editor:

Recent pictures of the traffic jam at a busy intersection a few days ago prompt me to call attention to another, seemingly neglected intersection downtown in this town; a place where several wrecks have occurred which could have been fatal under other circumstances.

Having looked at this bridge over the area, which sprawls, like a giant centipede afflicted with the "heaves", and finding it necessary to drive under it at times, I hereby invited any of your photographers to go on a ten or fifteen minute drive over the mentioned place. We will begin from in front of Howard Griffin' Store and drive east on Bry. At St. John is a STOP sign, after which we come to, or almost to, Jackson and a big YIELD sign. We stop, turn to roughly 170 degrees left, to see what is coming off the bridge, that we may turn left onto Jackson. A look back over the shoulder may tell us several cars are coming, but as we can only see the tops, there is no way of knowing whether they are turning North or South, until they get right to us. They continue on their way, while we wait until the way is clear, then, turning left we go north. This is three-way, the right lane marked for traffic over the bridge West. Going on north to the St. Francis Hospital we turn right one block to head South. Now notice the change, just one block East of where we had to wait for traffic clearance on Bry. Under the bridge we come to a halt, as there are Four, (count them) stop lights there, with only TWO Way traffic. The traffic on Bry has a definite stop, the traffic coming down from the bridge has one, the traffic off the bridge heading South on South Second Street has one and the South-bound traffic on Catalpa, where it becomes South Second Street has one. They light in the order given.

Now we go south to Stone Ave, turn right and drive on to Jackson, turn right and come to the first intersection mentioned. We are one block from those four traffic lights, but we can go on North with no hesitation.

Since there have been several cars made the trip on over the island, and into the home of 619 Jackson, some of which have wrecked the porch there, it seems to be a very serious oversight on the part of someone in not having a definite stop for those coming off the bridge on a feeder line. In travelling over the country from California East, this is the only place I have ever seen such a condition. Why isn't it remedied?

U.S. Defense Pact With Israel Urged

PERHAPS WE should sign that mutual defense pact with Israel — if only for our own self-protection. Let's face it, that was a blood-stirring show she put on against the Egyptian swaggerer with all his Communist tanks and airplanes, and all his jingoistic rodomontade. One can hardly imagine a better military machine to help us out of a jam than Israel's. There is courage, tenacity, single-mindedness, skill — all of them put to essentially non-imperialist uses, if you grant the legitimacy of the Balfour Declaration which at this stage you might just as well do.

Nasser declared that the Mideast was too small an area for the Arabs and for the Israelis, to which the Israelis' only response — always assuming they were not prepared neatly to dismantle their nation and march into the sea — was that under the circumstances, the Arabs would have to move over. After 36 hours of an Israeli blitzkrieg, the Arab braves have stopped war-dancing long enough to discover that they are surrounded by Israelis, and that their great brothers in the Soviet Union were off at the United Nations jawing about cease-fires, and never mind the old borders, the new ones would be perfectly satisfactory.

NOT ONLY MIGHT Israel be of great military help to the United States in any future emergency: there is absolutely no limit to the psychological help she can be. Who else but Israel could have turned our doviest doves into tiger sharks? Who but Israel could, for instance, have persuaded Dwight Macdonald, that eminent pacifist, who walks out of the room rather than listen to Hubert Humphrey because Hubert Humphrey is committed to the proposition that the United States has to help small nations around the world when threatened by aggression: who else but Israel could have transformed Macdonald into the very image of Long John Silver, patch over his eye, dagger between his teeth, napalm grenades in his rucksack, boarding the enemy's ship shouting lustfully Murder! Loot! Rapine! Come one, come all!

Difficult to believe? My friends, Gamal Abdel Nasser accomplished the impossible. We are being told to go out and defend the security and the survival of Israel and its people (which we should certainly do under the existing circumstances) in order to "uphold our own honor." That is the statement actually signed by Dwight Macdonald, who dismisses anyone as mad who brings up the same reasoning applied to South Vietnam. And it isn't only Macdonald. It is the whole clutch of them, who could not care less if it had been the South Vietnamese whose territory was threatened, or whose ports were closed.

A SINGLE advertisement sponsored by the "Americans for Democracy in the Middle East," whose text I myself heartily endorse, is signed by Theodore Draper, critic of LBJ; Michael Harrington, also a pacifist of sorts; Robert Heilbroner, the economist and critic of LBJ; Irving Howe, the critic and editor of "Dissent," which is to the American left what the John Birch Society's "American Opinion" is to the American Right; H. Stuart Hughes, who loveth man so that he would have had the U.S. disarm unilaterally years ago — leaving us, Sir Stuart, with what means of implementing the action you call for now in Israel?; Norman Podheretz of "Commentary," Joe Rauh of the ADA, and so forth and so on.

Any nation with the strength to compel such men as these to start talking in terms of international obligations, the demands of honor, the necessity for the use of force thousands of miles from home, is a priceless national asset, quite apart from the sentimental value of the country. Indeed, one should consider giving to Israel a few square miles of territory in South Vietnam, in West Berlin, in the Straits of Formosa, and at other likely pressure points where East and West are likely to meet on unfriendly terms.

THE BIG QUESTION of course is what will have happened to the bridge-building program with the Soviet Union. The balance of power in the Mideast has been shattered. It is unfortunately true that the stunning victories of the Israelis are not likely to lead to any strategic tranquility. Israel will not settle for the old frontiers, and why indeed should she so long as the Arab determination persists to wipe out the Israeli state? Why not frontiers more easily defended in tomorrow's war? The Arabs will be only temporarily chastened. The battle-cry against Israel — that "foreign body" in the Arabic system — will be as galvanizing as ever, probably the single reliable means of effecting unity among a people atomized by myriad differences.

New frontiers take years and years to consolidate, and during those years the Soviet Union will see itself as de facto defender of the Arab position, the U.S. as de facto defender of the Israeli position, though both sides will feign a certain neutrality and, even, urge restraint upon their proteges. But the fact that the area is in flux will greatly interfere with that tri-continental serenity which has been advertised as the mise en scene for a true detente between East and West, the great stage for what has been described as the big kissing conference LBJ wanted to put on with the Soviet Union via trade, treaties, disarmament and the like. Johnson's difficulties with Russia will now increase. But for a while, anyhow, he has most of the critics of our policy in Vietnam on the run.

Private Mail Delivery

Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien's recent suggestion that mail delivery be turned over to private corporations has stirred a great deal of interest in many areas. There is widespread belief that industry could handle mail more efficiently and at less cost than the federal government and could still make an excellent profit.

Along this line, the Times-Press, newspaper in Hartford, Wis., commented:

"The Postmaster General of the United States has suggested that the Post Office Department be taken out of government and converted into a private corporation.

"We have pushed this idea for many years, feeling that private enterprise, given the budget now allowed to the P.O., would give twice the service and show a nice profit in doing so.

"There would be no 'free rider' in such an operation, as parcel post now is. Either the thing would make a profit or it would be done away with.

"Antiquated methods of operation, antiquated equipment and inefficient operations would be done away in a hurry, and, with the removal of the political yoke around its neck, the results could be nothing but good."

In a good many quarters, there is objection to the amount of third class mail that is handled and the contention that, because this sort of mail does not pay its way, first class mail has to bear a large part of the burden of handling third class mail. It is well known that in many mail boxes each day the bulk of the mail is third class. One man reported he puts first class postage on all the so-called "trash mail" he receives and sends it to President Johnson.

Aside from an expected improvement in mail handling, without frequent increases in postage rates, there would be the advantage of a big decrease in the number of government employes. This would be a movement away from overweighted federal employment and might start a trend that way — as against the present rapidly-increasing number of persons on the federal pay roll.

Debit Limit Refusal

When the House of Representatives, by a vote of 210-197, rocked President Johnson's administration by refusing to increase the Treasury's borrowing authority by a requested $29 billion it took a wise step. The refusal looked something like a vote of no confidence in the administration's wild spending policy.

The action means administration forces will have to try again, with a lower figure, or the government will be unable to pay its bills next month.

Actually, rejection of the hike in the debt limit ceiling was more of a reminder of the House's objection to lavish spending than anything else. There is not much doubt that the administration will get a raise in the debt limit, but not as much. Unless Congress acts on the new increase by June 30, the debt limit will drop automatically to $285 billion, as opposed to the proposed $365 billion. The former figure would be well below the actual debt.

U.S. Warships Ready For Whatever Comes

SEVERAL MONTHS ago, this correspondent happened to be flying from North Africa to Paris, on one of those days of dazzling clarity the Mediterranean does so well. It was a dull flight until the plane abruptly banked.

"Americans seated on the right side of the aircraft," said the pilot, "may wish to see their fleet below."

And there she was — the Sixth Fleet, or part of it, curling a white wake of foam across the blue - black sea. It would have been a poor American, sitting on the right side of that aircraft, who did not feel his heart leap up.

The Sixth was on "normal operations" then, with no edged inflections in the voice. Since the first of this month, the Sixth has been maintaining "normal operations." That is the Pentagon's laconic answer to an inquiring reporter's questions. But it is no secret that the fleet's Task Force 62, hearing 2,000 combat - ready Marines, sailed out of Naples on May 25. A week later, the first four of ten Soviet destroyers, passing through the Bosporous, came to join the party. In a part of the world that has known naval warfare since the days of Persian galleys, the stage is set for fighting ships to go to work once more. The Sixth can handle whatever comes.

IF THAT SOUNDS jingoistic, okay its sounds jingoistic. The Sixth has been living eyeball to eyeball with the Soviets for the past five years. The omnipresent Russian trawlers, loaded with electronic surveillace gear, are seldom out of sight. Yet it is a fair assumption that the Sixth's commanders know as much of the Soviets' movements, including submarine movements, as the Soviets know of ours. It would be a remarkably stupid decision in the Kremlin for the Communist enemy to start a war at sea.

Two attack carriers, America and Saratoga, comprising Carrier Division IV, pack the big wallop. Captain Donald D. Engen, a Californian who holds the Navy Cross for extraordinary heroism at Leyte Gulf, commands the former. Captain Joseph M. Tully, Jr., a New Englander born in Texas, heads the Saratoga. They have 200 aircraft on call, including Phantoms, Crusaders and Skyhawks.

WORKING CLOSELY with the carriers is a cruiser - destroyer flotilla. Here the big ships are Little Rock and Galveston, commanded by Captain John J. Mitchell of Pennsylvania and Captain Merrill H. Sappington of Georgia. Each of the cruisers packs a pair of Talos missiles and some serviceable six-inch guns. The missiles, slim as arrows and wicked as snakes, were designed for surface-to-air protection, but they can be used as well in shore bombardment from ranges up to 75 miles.

Russian Satellites Lead Those Of U.S.

THE SOVIET UNION'S satellites are more numerous than ever over the United States.

So far during 1967, the Russians have orbited 26 unmanned satellities — all without advance announcement, or any details of size or mission.

That's an average of about one every six days.

In comparison to this new Soviet launching record, the United States has orbited 17 satellites during the same period.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has launched seven satellities and provided launch vehicles for four non-NASA missions this year. The Air Force has orbited six others.

WHILE ALL OF the Communist satellites are being tracked around-the-clock, the missions of only half of the Soviet craft are known to United States authorities.

A dozen of the Russian vehicles are believed to be "spy" satellites because of their low perigees—about 120 to 130 miles and their precise trajectory.

From French scientists who were permitted to watch one launching from Tyuratam, which is used also for manned Soviet space experiments, it was learned that another is a communication satellite.

The mission of the remaining 13 satellites still baffles United States authorities, although there is unconfirmed evidence that several of the orbiting vehicles are actually prototypes of nuclear weapons' carriers.

This ominous possibility is being carefully checked by United States space experiments. After the Russians launched three satellites in a five-day period at the start of the Middle East crisis, the Air Force orbited one of its detection vehicles on May 22 from Vandenberg Air Force base in California.

THE MISSION — Mission of the Air Force satellite was to find out if there were nuclear materials aboard the three Soviet satellites.

To the great relief of intelligence authorities, none was detected by the sensitive Air Force satellite, which can pinpoint atomic weapons or other nuclear materials by the rays they emit in space.

Close - up photographs did show that the three Soviet satellites were remarkably like the two the Russians shattered into a number of pieces over the United States last year.

In non - technical terms, the Russians were testing the separation in flight at a pre-determined time and location of a "cluster of satellities," each capable of carrying a nuclear warhead.

Such a menacing accomplishment, according to United States military - space scientists, would enable the Soviets to launch a satellite set to reach a certain point over the United States and then direct nuclear bombs at targets across the country from New York to California.

'There's Always Uncle Sam'

There was a time when the United States, which frequently went to the assistance of England and France, could depend on those nations for help in handling the world situation. Now, France, under President Charles de Gaulle, has become a "lone wolf," with friendy actions toward Russia. England is "pulling in its horns" and there is grave doubt that it will ever again act militarily except in direct self - defense. Australia, long protected by Britain's widespread troop and naval wings, has been rudely awakened to the fact that it can no longer depend on that protection.

In 1956, when the situation in the Middle East was much the same as it is now and when Israel and the Arab countries were embroiled in war, England joined the United States in telling the Arab nations to "lay off." At that time, President Dwight D. Eisenhower gave Israel assurance that the United States would keep the Gulf of Aqaba open. Eisenhower then undoubtedly expected Britain would join in whatever action was necessary to keep the gulf open.

The question is, what would England do now if the situation should become explosive again? Also being highly debated is the question of what the United States can or should do. We can be certain France won't give us any assistance in holding back communist advances, unless it happens to serve its own purpose. We can't be certain that England would give any help.

This virtually leaves the United States alone in its policing job if it attempts to continue that role.

The United States now pays 33 per cent of the cost of maintaining the United Nations and gets nothing in return. The United Nations is valuless as a peace-keeping agency and in helping to preserve the independence of nations. Under U Thant, it has acted more to enslave nations.

In Australia, one expressed what seems to be the concensus of his countrymen when he said:

"I suppose the days of looking to Mother England are over."

He said this slowly, as if he had come to a hard conclusion after days of agonizing indecision.

He had expressed with earthy simplicity what the members of parliament in Canberra had been saying for weeks to each other and their 12,000,000 constituents: The day is near at hand when Australia will have to face the real world, an alien Asia, and face it pretty much alone.

"We've relied on the might and protection of Britain far too long," Sir Wilfred Kent-Hughes, a member of the national House of Representatives from the state of Victoria, told his colleagues. Britain just can't afford to keep big forces east of Suez. Australia must see the position with realism and face the responsibilities."

Britain's decision to cut sharply its troop strength in Malaysia and Singapore has hit Australia like a slap in the face. Asia without the British tommy? The South Seas without the majestic Union Jack fluttering from a fleet of imperial ships? In Melbourne, Australia's most important commercial center and the nation's most graceful city, the astonishment, disbelief and incredulity is complete.

What Britain proposes to do seems clear enough. It intends to cut its Malaysia - Singapore garrison this year by 30,000 soldiers. This would leave about 20,000 men in Singapore but there are hints that these will go soon too. These troops cost Britain about $225 million last year.

One of the ironies in Australia, amusing in a bitter, wry sort of way, is that colonial Britain is, for once, being begged to stay by her erstwhile colonial subjects. They don't want "freedom."

Another irony in Britain's inability to keep troops around the world is that, after World War II, the United States joined with Russia in demanding that England be divested of its colony empire. Naturally, with not much of an empire left and not receiving much revenue from what is left, England is no longer able to retain a force sufficient to enable it to retain the title of Queen of the Seas.

But we are wondering just how for Uncle Sam can or should go without an ally.

Views Of Our Readers

SBC And NCC

Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

Recently the Southern Baptist Convention was held at Miami Beach, Florida. The convention approved a motion to take a "hard" look at U.S. involvment in Vietnam. They also approved what I never expected to see in the Southern Baptist, integration. This disturbed me greatly because of my church membership in the Southern Baptist Convention. I certainly do not approve of integration of any races in our schools or churches, be they white and black, yellow and black, or any other combination of mongrelization. I would not have been surprised at all to hear this from the National Council of Churches, but it is quite a shock to hear it from the SBC. Also, by a vote 264-189 the Louisiana Annual Methodist Conference approved integration of their churches.

Three years ago it was clear to everyone what was happening in America. Or maybe it wasn't so clear! Some people couldn't hardly believe that Congress could pass such a socialistic piece of "legislation" as the Civil Rights Bill of 1964. The 1964 Civil Rights Bill is a blank check for dictatorship which cancels out more major individual freedoms, according to a past president of the American Bar Association, than all the bills ever passed by Congress since the inception of our republic.

We are now told whom we can hire, who we can serve, who must go to school with our children, and now even high religious officials are duped into accepting the doctrines which have been laid out by the collectivist conspirators in the U.S. since Dr. Harry F. Ward set up the first Communist-front, the Methodist Federation for Social Service, in America in 1907. (Notice that this was 12 years before the organization of the Communist Party, U.S.A. in 1919.) Next he set up the Federal Council of Churches in 1908. In 1950, in Cleveland, Ohio, the FCC changed its name to what is now called the National Council of Churches. Dr. Ward, a communist, still lives today, and was the first man believed to bring the Communist cancer to American soil. The National Council of Churches has openly advocated U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, admission of Red China to the UN, racial integration, and (get this) abolition of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. At one time the NCC sent 75 lobbyists to Washington to try to stir up sentiment to get out of Vietnam. On another occasion, the Council sent 100 lobbysits to Washington to try to create emotions for the abolition of the HUAC. This only a mere sample of the action of the National Council of Churches. The Council sent 300 lobbyists to Washington for the passage of the Civil Rights Bill. All of this violates Internal Revenue Code, but nothing is done about it. Why?

No one in Washington seems to care about it; that is, as long as it is something from the "liberal" crowd. All the time they were in Washington, they were claiming to represent 40 million Protestants. The National Council does not represent 40 million Protestants, and it is a completely false statement when they say that they do. Members of individual churches cannot help it if their church is affiliated with the NCC. But they can pull out any time. I don't think that the majority of the people who belong to churches belonging to the NCC think along the same lines as the NCC. I don't even think 5 per cent of them do. But the great danger of the socialist - riddled leadership is that they "claim" to represent them. You ought to see some of the publications that they recommend for children from Junior High on down. Many written by known communists such as Langston Hughes and W. E. B. DuBois. (Incidently, W. E. B. DuBois, a self-admitted Communist, was the ONLY Negro of the seven men who founded the NAACP. The rest were WHITE men. Negroes are not allowed to become president of the organization.)

The centralized welfare state brings slavery in the ultimate end, not freedom. Property rights are the very basis of human rights. The right of self-determination of associates is the very essence of human dignity. Forced equality is false equality and is not democracy, but dictatorship. Forced equality is not freedom, but in the end, slavery. Freedom is not free, free men are not equal, and equal men are not free!

This all goes to prove that if the socialist - minded in government today, cannot get what they want done by means of legislation, such as integration of churches, they will find some other way. This is the way the liberal mind works.

There is courage, tenacity, single-mindedness, skill — all of them put to essentially non-imperialist uses, if you grant the legitimacy of the Balfour Declaration which at this stage you might just as well do.

Nasser declared that the Mideast was too small an area for the Arabs and for the Israelis, to which the Israelis' only response — always assuming they were not prepared neatly to dismantle their nation and march into the sea — was that under the circumstances, the Arabs would have to move over. After 36 hours of an Israeli blitzkrieg, the Arab braves have stopped war-dancing long enough to discover that they are surrounded by Israelis, and that their great brothers in the Soviet Union were off at the United Nations jawing about cease-fires, and never mind the old borders, the new ones would be perfectly satisfactory.

NOT ONLY MIGHT Israel be of great military help to the United States in any future emergency: there is absolutely no limit to the psychological help she can be. Who else but Israel could have turned our doviest doves into tiger sharks? Who but Israel could, for instance, have persuaded Dwight Macdonald, that eminent pacifist, who walks out of the room rather than listen to Hubert Humphrey because Hubert Humphrey is committed to the proposition that the United States has to help small nations around the world when threatened by aggression: who else but Israel could have transformed Macdonald into the very image of Long John Silver, patch over his eye, dagger between his teeth, napalm grenades in his rucksack, boarding the enemy's ship shouting lustfully Murder! Loot! Rapine! Come one, come all!

Difficult to believe? My friends, Gamal Abdel Nasser accomplished the impossible. We are being told to go out and defend the security and the survival of Israel and its people (which we should certainly do under the existing circumstances) in order to "uphold our own honor." That is the statement actually signed by Dwight Macdonald, who dismisses anyone as mad who brings up the same reasoning applied to South Vietnam. And it isn't only Macdonald. It is the whole clutch of them, who could not care less if it had been the South Vietnamese whose territory was threatened, or whose ports were closed.

A SINGLE advertisement sponsored by the "Americans for Democracy in the Middle East," whose text I myself heartily endorse, is signed by Theodore Draper, critic of LBJ; Michael Harrington, also a pacifist of sorts; Robert Heilbroner, the economist and critic of LBJ; Irving Howe, the critic and editor of "Dissent," which is to the American left what the John Birch Society's "American Opinion" is to the American Right; H. Stuart Hughes, who loveth man so that he would have had the U.S. disarm unilaterally years ago — leaving us, Sir Stuart, with what means of implementing the action you call for now in Israel?; Norman Podheretz of "Commentary," Joe Rauh of the ADA, and so forth and so on.

Any nation with the strength to compel such men as these to start talking in terms of international obligations, the demands of honor, the necessity for the use of force thousands of miles from home, is a priceless national asset, quite apart from the sentimental value of the country. Indeed, one should consider giving to Israel a few square miles of territory in South Vietnam, in West Berlin, in the Straits of Formosa, and at other likely pressure points where East and West are likely to meet on unfriendly terms.

THE BIG QUESTION of course is what will have happened to the bridge-building program with the Soviet Union. The balance of power in the Mideast has been shattered. It is unfortunately true that the stunning victories of the Israelis are not likely to lead to any strategic tranquility. Israel will not settle for the old frontiers, and why indeed should she so long as the Arab determination persists to wipe out the Israeli state? Why not frontiers more easily defended in tomorrow's war? The Arabs will be only temporarily chastened. The battle-cry against Israel — that "foreign body" in the Arabic system — will be as galvanizing as ever, probably the single reliable means of effecting unity among a people atomized by myriad differences.

New frontiers take years and years to consolidate, and during those years the Soviet Union will see itself as de facto defender of the Arab position, the U.S. as de facto defender of the Israeli position, though both sides will feign a certain neutrality and, even, urge restraint upon their proteges. But the fact that the area is in flux will greatly interfere with that tricontinental serenity which has been advertised as the mise en scene for a true detente between East and West, the great stage for what has been described as the big kissing conference LBJ wanted to put on with the Soviet Union via trade, treaties, disarmament and the like. Johnson's difficulties with Russia will now increase. But for a while, anyhow, he has most of the critics of our policy in Vietnam on the run.

Russian Satellites Lead Those Of U.S.

THE SOVIET UNION'S satellites are more numerous than ever over the United States.

So far during 1967, the Russians have orbited 26 unmanned satellities — all without advance announcement, or any details of size or mission.

That's an average of about one every six days.

In comparison to this new Soviet launching record, the United States has orbited 17 satellites during the same period.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has launched seven satellities and provided launch vehicles for four non-NASA missions this year. The Air Force has orbited six others.

WHILE ALL OF the Communist satellites are being tracked around-the-clock, the missions of only half of the Soviet craft are known to United States authorities.

A dozen of the Russian vehicles are believed to be "spy" satellites because of their low perigees—about 120 to 130 miles and their precise trajectory.

From French scientists who were permitted to watch one launching from Tyuratam, which is used also for manned Soviet space experiments, it was learned that another is a communication satellite.

The mission of the remaining 13 satellites still baffles United States authorities, although there is unconfirmed evidence that several of the orbiting vehicles are actually prototypes of nuclear weapons' carriers.

This ominous possibility is being carefully checked by United States space experiments. After the Russians launched three satellites in a five-day period at the start of the Middle East crisis, the Air Force orbited one of its detection vehicles on May 22 from Vandenberg Air Force base in California.

THE MISSION — Mission of the Air Force satellite was to find out if there were nuclear materials aboard the three Soviet satellites.

To the great relief of intelligence authorities, none was detected by the sensitive Air Force satellite, which can pinpoint atomic weapons or other nuclear materials by the rays they emit in space.

Close - up photographs did show that the three Soviet satellites were remarkably like the two the Russians shattered into a number of pieces over the United States last year.

In non - technical terms, the Russians were testing the separation in flight at a pre-determined time and location of a "cluster of satellities," each capable of carrying a nuclear warhead.

Such a menacing accomplishment, according to United States military - space scientists, would enable the Soviets to launch a satellite set to reach a certain point over the United States and then direct nuclear bombs at targets across the country from New York to California.

Holy Land History Full Of Dreams, Visions Fighting

By Jack Gates

Sunday Thought

As for man his days are as grass; as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. The wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more.

Turning To The Bible

If it accomplished nothing else, the fighting between the Israelis and Arabs the past week sent many people to the Bible in an effort to see if they could find the answers to a number of puzzling questions.

Many of the answers are there, but, as in all things, the answer obtained depended upon individual beliefs.

Regardless of what may happen in the future, or what will be the final outcome of the conflict and the peace negotiations there were many who were not surprised at the speed with which the Israeli Army moved during the lightning-like war. It was and is their firm belief that the God of Abraham was again "leading his people" and that Israel as a nation will never again be destroyed.

Nevertheless there is something about the small nation and its dedicated people that often puzzles most of the world.

It's establishment in 1948 was a miracle in the minds of many and its accomplishments in those short years since are almost unbelievable. This is the third war its people have had to fight for their very survival against tremendous odds of more than 80 to one.

Religious Motheriand

War in this particular area always holds keen interest for nearly everyone. It is the religious motherland of Jehovah, Allah and the Christ, of the Commandments and the Cross.

It is a haunting region of colliding opposites, of sea and desert, of mountains and salty depths, of flood and drought, of hot days, chill nights, of the message of peace and a record of war.

An old Talmudic legend says that in the creation of the world, when God commanded, "Let there be light," it first shone forth from Mt. Moriah, the commanding heights of Jerusalem, where another kind of brightness flared there the past week — the flash of bursting artillery shells.

Last weeks war was a new, shuddering chapter in the strange, world-shaking history of that famed city and the volatile land surrounding it. It is a puzzling potent place, laden with paradoxes.

Take the City of Jerusalem. Small, seemingly remote from modern fulcrums of power, it nevertheless has swayed the course of mankind, from the first. From that place have come humanity's loftiest visions, and also some of its harshest debacles.

The Holy City, literally the name means the "City of God" or "Hearth of God," is cloaked in mystery. Not even the Bible tells how it came to be established. When the Holy Book pickups the story, Jerusalem was already in existence and a high priest lived there.

Noble Dreams

But it is a realm of ultimate, of noble dreams and bitter furies, of the best and the worst, of the firsts and lasts. From that unique city, located in a most unusual place almost the geographical center of the earth's land masses, have come the earliest traces of civilized life on earth, and there, according to The Bible, and accepted by Jews, Moslems and Christians, life will reach its finish in total judgment.

Again and again, through the long centuries, Jerusalem has risen and fallen, by catapult, fire and sword. The strange handiwork wrought there has threaded through the world, through time and distance, shaping the ethical pillars of civilized life, but also firing misconceived intolerance, aggressions and carnage.

This land produced monotheism — belief in the one God, the cradle of faith of nearly a billion present-day Christians, 13 million Jews and almost half a billion Moslems.

It has lifted hearts, emblazoned principles of justice, inspired compassion, learning and heroism, stirred revolutions, shifted national borders, and also provoked enmities, violence and death. Armies that moved there this past week were only the latest in an immemorial file of marching troops — of Jews, Babylonians, Assyrians, Persians, Macedonians, Egyptians, Romans, and later, of Moslems, Christians Crusaders and British marines.

It was also in this rugged land of beautiful starry nights, lonely hills and desert days that The Christ was born — the Christ who taught love, goodwill and peace. But the misunderstood Galilean did not find it either — only death on a cross against the stark sky in the midst of two thieves.

The land itself is a paradox. Beautiful in a strange and awesome way, but hard on its inhabitants. And at first glance it is hardly worth fighting over. But in all, probably more wars have been fought over it than any other area — or for that matter — many areas of the world combined.

Once Called Canaan

It once was called Canaan. The 17th chapter of the Book of Genesis says that God gave "all the land of Canaan" to the patriarch Abraham "for an ever lasting possession. . .to you and to your descendants after you. . ." and it was in that intriguing region that the covenant was made.

That should have ended it, but it didn't since both Jews and Arabs claim to be the descendants of Abraham, although one group obviously was cast off.

The Jews trace their ancestry through Isaac, the son born to Abraham by his legal wife, Sarah. Arabs trace their line through Ishmael, Abraham's son by a serving girl whom he took as his concubine when Sarah seemed barren.

After Sarah had a son of her own, she made her husband drive Ishmael and his mother away. Thus, antagonism between Jews and Arabs can be said to go all the way back to their earliest ancestors.

Isaac had two sons — Esau and Jacob. Esau, the first - born, was Isaac's natural heir, and inheritor of the Abrahamic Promises. These were that his descendants should inherit the land of Canaan; they should become a great nation and through them all nations should be blessed.

But the Bible says that God, knowing before they were born, the qualities of the two men, chose Jacob to be transmitter of the precious heritage. In the Line of Promise, all Abraham's sons were eliminated except Isaac. Of Isaac's sons, Esau was eliminated, and Jacob chosen. With Jacob the eliminating process stopped, and all of Jacob's descendants were included in the Chosen Nation.

God gave Jacob the nickname Israel, "he who strives with God." As a result the descendants of Jacob came to be known as the children of Israel and eventually took over the land.

Even to Jacob the land was puzzling. "Surely the Lord is in this place," he once declared, trembling after his dream of a sparkling stairway let down from heaven. "How awesome is this place."

Went To Egypt

About 1650 B. C. famine drove the Israelites out of Canaan. They settled in Egypt, where they first were treated well, but later were reduced to slavery.

For 400 years the children of Israel lived in bondage in Egypt. Then God sent Moses to lead them out of Egypt to return to the "Promised Land of Canaan" with a promise he would be with them. His aim was for them to be exponents of the one God and to produce the Savior.

The Biblical book of Exodus describes how the Israelities wandered in the wilderness for 40 years because of their sins and after God had repeatedly protected them to the degree of drowning an Egyptian army in the Red Sea that had pursued them. The wilderness through which they trekked was the Sinai Peninsula, one of the key battlefields of last week's fighting.

Moses died during this time and was succeeded by Joshua, Israel's first great field general. He took the route back to Canaan that took his army through the Negev Desert, which also figures prominently in the latest war. After the Israelites were firmly established in Canaan, they continued to have trouble with the Philistines, the forerunners of many of today's Arabs, who clung to a strip of land along the shore in approximately the same area as the present Gaza Strip. Its capital, then as now, was the city of Gaza.

After many trials and tribulations, by 1,000 B. C. the 12 tribes of Israel had been welded into one kingdom under the Great King David, a man the Bible said was one of the greatest in God's sight.

David finally selected the City of Jerusalem as his capital and from that day on, it has been the heart-rendering core of Jewish existence and love.

Glittering City

David's extravagant son, King Solomon, turned Jerusalem into the most glittering city of the Middle East and built the nation of Israel into a magnificent empire. He built himself a lavish palace, in which gold leaf was used for wallpaper, and also put up a great temple, which became the focal point of Jewish piety. It was located on Mt. Moriah. From then until now there have been a succession of temples and mosques and many believe the Scriptures teach that in the last days, the Jews again will raise a temple on the site.

The site is also sacred to Moslems. They believe that on this oddly provocative place the Prophet Mohammed mounted his favorite mare before ascending to heaven.

After the reign of Solomon, the nation had its ups and downs and shortly thereafter split into two kingdoms, the northern and southern. Both eventually were eliminated by the Assyrians and Babylonians because the Bible says of the collective sins of the people against God.

After that period of exile, many of the Jews returned to their land, but never in the sense of a nation. But Jerusalem was always in their hearts wherever they were. This was also true of Islam which draws its faith from the same time-rooted religious ancestry, regarding the sixth century Mohammad as the latest in a prophetic line of Adam, Noah, Abraham, and Moses. And throughout the long centuries, the Arabs and Jews have fought over the hallowed territory.

In 70 A. D. the Romans finally smashed the ancient Jewish area, including Jerusalem, dispersing the Jews throughout the world. For the next several hundreds of years, the land was ruled alternately by Moslems, European Crusaders and Moslems until 1948 when the nation of Israel was reestablished, although on a much smaller scale than before. Their history from the time they were dispersed by the Romans until now was filled for the most part with misery, persecution and death.

The present nation, born in the mist of war and what many consider a miracle, continues to have to fight for its very existance.

The recapture of the old City of Jerusalem the past week was the first time it had been held by Jews for some 2000 years and was therefore a tremendously symbolic victory for Israeli troops.

Many Traditions

So there is no doubt but what it is steeped in history. Tradition holds that the first man, Adam, lies buried at the city's site, and there in the Valley of Jehosphaphat outside the eastern walls, prophecy says that mankind will be assembled at the end of time for judgment.

It continues to bear a curious image, both antecedent and of destiny. In its outlying area, the sands of the Tigris-Euphrates Valley, now Iraq, from whence the nomadic Abraham came from Ur of the Chaldees, have yielded the oldest discovered implements fabricated by man's hands.

Even in the dimmer mists of time, the rainbow of promise shone after Noah's ark of "gopher Wood" had ridden out the flood — signs of which have been found in the sediments of Mesopotamia.

With all of Jerusalem in their hands once again, it is very doubtful the Jews will ever relinquish it as long as they are a nation and a people. It was promised them after the 1948 conflict, but Jordan then refused to give it up. And odds are if they can manage to hold on to it, a new, shinning temple probably will be built on the old site — the site where ideals were born, where passions flamed, and where armies clashed through the centuries. About this Holy spot, and surrounding area, the prophets foretold the day when men would "beat swords into ploughshares" and make war no more.

That day will come as God's words always come true, they say.

But as of now the place where the beacon of truth once shone, peace is still defiled and will be for sometime to come.

The World's Week In Focus

Israelis Win Quick War With Arabs As UN Tries To Find Peace Formula

DAVID has felled Goliath again in the Bible lands.

But, though the shooting stops, the war is not over. New trouble is just about to start. For years, nations large and small will be plagued by repercussions of a dramatic week. Problems it generated are formidable. Many of the questions it raised are unanswerable.

Destroyed Myths

Israel's lighting war destroyed some myths.

First there was the myths of Arab solidarity and of an Arab "liberator." Gamal Abdel Nasser, once hailed as the hero of all Arabs, has been obliged to confess he was to blame for their humiliation — even to offer his resignation as Egypt's president.

His confession leaves Arabs bereft. There is no single leader who can take his place. The shock can impel the Arabs once again to fall apart, as they did after past crises, and fight among themselves.

SECOND, there was the West's myth of "maintaining an arms balance" in the Middle East. That went up in smoke. British, American and French arms in Israeli hands battled British and American arms in Jordan's hands. Israel's Western weapons were used against both Western and Soviet weapons in Egypt and Syria. The "balance" was meaningless. The Middle East looked like a test laboratory for World War III.

Third, there was the Communist myth: that a heavy influx of expensive Soviet armament was enough to protect and build up a protege to the point where he became a reliable ally.

So far as the nervous onlookers among the major powers are concerned, it will take a long time to analyze the week's balance sheet.

Israeli Blitz

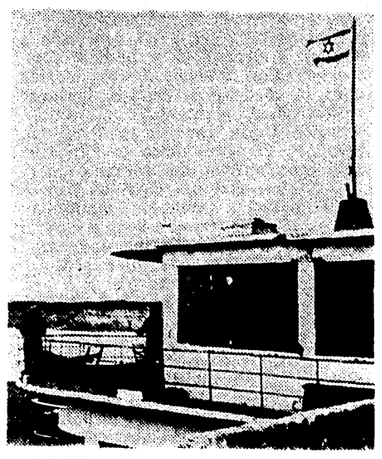
Israel's blitz of her neighbors took the United States off the hook of an uncomfortable dilemma. Israel did not need intervention to save her from the destruction threatened by the Arabs. But relations of Arab nations with Washington have been badly damaged. Even partial repair will take a long time. Meanwhile, the area's oceans of oil reserves and geographic position astride trade routes remain vitally important to the West for the foreseeable future.

THE Soviet Union emerges with scars. Moscow showed the flag in the Mediterrean, but when the chips were down, Moscow once again — five years after the Cuban missiles confrontation — backed away from a showdown. Arabs, seeking excuses for the defeat, surely will feel the Kremlin pulled the rug from under them. The Soviet Union's image is damaged among the impatient, Communist-inspired revolutionaries of Asia, Africa and Latin America, among whom Red China seeks commanding influence.

Worry Over Oil

Western Europe has reason to worry about Middle East oil, if the Arab grudge persuades producing countries to withhold the fuel regardless of damage to their own economies. A long-term disruption could mean emergency in Western Europe and sharp increases in the cost of transporting fuel from other sources.

EGYPT, Syria and Jordan were severely damaged. As one Cairo diplomat put it, "Imagine, hundreds of millions of dollars worth of Soviet equipment lost by the Egyptians in less than a week.' Nasser, his economy hurt, lacking the means to replace the arms and with his leadership position severely dented, had no place to go.



AFTER A victorious week, the Israeli flag flies over the former Egyptian control point at Sharm el Sheikh, overlooking the Strait of Tiran, the blockade of which, was one of the things that touched off the war.

Syria, which made the most warlike noises of all the Arabs and which was largely responsible for the crisis leading to war, has been humiliated and shaken. Its Moscow-leaning regime may pay the penalty. Its economy is bleeding.

At least pending negotiations, Jordan has lost its territory west of the Jordan River. Eventually, the Arabs are likely to make young King Hussein a scapegoat for their humiliation, since his arms and support came from the United States and Britain.

Not Involved

Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, long involved in political war with Egypt's Nasser, also will be the butt of agitation, even though he proclaimed his country's armed support for the joint Arab cause. Saudi Arabia already is suffering severely from loss of oil revenues as a result of the crisis, and the wrench to its economy can cause dangerous political ferment.

Iraq depends for practically all her foreign exchange and more than half her national budget on her oil exports. These have been shut off. The country's shaky regime already faces revolutionary trouble from Kurdish tribes. It faces a perilous future.

EVEN Israel, the brilliant victor, acquires new problems. If she tries to keep such territory as the west bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip on her southwest Mediterranean coast, she will add 1.5 million bitterly hostile Arabs, including displaced refugees, to her population of 2.5 million. To say nothing of economic problems involved, controlling them will be an enormous security problem which may require drastic police-state methods.

Israel willl want to keep much of the territory she conquered, to relieve herself of a constant border threat, and, as one Israeli officer put it, to impress upon the Arabs that Israel "simply will not be driven into the sea."

This means new and virtually insoluble disputes for the United Nations, new big-power quarrels arising from the wreckage of Arab hopes.

WHAT happens to the territory Isreal conquered? Can she be forced out, even should the United Nations find the unanimity to try? How can Israel and the Arabs be sealed off from one another to prevent new dangers to world peace? Will Israel, flushed with victory, accept a U.N. force on her side of the frontiers? Will Israel insist on a toehold on the Gulf of Aqaba to insure her free use of it?

Those are some of the questions which only events can answer. There is even a question about future Israeli-U.S. relations, and the test will come when the big powers search for answers.

Lasting Peace

The United States seeks to work for lasting peace in the Middle East. But lasting peace is an elusive goal. A state of war still exists between the Arabs and Israel. Armistices and cease-fires do not mean peace. If the United States wants peace in the area, what does it offer the Arabs, to whom settlement means nothing short of restoring displaced Arabs to Palestine? And can it offer anything without offending Israel?

Arab sources gloomily predict an indefinite future of constant tension, and even now dream of a war that profits from the disastrous mistakes of this one. That may be a long, long way off, but the tension will be a constant reality.

THE Arabs, feeling forsaken and betrayed, claim to see not the faintest hope for lasting peace. They vow they will make no peace and that they will resist all efforts to impose one. In their present state of bitterness, they claim that even though they hurt themselves they can, in revenge against the Americans and the West, hold out for a long time in their determination to stop the flow of oil.

Probably, however, that deceptively solid-looking front will be broken. It is the history of the Arabs to fall apart among themselves when the cement of active hostility against Israel is removed from the flimsy structure of "Arab unity."

Power Contest

The big-power contest over the Middle East will continue. In fact, it probably will be intensified.

Moscow will want to try to recoup its losses of prestige by vociferous support of Arab claims in the United Nations, by demanding Israel's return to her antebellum lines, even though they know they hardly achieve that short of risking a new world war.

Moscow has been stung sharply by the week's events. Once again the Kremlin is the target of violent propaganda from Red China, accusing it of "sham support" of the Arabs and of acting in collusion with the Americans. Fidel Castro's Communists in Cuba have already indicated their scorn of the Soviet role in the crisis. The Arabs have made their disillusionment plain.

THE Arabs have little to console themselves with in their misery. Turning toward Red China would do them little good, since China can hardly provide what the Russians did.

Probably, they will turn inward now, to nurse their wounds and, eventually, to begin once again fighting and plotting against one another, and adding to the instability of an already unstable and highly sensitive area of the world.

The world has a chilling thought to live with. Some day Red China may be in a position to offer the Arabs an atomic weapon. Perhaps by that time Israel might also have one.

Monday, June 5: War on three fronts-- Israel's borders with Jordan, Syria and the U.A.R. Israeli armor began its shattering advance against Egyptian tanks in the Sinai Desert and surrounded the city of Gaza in the Gaza Strip. Fighting occurred in Jerusalem. Israel's air raids gave it early air superiority over the Arabs. Syrians and Jordanians shelled Israel.

Tuesday, June 6 U. N. Security Council unanimously called for immediate cease-fire as Israelis advanced deeper into the U.A.R. and Jordan. Egypt closed Suez Canal, charging Israel was receiving air support from Britain and the United States. They heatedly denied this. In "retaliation," Arab countries broke off diplomatic relations with them, imposed an oil embargo and mobs attacked U. S. and British embassies in Arab capitals.

Wednesday, June 7 Israelis fought to within 21 miles of the Suez canal and captured the Egyptian fortress of Sharm el Sheikh, breaking the blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba. They occupied the old city of Jerusalem and captured the Jordanian town of Nablus, 30 miles to the north. Syrian and Jordanian shelling of Israel continued. Radio Amman said Jordan would accept the cease-fire although King Hussein appealed for war.

Thursday, June 8 — U.A.R. said it would accept the cease-fire after an Egyptian counter-attack failed and most of Sinai lay in Israeli hands. Israelis occupied virtually all Jordanian territory west of the River Jordan. Fighting continued on the Syrian front. Israel said it would accept the cease-fire if the Arabs did. Israel mistakenly bombed a U. S. Navy ship in the Mediterranean, killing 10 Americans and wounding 100.

Friday, June 9: Syria joined the U.A.R. and Jordan in saying it would agree to the cease-fire. Then fighting flared up. Each side claimed the other had violated the cease-fire.

Viet War Slows

While the Mideast was aflame and the world's attention drawn to that arena, the war in Vietnam seemed to slow down.

There was less action on the ground than had been the case for weeks. One big battle Thursday centered at Khe Sanh in the extreme northwest corner of South Vietnam. A Marine company killed 63 North Vietnamese soldiers in an 80-minute battle. American losses were 18 Marines killed and 27 wounded.

A minor and little-noted war-like campaign erupted far from these battle fronts, in New Mexico of all places. There, a band of some 40 New Mexicans swooped down on a county courthouse in a shooting raid in which they freed 10 of their number. Known as the Confederation of Free City States, the band was pursued in the wild and mountainous northern part of the state by National Guardsmen and state policemen. Members of the confederation claim they are heirs of Spaniards who were granted land holdings and that they have a hereditary right to the land.

Luckily, it happened during the daylight, otherwise a 15,000-square-mile area of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware would have had a taste of what befell New York in the Great Blackout of November 1965. Again, there was a power failure along an interconnected system. All the things that depended upon electricity to hum, turn, stop, go, just didn't. By 8:15 p.m., however, the public Service Electric & Gas Co. of New Jersey reported that power to its consumers had been restored. The failure was blamed on heat and crossed power lines.

Mute and expressionless, the 25-year-old drifter stood before Circuit Court Judge Herbert C. Paschen in Peoria, Ill., a town in which he stood trial because it was feared Chicagoans would be too impassioned to give him a fair hearing. Richard F. Speck had been found guilty in the murders of eight young nurses and the judge was to set the penalty. Judge Paschen told Speck he must die in the electric chair Sept. 1.

Quote of the Week

"We have returned to the holiest of our holy places, never to depart from it again." — Maj. Gen. Moshe Dayan, Israeli defense minister, as Israeli forces occupied the Old City of Jerusalem.

Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Last week was a big one for big building begun or in prospect locally, in the parish, throughout the area. Here at home, James W. Moore, oil company executive and state official, signed contracts, together with the Moody Brothers of Houston Tex., equal partners in the venture, for construction of a $2.5 million Ramada Inn.

To be located near the junction of U.S. 165 and I-20, the colonially-designed hostelry, when completed in 14 months, will count in its complex a total of 265 rooms with every modern related facility. The major portion of the inn, however — 155 rooms, dining hall and administrative offices — will be completed in time for the Louisiana Municipal Association. Next spring's April 25-27 convention of Planners envision the area around the inn as a major new commercial sector.

In the area, at Crossett, Ark., officials of the Georgia-Pacific Corporation announced a proposed $75-million expansion of its pulp, paper and board manufacturing facilities. Construction probably would begin late this year. Details were revealed at a meeting of Crossett civic leaders as the first move toward a proposed "Act 9 no-risk, no-tax" bond issue to finance the work. Rebuilding and enlargement of capacity is planned, along with new equipment and expansion. Crossett Mayor Vaskell Carter promised an early city council meeting to act on a bond election. Such issues in the past have provided 700 new jobs, in addition to construction payrolls.

Meanwhile, from Baton Rouge, came a joint statement from Gov. John McKeithen and the president of the Laurens Glass Company, Laurens, S.C., the two announcing contract-letting on a multi million-dollar glass container plant for the Ruston-Simsboro area. The 200,000-square-foot facility initially will employ 100 skilled and semi-skilled workers from the area, a figure due to grow in the early '70s beyond 500 men and women. The step represents the company second major expansion in its southwestern market area in the past eight years, President E. D. Easterby said.

Back home again, another group was readying itself for building in the $1-million category. The Ouachita Parish School Board by name, it voted Tuesday night to sell at an interest rate of 4.3522 per cent the last $1-million of certificates in a 1961 $7-million bond issue. Principal project on the drawing board is a junior high school addition to the elementary facilities at Jack Hayes in Ward 1. The sale will cost the board in excess of $512,000 interest over the notes' 20-year life and Ward 5's M. L. Owens Jr. abstained from voting in the decision to go ahead. Amid reports that the Middle East crisis had jammed money costs upwards, Supt. Milton C. Hall conceded, "This is the highest we've ever paid."

Building — road building — was Topic A in two other stories of a busy week.

Highway Board Vice Chairman Moore, mentioned earlier, disclosed that a contract on the long - awaited four-laning of U.S. Hwy. 80 through West Monroe will be let in July. Cost of the widening, from North Seventh Street to the Wells Road, is estimated at $1.2 million, and accompanies recently - contracted four-laning of North Seventh from Hwy. 80 to the Arkansas Road. Moore also revealed that right-of-way acquisition is due to start next month for the Breard to Louisville phase of Monroe's $3 million north-south expressway connecting I-20 and Hwy. 80; he stated further that bids will be taken June 21 on a railroad underpass at Louisiana Tech in Ruston, and that plans on the I-20's Garrett Road interchange in Monroe are under preparation.

Monroe city building during the review period included commencement of work on a 40-project 1967 street improvement program. Street Commissioner W. D. H. Rodriguez had good news too, predicting completion of 1966 programs sometime in July. Target dates on the latter were around June 1, but the commissioner said, in effect, his hands are tied due to the unattractive nature of street programs to bidders.

VARIED VISITORS

Visitors to the Twin Cities and area last week were as varied as they were numerous. State officials, with the 30-day fiscal Legislature ended Tuesday, were on the hustings, led by the governor, shirtsleeving it for an after-dinner talk to the Louisiana Commercial Agriculturists Association at Lake Providence.

The governor wound up the first day of the group's two-day meeting with some optimistic words on the state's prospects for cashing in on tideland oil revenues. He said he has "dedicated" him self to gathering 37.5 per cent of the approximately $800,000 disputed with Uncle Sam and presently held in escrow, an amount he said would "pay off our debt," as well as build Louisiana's part of a superhighway previously discussed with Arkansas Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller. He did, however, raise some eyebrows by indicating he would return to Baton Rouge to veto certain bills which, he said, "had no business being passed." The statement perhaps foreshadows warmish developments ahead.

Distinguished visitors to Monroe at the state level included Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion, who spoke to the Thursday night meeting of the Fifth District Pharmaceutical Association. Northeast Louisiana Republicans were in Monroe Friday night for a "strategy and enthusiasm" session addressed by, among others, Ralph Caldwell, a recently - announced G.O.P candidate for state representative.

Monroe is well on her way to being the Convention City, in deed as well as in word. Conventioneers last week included representatives of the North Louisiana Camera Club, whose three-day program started Friday under chairman Lee Estes of Monroe.

ROUNDING UP

Rounding up and rounding out the week's news were a number of stories of special interest which, but for the heavy flow of developments across the board, might as easily have achieved higher placement in this nutshell peek at northeast Louisiana.

Certainly the death Monday in Winnsboro of a man believed to be its oldest resident was cause of particular sorrow to the area. James M. "Uncle Jim" King, who would have been 113 years old in November, was widely known, both personally and as a result of attention drawn to him as a venerable citizen, pioneer and civic leader. "Uncle Jim" was born in Arkansas, but came to Franklin Parish in 1870 at the age of 16 where he became one of its hardest working carpenters, sawmillers, merchants and farmers. He served on the school board for 28 years, from 1896 to 1925.

Such tragedy swept into the area on numerouy other occasions. Eleven-year-old Patsy Louise Bagwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bagwell, formerly of West Monroe, died locally of injuries received in an auto accident two weeks ago near Lake Village, Ark. The same crash already had claimed her nine-year-old brother, Ronnie.

Also lost during the week was a well-known area flood control leader and businessman Arnold T. Shields, 73, of Tallulah, who died after a short illness in a Vicksburg, Miss., hospital.

In other news: G. L. Morgan, campaign chairman for the Ouachita Parish United Givers Fund, announced the appointment of Howard Barker, West Monroe elementary school principal, as West Monroe Area chairman for the UGF drive.

The first annual Air Show, sponsored by Monroe Jaycees and the Monroe Optimist Club, was fully set for its run today at Selman Field. An afternoon of entertainment is planned for the public at a nominal fee, featuring top aerobatic fliers from across the nation — ladies included.

Roy Boyd, president of the Greater Ouachita Citizens' Council, announced in Monroe the commencement of a statewide effort to draft Sixth District Rep. John Rarick as a candidate for the coming governor's race. It was Rarick who unseated 24-year Congressional veteran James Morrison last year.

Ouachita Valley Council Boy Scout Executive Lavon Smith announced his resignation to take a post in business in Hattiesburg, Miss. Scout executive for the past 18 months, he will be succeeded on July 15 by Frank Z. Maley, presently field director for the Norwela Council in Shreveport. Maley's appointment was announced by Ouachita Valley Council President George Franklin.

The town of Columbia, branded by the Louisiana Stream Pollution Control Commission, with West Monroe, as one of the two communities of any size still despositing raw sewage into the Ouachita River pulled abreast of West Monroe in plans for redemption. Mayor James Sherman announced the purchase of 15 acres of land as the site of an oxidation pond. West Monroe has been at this planning stage for a number of years.

Free motor vehicle safety inspections were made available Saturday on the first of two consecutive Saturdays by the local chapter of Independant Garage Owners in cooperation with Sertoma clubbers. The inspection lanes at four Monroe shopping centers and two in West Monroe will be open again next Saturday.

The Ouachita Sheriff's Department summer-long Junior Rifle Program for youngsters 12 to 18 commenced Tuesday at the rifle and pistol range near Selman Field. Classes are running from 9:30-11:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, with adult shooting held for afternoons.

Monroe Recreation Department playgrounds at 10 locations were listed to open for the summer Monday morning, 8:30.

Holy Land History Full Of Dreams, Visions Fighting

By Jack Gates

Sunday Thought

As for man his days are as grass; as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth. The wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more.

Old Testament

Turning To The Bible

If it accomplished nothing else, the fighting between the Israelis and Arabs the past week sent many people to the Bible in an effort to see if they could find the answers to a number of puzzling questions.

Many of the answers are there, but, as in all things, the answer obtained depended upon individual beliefs.

Regardless of what may happen in the future, or what will be the final outcome of the conflict and the peace negotiations there were many who were not surprised at the speed with which the Israeli Army moved during the lightning-like war. It was and is their firm belief that the God of Abraham was again "leading his people" and that Israel as a nation will never again be destroyed.

Nevertheless there is something about the small nation and its dedicated people that often puzzles most of the world.

It's establishment in 1948 was a miracle in the minds of many and its accomplishments in those short years since are almost unbelievable. This is the third war its people have had to fight for their very survival against tremendous odds of more than 80 to one.

Religious Motherland

War in this particular area always holds keen interest for nearly everyone. It is the religious motherland of Jehovah, Allah and the Christ, of the Commandments and the Cross.

It is a haunting region of colliding opposites, of sea and desert, of mountains and salty depths, of flood and drought, of hot days, chill nights, of the message of peace and a record of war.

An old Talmudic legend says that in the creation of the world, when God commanded, "Let there be light," it first shone forth from Mt. Moriah, the commanding heights of Jerusalem, where another kind of brightness flared there the past week — the flash of bursting artillery shells.

Last weeks war was a new, shuddering chapter in the strange, world-shaking history of that famed city and the volatile land surrounding it. It is a puzzling potent place, laden with paradoxes.

Take the City of Jerusalem. Small, seemingly remote from modern fulcrums of power, it nevertheless has swayed the course of mankind, from the first. From that place have come humanity's loftiest visions, and also some of its harshest debacles.

The Holy City, literally the name means the "City of God" or "Hearth of God," is cloaked in mystery. Not even the Bible tells how it came to be established. When the Holy Book pickups the story, Jerusalem was already in existence and a high priest lived there.

Noble Dreams

But it is a realm of ultimate, of noble dreams and bitter furies, of the best and the worst, of the firsts and lasts. From that unique city, located in a most unusual place almost the geographical center of the earth's land masses, have come the earliest traces of civilized life on earth, and there, according to The Bible, and accepted by Jews, Moslems and Christians, life will reach its finish in total judgment.

Again and again, through the long centuries, Jerusalem has risen and fallen, by catapult, fire and sword. The strange handiwork wrought there has threaded through the world, through time and distance, shaping the ethical pillars of civilized life, but also firing misconceived intolerance, aggressions and carnage.

This land produced monotheism — belief in the one God, the cradle of faith of nearly a billion present-day Christians, 13 million Jews and almost half a billion Moslems.

It has lifted hearts, emblazoned principles of justice, inspired compassion, learning and heroism, stirred revolutions, shifted national borders, and also provoked enmities, violence and death. Armies that moved there this past week were only the latest in an immemorial file of marching troops — of Jews, Babylonians, Assyrians, Persians, Macedonians, Egyptians, Romans, and later, of Moslems, Christians Crusaders and British marines.

It was also in this rugged land of beautiful starry nights, lonely hills and desert days that The Christ was born — the Christ who taught love, goodwill and peace. But the misunderstood Galilean did not find it either — only death on a cross against the stark sky in the midst of two thieves.

The land itself is a paradox. Beautiful in a strange and awesome way, but hard on its inhabitants. And at first glance it is hardly worth fighting over. But in all, probably more wars have been fought over it than any other area — or for that matter — many areas of the world combined.

Once Called Canaan

It once was called Canaan. The 17th chapter of the Book of Genesis says that God gave "all the land of Canaan" to the patriarch Abraham "for an ever lasting possession. . .to you and to your descendants after you. . ." and it was in that intriguing region that the covenant was made.

That should have ended it, but it didn't since both Jews and Arabs claim to be the descendants of Abraham, although one group obviously was cast off.

The Jews trace their ancestry through Isaac, the son born to Abraham by his legal wife, Sarah. Arabs trace their line through Ishmael, Abraham's son by a serving girl whom he took as his concubine when Sarah seemed barren.

After Sarah had a son of her own, she made her husband drive Ishmael and his mother away. Thus, antagonism between Jews and Arabs can be said to go all the way back to their earliest ancestors.

Isaac had two sons — Esau and Jacob. Esau, the first - born, was Isaac's natural heir, and inheritor of the Abrahamic Promises. These were that his descendants should inherit the land of Canaan; they should become a great nation and through them all nations should be blessed.

But the Bible says that God, knowing before they were born, the qualities of the two men, chose Jacob to be transmitter of the precious heritage. In the Line of Promise, all Abraham's sons were eliminated except Isaac. Of Isaac's sons, Esau was eliminated, and Jacob chosen. With Jacob the eliminating process stopped, and all of Jacob's descendants were included in the Chosen Nation.

God gave Jacob the nickname Israel, "he who strives with God." As a result the descendants of Jacob came to be known as the children of Israel and eventually took over the land.

Even to Jacob the land was puzzling. "Surely the Lord is in this place," he once declared, trembling after his dream of a sparkling stairway let down from heaven. "How awesome is this place."

Went To Egypt

About 1650 B. C. famine drove the Israelites out of Canaan. They settled in Egypt, where they first were treated well, but later were reduced to slavery.

For 400 years the children of Israel lived in bondage in Egypt. Then God sent Moses to lead them out of Egypt to return to the "Promised Land of Canaan" with a promise he would be with them. His aim was for them to be exponents of the one God and to produce the Savior.

The Biblical book of Exodus describes how the Israelities wandered in the wilderness for 40 years because of their sins and after God had repeatedly protected them to the degree of drowning an Egyptian army in the Red Sea that had pursued them. The wilderness through which they trekked was the Sinai Peninsula, one of the key battlefields of last week's fighting.

Moses died during this time and was succeeded by Joshua, Israel's first great field general. He took the route back to Canaan that took his army through the Negev Desert, which also figures prominently in the latest war. After the Israelites were firmly established in Canaan, they continued to have trouble with the Philistines, the forerunners of many of today's Arabs, who clung to a strip of land along the shore in approximately the same area as the present Gaza Strip. Its capital, then as now, was the city of Gaza.

After many trials and tribulations, by 1,000 B. C. the 12 tribes of Israel had been welded into one kingdom under the Great King David, a man the Bible said was one of the greatest in God's sight.

David finally selected the City of Jerusalem as his capital and from that day on, it has been the heart-rendering core of Jewish existence and love.

Glittering City

David's extravagant son, King Solomon, turned Jerusalem into the most glittering city of the Middle East and built the nation of Israel into a magnificent empire. He built himself a lavish palace, in which gold leaf was used for wallpaper, and also put up a great temple, which became the focal point of Jewish piety. It was located on Mt. Moriah. From then until now there have been a succession of temples and mosques and many believe the Scriptures teach that in the last days, the Jews again will raise a temple on the site.

The site is also sacred to Moslems. They believe that on this oddly provocative place the Prophet Mohammed mounted his favorite mare before ascending to heaven.

After the reign of Solomon, the nation had its ups and downs and shortly thereafter split into two kingdoms, the northern and southern. Both eventually were eliminated by the Assyrians and Babylonians because the Bible says of the collective sins of the people against God.

After that period of exile, many of the Jews returned to their land, but never in the sense of a nation. But Jerusalem was always in their hearts wherever they were. This was also true of Islam which draws its faith from the same time-rooted religious ancestry, regarding the sixth century Mohammad as the latest in a prophetic line of Adam, Noah, Abraham, and Moses. And throughout the long centuries, the Arabs and Jews have fought over the hallowed territory.

In 70 A. D. the Romans finally smashed the ancient Jewish area, including Jerusalem, dispersing the Jews throughout the world. For the next several hundreds of years, the land was ruled alternately by Moslems, European Crusaders and Moslems until 1948 when the nation of Israel was reestablished, although on a much smaller scale than before. Their history from the time they were dispersed by the Romans until now was filled for the most part with misery, persecution and death.

The present nation, born in the mist of war and what many consider a miracle, continues to have to fight for its very existance.

The recapture of the old City of Jerusalem the past week was the first time it had been held by Jews for some 2000 years and was therefore a tremendously symbolic victory for Israeli troops.

Many Traditions

So there is no doubt but what it is steeped in history. Tradition holds that the first man, Adam, lies buried at the city's site, and there in the Valley of Jehosphaphat outside the eastern walls, prophecy says that mankind will be assembled at the end of time for judgment.

It continues to bear a curious image, both antecedent and of destiny. In its outlying area, the sands of the Tigris-Euphrates Valley, now Iraq, from whence the nomadic Abraham came from Ur of the Chaldees, have yielded the oldest discovered implements fabricated by man's hands.

Even in the dimmer mists of time, the rainbow of promise shone after Noah's ark of "gopher Wood" had ridden out the flood — signs of which have been found in the sediments of Mesopotamia.

With all of Jerusalem in their hands once again, it is very doubtful the Jews will ever relinquish it as long as they are a nation and a people. It was promised them after the 1948 conflict, but Jordan then refused to give it up.

And odds are if they can manage to hold on to it, a new, shinning temple probably will be built on the old site — the site where ideals were born, where passions flamed, and where armies clashed through the centuries. About this Holy spot, and surrounding area, the prophets foretold the day when men would "beat swords into ploughshares" and make war no more.

That day will come as God's words always come true, they say.

But as of now the place where the beacon of truth once shone, peace is still defiled and will be for sometime to come.

The World's Week In Focus

DAVID has felled Goliath again in the Bible lands.

But, though the shooting stops, the war is not over. New trouble is just about to start. For years, nations large and small will be plagued by repercussions of a dramatic week. Problems it generated are formidable. Many of the questions it raised are unanswerable.

Destroyed Myths

Israel's lighting war destroyed some myths.

First there was the myths of Arab solidarity and of an Arab "liberator." Gamal Abdel Nasser, once hailed as the hero of all Arabs, has been obliged to confess he was to blame for their humiliation — even to offer his resignation as Egypt's president.

His confession leaves Arabs bereft. There is no single leader who can take his place. The shock can impel the Arabs once again to fall apart, as they did after past crises, and fight among themselves.

SECOND, there was the West's myth of "maintaining an arms balance" in the Middle East. That went up in smoke. British, American and French arms in Israeli hands battled British and American arms in Jordan's hands. Israel's Western weapons were used against both Western and Soviet weapons in Egypt and Syria. The "balance" was meaningless. The Middle East looked like a test laboratory for World War III.

Third, there was the Communist myth: that a heavy influx of expensive Soviet armament was enough to protect and build up a protege to the point where he became a reliable ally.

So far as the nervous onlookers among the major powers are concerned, it will take a long time to analyze the week's balance sheet.

Israeli Blitz

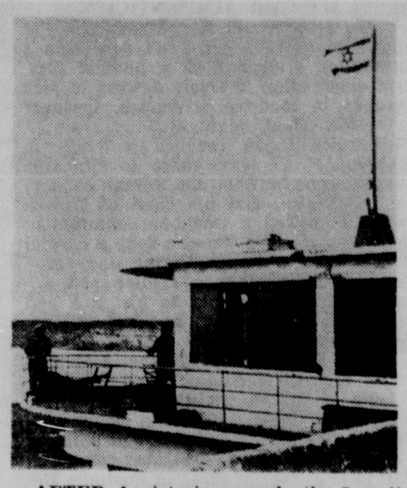
Israel's blitz of her neighbors took the United States off the hook of an uncomfortable dilemma. Israel did not need intervention to save her from the destruction threatened by the Arabs. But relations of Arab nations with Washington have been badly damaged. Even partial repair will take a long time. Meanwhile, the area's oceans of oil reserves and geographic position astride trade routes remain vitally important to the West for the foreseeable future.

THE Soviet Union emerges with scars. Moscow showed the flag in the Mediterrean, but when the chips were down, Moscow once again — five years after the Cuban missiles confrontation — backed away from a showdown. Arabs, seeking excuses for the defeat, surely will feel the Kremlin pulled the rug from under them. The Soviet Union's image is damaged among the impatient, Communist-inspired revolutionaries of Asia, Africa and Latin America, among whom Red China seeks commanding influence.

Worry Over Oil

Western Europe has reason to worry about Middle East oil, if the Arab grudge persuades producing countries to withhold the fuel regardless of damage to their own economies. A long-term disruption could mean emergency in Western Europe and sharp increases in the cost of transporting fuel from other sources.

EGYPT, Syria and Jordan were severely damaged. As one Cairo diplomat put it, "Imagine, hundreds of millions of dollars worth of Soviet equipment lost by the Egyptians in less than a week.' Nasser, his economy hurt, lacking the means to replace the arms and with his leadership position severely dented, had no place to go.



AFTER A victorious week, the Israeli flag flies over the former Egyptian control point at Sharm el Sheikh, overlooking the Strait of Tiran, the blockade of which, was one of the things that touched off the war.

Syria, which made the most warlike noises of all the Arabs and which was largely responsible for the crisis leading to war, has been humiliated and shaken. Its Moscow-leaning regime may pay the penalty. Its economy is bleeding.

At least pending negotiations, Jordan has lost its territory west of the Jordan River. Eventually, the Arabs are likely to make young King Hussein a scapegoat for their humiliation, since his arms and support came from the United States and Britain.

Not Involved

Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, long involved in political war with Egypt's Nasser, also will be the butt of agitation, even though he proclaimed his country's armed support for the joint Arab cause. Saudi Arabia already is suffering severely from loss of oil revenues as a result of the crisis, and the wrench to its economy can cause dangerous political ferment.

Iraq depends for practically all her foreign exchange and more than half her national budget on her oil exports. These have been shut off. The country's shaky regime already faces revolutionary trouble from Kurdish tribes. It faces a perilous future.

EVEN Israel, the brilliant victor, acquires new problems. If she tries to keep such territory as the west bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip on her southwest Mediterranean coast, she will add 1.5 million bitterly hostile Arabs, including displaced refugees, to her population of 2.5 million. To say nothing of economic problems involved, controlling them will be an enormous security problem which may require drastic police-state methods.

Israel will want to keep much of the territory she conquered, to relieve herself of a constant border threat, and, as one Israeli officer put it, to impress upon the Arabs that Israel "simply will not be driven into the sea."

This means new and virtually insoluble disputes for the United Nations, new big-power quarrels arising from the wreckage of Arab hopes.

WHAT happens to the territory Israel conquered? Can she be forced out, even should the United Nations find the unanimity to try? How can Israel and the Arabs be sealed off from one another to prevent new dangers to world peace? Will Israel, flushed with victory, accept a U.N. force on her side of the frontiers? Will Israel insist on a toehold on the Gulf of Aqaba to insure her free use of it?

Those are some of the questions which only events can answer. There is even a question about future Israeli-U.S. relations, and the test will come when the big powers search for answers.

Lasting Peace

The United States seeks to work for lasting peace in the Middle East. But lasting peace is an elusive goal. A state of war still exists between the Arabs and Israel. Armistices and cease-fires do not mean peace. If the United States wants peace in the area, what does it offer the Arabs, to whom settlement means nothing short of restoring displaced Arabs to Palestine? And can it offer anything without offending Israel?

Arab sources gloomily predict an indefinite future of constant tension, and even now dream of a war that profits from the disastrous mistakes of this one. That may be a long, long way off, but the tension will be a constant reality.

THE Arabs, feeling forsaken and betrayed, claim to see not the faintest hope for lasting peace. They vow they will make no peace and that they will resist all efforts to impose one. In their present state of bitterness, they claim that even though they hurt themselves they can, in revenge against the Americans and the West, hold out for a long time in their determination to stop the flow of oil.

Probably, however, that deceptively solid-looking front will be broken. It is the history of the Arabs to fall apart among themselves when the cement of active hostility against Israel is removed from the flimsy structure of "Arab unity."

Power Contest

The big-power contest over the Middle East will continue. In fact, it probably will be intensified.

Moscow will want to try to recoup its losses of prestige by vociferous support of Arab claims in the United Nations, by demanding Israel's return to her antebellum lines, even though they know they hardly achieve that short of risking a new world war.

Moscow has been stung sharply by the week's events. Once again the Kremlin is the target of violent propaganda from Red China, accusing it of "sham support" of the Arabs and of acting in collusion with the Americans. Fidel Castro's Communists in Cuba have already indicated their scorn of the Soviet role in the crisis. The Arabs have made their disillusionment plain.

THE Arabs have little to console themselves with in their misery. Turning toward Red China would do them little good, since China can hardly provide what the Russians did.

Probably, they will turn inward now, to nurse their wounds and, eventually, to begin once again fighting and plotting against one another, and adding to the instability of an already unstable and highly sensitive area of the world.

The world has a chilling thought to live with. Some day Red China may be in a position to offer the Arabs an atomic weapon. Perhaps by that time Israel might also have one.

Monday, June 5: War on three fronts—Israel's borders with Jordan, Syria and the U.A.R. Israeli armor began its shattering advance against Egyptian tanks in the Sinai Desert and surrounded the city of Gaza in the Gaza Strip. Fighting occurred in Jerusalem. Israel's air raids gave it early air superiority over the Arabs. Syrians and Jordanians shelled Israel.

Tuesday, June 6 U. N. Security Council unanimously called for immediate cease-fire as Israelis advanced deeper into the U.A.R. and Jordan. Egypt closed Suez Canal, charging Israel was receiving air support from Britain and the United States. They heatedly denied this. In "retaliation," Arab countries broke off diplomatic relations with them, imposed an oil embargo and mobs attacked U. S. and British embassies in Arab capitals.

Wednesday, June 7 Israelis fought to within 21 miles of the Suez canal and captured the Egyptian fortress of Sharm el Sheikh, breaking the blockade of the Gulf of Aqaba. They occupied the old city of Jerusalem and captured the Jordanian town of Nablus, 30 miles to the north. Syrian and Jordanian shelling of Israel continued. Radio Amman said Jordan would accept the cease-fire although King Hussein appealed for war.

Thursday, June 8 — U.A.R. said it would accept the cease-fire after an Egyptian counter-attack failed and most of Sinai lay in Israeli hands. Israelis occupied virtually all Jordanian territory west of the River Jordan. Fighting continued on the Syrian front. Israel said it would accept the cease-fire if the Arabs did. Israel mistakenly bombed a U. S. Navy ship in the Mediterranean, killing 10 Americans and wounding 100.

Friday, June 9: Syria joined the U.A.R. and Jordan in saying it would agree to the cease-fire. Then fighting flared up. Each side claimed the other had violated the cease-fire.

Viet War Slows

While the Mideast was aflame and the world's attention drawn to that arena, the war in Vietnam seemed to slow down.

There was less action on the ground than had been the case for weeks. One big battle Thursday centered at Khe Sanh in the extreme northwest corner of South Vietnam. A Marine company killed 63 North Vietnamese soldiers in an 80-minute battle. American losses were 18 Marines killed and 27 wounded.

A minor and little-noted war-like campaign erupted far from these battle fronts, in New Mexico of all places. There, a band of some 40 New Mexicans swooped down on a county courthouse in a shooting raid in which they freed 10 of their number. Known as the Confederation of Free City States, the band was pursued in the wild and mountainous northern part of the state by National Guardsmen and state policemen. Members of the confederation claim they are heirs of Spaniards who were granted land holdings and that they have a hereditary right to the land.

Luckily, it happened during the daylight, otherwise a 15,000-square-mile area of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware would have had a taste of what befell New York in the Great Blackout of November 1965. Again, there was a power failure along an interconnected system. All the things that depended upon electricity to hum, turn, stop, go, just didn't. By 8:15 p.m., however, the public Service Electric & Gas Co. of New Jersey reported that power to its consumers had been restored. The failure was blamed on heat and crossed power lines.

Mute and expressionless, the 25-year-old drifter stood before Circuit Court Judge Herbert C. Paschen in Peoria, Ill., a town in which he stood trial because it was feared Chicagoans would be too impassioned to give him a fair hearing. Richard F. Speck had been found guilty in the murders of eight young nurses and the judge was to set the penalty. Judge Paschen told Speck he must die in the electric chair Sept. 1.

Quote of the Week

"We have returned to the holiest of our holy places, never to depart from it again." — Maj. Gen. Moshe Dayan, Israeli defense minister, as Israeli forces occupied the Old City of Jerusalem.

Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By RICHARD TYLER
World Staff Writer

Last week was a big one for big building begun or in prospect locally, in the parish, throughout the area. Here at home, James W. Moore, oil company executive and state official, signed contracts, together with the Moody Brothers of Houston Tex., equal partners in the venture, for construction of a $2.5 million Ramada Inn.

To be located near the junction of U.S. 165 and I-20, the colonially-designed hostelry, when completed in 14 months, will count in its complex a total of 265 rooms with every modern related facility. The major portion of the inn, however — 155 rooms, dining hall and administrative offices — will be completed in time for the Louisiana Municipal Association. Next spring's April 25-27 convention of Planners envision the area around the inn as a major new commercial sector.

In the area, at Crossett, Ark., officials of the Georgia-Pacific Corporation announced a proposed $75-million expansion of its pulp, paper and board manufacturing facilities. Construction probably would begin late this year. Details were revealed at a meeting of Crossett civic leaders as the first move toward a proposed "Act 9 no-risk, no-tax" bond issue to finance the work. Rebuilding and enlargement of capacity is planned, along with new equipment and expansion. Crossett Mayor Vaskell Carter promised an early city council meeting to act on a bond election. Such issues in the past have provided 700 new jobs, in addition to construction payrolls.

Meanwhile, from Baton Rouge, came a joint statement from Gov. John McKeithen and the president of the Laurens Glass Company, Laurens, S.C., the two announcing contract-letting on a multi-million-dollar glass container plant for the Ruston-Simsboro area. The 200,000-square-foot facility initially will employ 100 skilled and semi-skilled workers from the area, a figure due to grow in the early '70s beyond 500 men and women. The step represents the company second major expansion in its southwestern market area in the past eight years, President E. D. Easterby said.

Back home again, another group was readying itself for building in the $1-million category. The Ouachita Parish School Board by name, it voted Tuesday night to sell at an interest rate of 4.3522 per cent the last $1-million of certificates in a 1961 $7-million bond issue. Principal project on the drawing board is a junior high school addition to the elementary facilities at Jack Hayes in Ward 1. The sale will cost the board in excess of $512,000 interest over the notes' 20-year life and Ward 5's M. L. Owens Jr. abstained from voting in the decision to go ahead. Amid reports that the Middle East crisis had jammed money costs upwards, Supt. Milton C. Hall conceded, "This is the highest we've ever paid."

Building — road building — was Topic A in two other stories of a busy week. Highway Board Vice Chairman Moore, mentioned earlier, disclosed that a contract on the long - awaited four-laning of U.S. Hwy. 80 through West Monroe will be let in July. Cost of the widening, from North Seventh Street to the Wells Road, is estimated at $1.2 million, and accompanies recently - contracted four-laning of North Seventh from Hwy. 80 to the Arkansas Road. Moore also revealed that right-of-way acquisition is due to start next month for the Breard to Louisville phase of Monroe's $3 million north-south expressway connecting I-20 and Hwy. 80; he stated further that bids will be taken June 21 on a railroad underpass at Louisiana Tech in Ruston, and that plans on the I-20's Garrett Road interchange in Monroe are under preparation.

Monroe city building during the review period included commencement of work on a 40-project 1967 street improvement program. Street Commissioner W. D. H. Rodriguez had good news too, predicting completion of 1966 programs sometime in July. Target dates on the latter were around June 1, but the commissioner said, in effect, his hands are tied due to the unattractive nature of street programs to bidders.

VARIED VISITORS

Visitors to the Twin Cities and area last week were as varied as they were numerous. State officials, with the 30-day fiscal Legislature ended Tuesday, were on the hustings, led by the governor, shirtsleeving it for an after-dinner talk to the Louisiana Commercial Agriculturists Association at Lake Providence.

The governor wound up the first day of the group's two-day meeting with some optimistic words on the state's prospects for cashing in on tideland oil revenues. He said he has "dedicated" himself to gathering 37.5 per cent of the approximately $800,000 disputed with Uncle Sam and presently held in escrow, an amount he said would "pay off our debt," as well as build Louisiana's part of a superhighway previously discussed with Arkansas Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller. He did, however, raise some eyebrows by indicating he would return to Baton Rouge to veto certain bills which, he said, "had no business being passed." The statement perhaps foreshadows warmish developments ahead.

Distinguished visitors to Monroe at the state level included Atty. Gen. Jack Gremillion, who spoke to the Thursday night meeting of the Fifth District Pharmaceutical Association. Northeast Louisiana Republicans were in Monroe Friday night for a "strategy and enthusiasm" session addressed by, among others, Ralph Caldwell, a recently - announced G.O.P candidate for state representative.

Monroe is well on her way to being the Convention City, in deed as well as in word. Conventioneers last week included representatives of the North Louisiana Camera Club, whose three-day program started Friday under chairman Lee Estes of Monroe.

ROUNDING UP

Rounding up and rounding out the week's news were a number of stories of special interest which, but for the heavy flow of developments across the board, might as easily have achieved higher placement in this nutshell peek at northeast Louisiana.

Certainly the death Monday in Winnsboro of a man believed to be its oldest resident was cause of particular sorrow to the area. James M. "Uncle Jim" King, who would have been 113 years old in November, was widely known, both personally and as a result of attention drawn to him as a venerable citizen, pioneer and civic leader. "Uncle Jim" was born in Arkansas, but came to Franklin Parish in 1870 at the age of 16 where he became one of its hardest working carpenters, sawmillers, merchants and farmers. He served on the school board for 28 years, from 1896 to 1925.

Such tragedy swept into the area on numerouy other occasions. Eleven-year-old Patsy Louise Bagwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bagwell, formerly of West Monroe, died locally of injuries received in an auto accident two weeks ago near Lake Village, Ark. The same crash already had claimed her nine-year-old brother, Ronnie.

Also lost during the week was a well-known area flood control leader and businessman Arnold T. Shields, 73, of Tallulah, who died after a short illness in a Vicksburg, Miss., hospital.

In other news: G. L. Morgan, campaign chairman for the Ouachita Parish United Givers Fund, announced the appointment of Howard Barker, West Monroe elementary school principal, as West Monroe Area chairman for the UGF drive.

The first annual Air Show, sponsored by Monroe Jaycees and the Monroe Optimist Club, was fully set for its run today at Selman Field. An afternoon of entertainment is planned for the public at a nominal fee, featuring top aerobatic fliers from across the nation — ladies included.

Roy Boyd, president of the Greater Ouachita Citizens' Council, announced in Monroe the commencement of a statewide effort to draft Sixth District Rep. John Rarick as a candidate for the coming governor's race. It was Rarick who unseated 24-year Congressional veteran James Morrison last year.

Ouachita Valley Council Boy Scout Executive Lavon Smith announced his resignation to take a post in business in Hattiesburg, Miss. Scout executive for the past 18 months, he will be succeeded on July 15 by Frank Z. Maley, presently field director for the Norwela Council in Shreveport. Maley's appointment was announced by Ouachita Valley Council President George Franklin.

The town of Columbia, branded by the Louisiana Stream Pollution Control Commission, with West Monroe, as one of the two communities of any size still despositing raw sewage into the Ouachita River pulled abreast of West Monroe in plans for redemption. Mayor James Sherman announced the purchase of 15 acres of land as the site of an oxidation pond. West Monroe has been at this planning stage for a number of years.

Free motor vehicle safety inspections were made available Saturday on the first of two consecutive Saturdays by the local chapter of Independant Garage Owners in cooperation with Sertoma clubbers. The inspection lanes at four Monroe shopping centers and two in West Monroe will be open again next Saturday.

The Ouachita Sheriff's Department summer-long Junior Rifle Program for youngsters 12 to 18 commenced Tuesday at the rifle and pistol range near Selman Field. Classes are running from 9:30-11:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, with adult shooting held for afternoons.

Monroe Recreation Department playgrounds at 10 locations were listed to open for the summer Monday morning, 8:30.

Drama Professor Adapts Productions To Local Settings

George Brian, Jr., of Northeast State College here, recently used a gravel pit near West Monroe as the location for the filming of a drama centering around Palestine.

By FRANCES PARKER

The pictorial drama review of Northeast Louisiana State College's production of "The Miser," transposed the vowels in the name of the producer-professor - main character, Dr. George Brian, Jr., to read "Dr. Brain."

Sometimes if a mistake in a name is made often enough it becomes an affectionate title. In view of Brian's brilliant performance in the fields of speech and drama, "Dr. Brain" seems appropriate to those who have followed the history of Theatre in Louisiana.

For over 30 years, the 48 year-old dynamo of drama has devoted his energy and talent to the civic and cultural arts of his native state as actor, director, producer, professor, playwright, humorist, drama critic, stage manager, light technician, costumer, set designer, and make-up man.

Brian's latest venture, the filming of "Dismas—The Thief On The Cross," has set the stage for an unprecedented and dramatically effective program of speech teaching methods. The ingenious professor of drama at Northeast State is a philosophical believer in the parable of bringing the mountain to Mohammed.

"To recreate Palestine for this small Ben Hur, I found a man in West Monroe who loaned us his gravel pit for location filming," he said.

Where the only action was an occasional truck which dipped into the gravel supply, Brian and his crew of speech students and drama enthusiasts made their new Palestine come alive with a wealthy merchant in gold and purple robes, tempting grape vineyards, and helmeted soldiers.

CAME IN CARAVAN

The "Dismas" crew came in a caravan of covertibles and sedans to film their fictional drama based on the biblical account of the thief who was promised a place in Paradise before his crucifixion at the side of Christ. Written by Horace Thompson, a former NLSC Speech major, the recently released color spectacular is a tribute to Brian and the students who produced, directed, acted in, filmed, and composed the musical score for their production."

"Correct costumes, proper dialet, and detailed attention to props is always a challenge," said Brian. "For the background I ordered palm branches and bark which was then attached to boardtrunks."

Brian recalled one of the lighter moments on location, "Our our first day out two small boys who lived nearby came and stood a few yards away watching. They studied the slaves in Arab dress, the colorful standard bearers, and the dark-haired girls in tunics, as we unloaded equipment and set up props. Finally they got up the courage to approach us. They had put their heads together and decided we were having church meeting. I would love to know what denomination they had in mind. They immediately wanted to help with the movie, so I asked for a donkey. I was as excited as they were on the trip to their home to borrow the donkey which turned out to be a mule. Someone of Jewish faith would have immediately spotted the erroneous mule in 'Dismas,' since the Israelites were forbidden by religious law to keep them. I promised those boys that for the next film I would write in a part for their mule, and I haven't forgotten about it. It will just take a little more thought."

AIM FOR AUTHENTICITY

"We always aim for authenticity. For instance, just as you don't substitute a mule for a donkey in a biblical film, you don't allow a lovely Jewess to pick grapes in mod-red nailpolish, however nice the effect might be."

Director Brian recalled a "cut" in "Dismas," "I was about to film the battle scene between the Roman soldiers and Barrabas and his band of thieves when I spotted a would-be centurion in horn rim glasses. We also keep a careful lookout for watches. During one scene we discovered that a soldier had applied the grease paint to his face and arms but his legs were as white as marble columns."

Brian emphasied that the cast and crew take their filming very seriously, "Love of drama makes them aim for perfection. They work long hours perfecting their roles, building and painting sets, and sewing and designing costumes. We have a special class in Costume Design at Northeast. Our students have the necessary spirit since they feel that no task is too menial, even if you have a starring role."

HELP SPEECH STUDENTS

"Our films not only help the speech students to know what being on location is actually like. They also help the students enrolled in the Radio-Television Management Course which is a pioneer study in Louisiana. By running the films, operating the camera, and studying production, the students prepare themselves."

It was on with the special showing as "David Justus," the wise and vividly appealing father of "Dismas," clad in Jewish headdress and striped robes; made his poignant plea to his headstrong son. It was evident even to the novice viewer that "David Justus" had stolen the spotlight.

I commented, "The father is great. He's so realistic."

Mona Brooks, who is a graduate-assistant in Speech, and well-known to Monroe theater-goers, replied smiling, "Yes, he is rather good, isn't he."

Then I realized that George Brian, Jr. had made another of the startling transformations for which he is noted. The speech-professor-projectionist had turned veteran actor.

Commenting on the scene of the crucifixion, Miss Brooks recalled the filming, "It got a little eerie. Each time that Gestas, the second thief, said, "If ye be Christ, release yourself and us," something happened to interrupt filming. First the cross fell, then a prop in the background, and finally the wedge in the ropes which held Dismas. It sobered the actors and made them very convincing."

Brian said, "The students learn to adjust lens, read light meters, and operate the camera. After filming they view their own performance with a critical eye, but most of all they learn to improvise."

The art of improvising comes naturally to Dr. Brian who first appeared before the public at the age of four. It was the beginning of a lifetime of dedication to drama which would develop into a success story resembling the glittering promanade of an opening night.

EARLY DEVOTION

The community spirit that would infect South and North Louisiana with enthusiasm for hundreds of projects started with George Brian, Jr.'s early devotion for dramatic arts. In church, at school, and at civic functions in Baton Rouge, wherever there was a podium or stage, there was young Brian. As a seventeen - year - old student at Baton Rouge High School he singlehandedly wrote, directed, and cast the 75 roles for his mammoth two-year production of "Rhodopis." Working evenings and nights, Brian perfected his play, designed the scenery and costumes, and rehearsed his own leading role to stage his first smash-hit which played to an audience of 2,000 fellow-students and citizens. Complete with Egyptian Pharaohs, this vital production was instrumental in creating what colleagues and theatergoers like to call "Brianism." "Brianism" is the philosophy of a man who has boundless energy, little time, limited facilities, and even less production budget, but who somehow manages to get things done. "I think we can do it."

By 1938, when Brian entered Louisiana State University, he was completely dedicated to his chosen field of drama. His career was interrupted in 1941 when the speech master was cast in a critical role with the United States Army Intelligence Service intercepting messages on the German Army's radio networks in Africa and Europe. Returning to LSU to receive his bachelor of arts degree in 1948, Brian scored another first by giving a record number of talented performances in 17 major campus productions.

DIRECTED LITTLE THEATER

From 1948 to 1952, Brian directed the Baton Rouge Little Theater producing 16 three-act plays, and gaining a place on the group's board of governors, and the positions of vice president, and business manager. Switching from the roles of first manager-director with ease and ability, he cast the plays, directed the productions, supervised the costumes and make-up, and assumed full managerial duties.

As a member of the Circle Players Repertory Company, Brian played summer stock in Biloxi, Miss., and in 1951 he received his master's degree working as a graduate assistant in the LSU Department of Speech. Since education had always shared the spotlight with drama, Brian wrote his dissertation on the "History of The Theater in Louisiana from 1900 to 1925." The lengthy documentary is a valuable record of drama in its fledgling stages in Louisiana. While working on his degrees Brian had again managed to break the LSU acting record by appearing in over 20 top stage productions.

It is easy to see how the characters of "Dr. Brian," and "Mr. Versatility of The Theater" came into being as Brian made transformations to a Chamber-Of-Commerce George Jessel, director of a style show or Miss Louisiana Pageant, and television and radio narrator.

RESISTED URGING

In 1953 when Brian joined the faculty of Northeast his list of credits and popularity was firmly established. For years he has resisted the urging of his colleagues to try his talents on Broadway.

He stated, "I don't think I would like that kind of life even if I were able to make it to the top."

His colleagues, fellow-actors, dazzled students, and his wife, Jo, whom Brian met when she appeared in one of his productions, are confident that he would be a success.

As a graduate assistant in speech, Jo Brian teaches, assists in sewing costumes, does legwork for her husband's productions, and appears in Monroe Little Theatre. She laughed, "Since he spends every waking hour knee-deep in drama, I have accused him at times of being narrow in his interests. I have only to remember his accomplishments to know that it's a remark that needs to be qualified. He has narrowed his interests down to one wide field."

As early as the LSU production of "Village Green," when George Brian, Jr. portrayed the mild-mannered, henpecked husband, Walter Godkin, who underwent an astounding reversal of character to spontaneous applause, there were those who knew that George Brian, Jr. was a professional who would make it just as far as he wanted to go. He has chosen to go as far as Louisianians will go with him.

Brian's talent found a new challenge when he began to study the colorful history of Monroe for his proposed staging of a live pageant on the banks of Bayou DeSiard. As usual, his enthusiasm grew until nothing seemed impossible. In October, 1956, Brian began his documentary color film, "The Gift of The Ouachita," which was 10 years in the making. The film took Brian and his crew of students to actual location spots where historic moments had taken place, and expanded to other parts of Louisiana, into Mississippi, Texas, and Oklahoma. It was a film which taught him patience as he waited for production budgets to mend. Written, directed, and filmed by Brian, the saga of "the sacred silver water," has become a valuable aid to New Orleans Public School System teachers in their film library, in the Baton Rouge State Film Library, and various other institutions in Louisiana for studying and teaching geography and history. From the decade of work, involving staging and restaging, with meticulous attention to research, emerged a factual and colorful account of the settling of the Ouachita.

"When casting the role of Alexander Breard, an early settler who came in 1795 with Don Philip Neri Baron de Bastrop, I went out and found his descendent, Sylvester Breard. Descendants bring the pride of family heritage to their parts."

Pealing notes of alarm grew to drum beats as primitive red men emerged from the bushes to peer warily at the first white settlers. Sturdy cabins sprang up from the wilderness to a bustling symphony, and the scenes grew tamer as the river land became a settlement. Dixie Riverboat tunes heralded the coming of the steamboat, and the tempo grew refined as prim ladies set up school in a one-room cabin.

Pointing out a careful deletion in the film, Brian said, "The pioneer jumped off his horse and his gun belt slid to his feet. It taught me to look at hips when casting the parts for soldiers."

It was winter in the southland. Brian explained, "When researching the history of Monroe we were careful to observe the dates, and film the events according to season. In the big snow of 1958 I made a mad scramble for the camera and crew to shoot the winter scenes."

Chief Tin-Hi-Ouen of the Caddo Nation made a formidable entrance to confer with Commandant Don Juan Filhiol. He confirmed with savage motion that the arrow brought from the neighboring Archer home which was attacked and burned, belonged to the hated tribe of Osage Indians. The discordant movements ended on a courageous rise as Fort Miro, later known as Monroe, was constructed for protection against future attacks. All ended well in the land of "the sacred silver waters."

Speaking of his future plans with no intention of resting on his laurels for a well-deserved intermission Brian said, "I've already started research on "The Battle of Port Hudson," and I'm almost sure that I can get the Corp of Engineers to detonate the explosives for the action scenes."

Brian goes from classroom to stage to Little Theater, out on location, to speaking engagements, on to television appearances, with an occasional breather backstage to climb a ladder and adjust the lights, or supervise the make-up. Wherever he goes it will soon be showtime.

The air was heady with the intoxicating "Brianism."

"I'm still reaching for that perfect play."

"Nothing is too ambitious if you really want to do it."

City Of Birmingham Establishes Bright Symbol To Replace Old Undesirable One

'It's Nice to Have You in Birmingham,' says the sign at the city's airport. And more people are finding it's nice to be there—nowadays. The Alabama city, a symbol only a few years ago of die hard segregation, and anti-Negro violence has come a long way in establishing a new spirit. All is not 100 per cent perfect by any means, but for Negroes and whites alike, it is a sunnier day.

By RELMAN MORIN
AP Special Correspondent

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Some things are hard to believe even when you see them in operation. Birmingham, Alabama, is the case in point.

The city has made such startling progress in the field of race relations that it is scarcely recognizable today. Quietly, solutions to many problems have been found, answers that would have have been considered impossible, even unthinkable, only a few years ago.

Only a few years ago.

In the hot summer of 1963, thousands of Negroes came boiling out of Kelly Ingram Park in downtown Birmingham, and began a series of large-scale demonstrations in the streets. Photographs flashed around the world, showing water from fire hoses knocking them to the ground, and leashed police dogs lunging at them. More than 3,000 were jailed.

'DYNAMITE HILL'

At night, bombs exploded so frequently in a Negro residential district that it came to be known as "Dynamite Hill." Four Negro girls, attending Sunday School, were killed when a bomb blasted the basement of their church.

Communication between the leadership of the races broke down completely. Overnight, "Birmingham" became a national, even a global, synonym for racial hatred and terror.

As one law-enforcement officer puts it today, "Resistance in high places to desegregation was interpreted to mean, "Get out your dynamite and guns."

At that time, hotels and public facilities were tightly segregated. A Negro couldn't eat a sandwich at a department store lunch counter.

Today, a civic boosters' group meets at breakfast in a major downtown hotel. Negro couples sit at tables with white members of the organization. Negroes attend the annual Man-of-the-Year dinner of the Young Men's Business Club of Birmingham.

At that time, a big, red-hot issue was to get one Negro on the police force.

Today, the department employs nine Negroes, six patrolmen, two clerk-typists, and a nurse matron. It says it has room for more.

At the time, the Negro could take no pride in Birmingham. He wasn't consulted about the problems or the shape of things to come.

Today, Negroes are members of the Chamber of Commerce. They have been brought into the Housing, Planning and Library commissions. They attended meetings of the City Council. And, says Mayor Albert Boutwell, "They exercise their rights of citizenship without fear or restraint."

Influential Negroes smile and say to a visitor, "If that makes me an 'Uncle Tom,' okay."

Perhaps the most significant fact is that communication has been restored between the white and Negro communities. They are talking out their differences now, whereas in 1963-64, the Negro had no channel through which he could voice his grievances. If he tried, the answer was apt to be mass arrests.

This is not to say that a magic wand has been waved over Birmingham, causing all its problems to vanish overnight.

A hard core of segregationist sentiment remains, the city's leaders say. But how great is the influence of this group? Leaders in both races say it has been greatly reduced.

Likewise, some Negroes are anything but satisfied with what has been accomplished. They concede that progress has been made since the dark days, but they say it isn't enough.

"There is no sense of urgency," says the Rev. J. E. Lowrey, pastor of St. Paul Methodist Church, and president of the interdenominational Ministers Alliance. "For one thing, a concentrated program of employment for Negroes is needed."

Says Dr. John W. Nixon, head of the Alabama chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, "We have made progress since 1963, but in terms of 1967, it is too little and too slow. We are still far behind."

To explain how and why the change came about, you get back to 1963-64.

"We had a regressive - minded group in the city government," says Don Stafford, head of the AFL - CIO in Birmingham. They wanted to maintain the status quo. White leaders wouldn't speak up."

"I think the decision markers in the community realized that the disturbances could have been avoided," says a prominent merchant. "But nobody wanted to step out and take the lead. We were all afraid of public opinion."

Then came the street demonstrations, the bombings and killings, the uproars when two schools were desegregated in 1964. Birmingham had a savage, ugly image.

Motivated by practical as well as moral considerations, influential men and women in the city determined that accommodations must be found to the racial and civic problems.

They soon found an asset.

A man who has involved himself deeply in the effort to create a new image says, "We hadn't realized the good and stable leadership in the Negro community. When we did recognize it, we knew we could work together."

He adds reminiscing, "A lot of the things we feared just didn't happen."

One of the motivating factors was just plain business.

Birmingham, like many Southern cities, has been reaching out aggressively to attract firms from other parts of the country. Racial disturbances sharply inhibited the effort. Arthur Shores, a widely respected Negro attorney, said, "Business just wasn't coming to Birmingham.

The degree of success in changing that is illustrated by a statistic. The mayor says, "There are more than 20,000 wage earners today who were unemployed in May, 1963."

He estimates that Negroes are filling half these new jobs. In the great steel mills, says Don Stafford — himself a steel worker in addition to his union duties — Negroes now occupy positions requiring skills, whereas before they could rise no higher than helper to the white man holding such a job.

The political picture has changed Miraculously, too.

Voter registration has enrolled 72,000 Negroes, more than one-fourth of the total vote in Jefferson County, which embraces Birmingham. A Negro businessman said. "White politicians now ask to address our meeting — in churches and so on— when they are campaigning for office."

Arthur Shores is one of 16 Negroes elected to the County Democratic Executive Committee. He says they have been placed in "strategic positions," The committee has 118 members.

A Birmingham professional man says the Negro vote was "instrumental" in changing the form of city government. He described the old one, a three man commission, as "deaf to the needs and pleas of business, industry, and racial minorities alike."

The present government is composed of Mayor Boutwell and a nine-member City Council.

The Councilmen are elected at - large, rather than from individual wards or districts, and therefore it probably will be some time before a Negro is elected to it.

Thus. Dr. Nixon says he is not impressed by the changes in the political pattern in Birmingham.

"We don't elect a Negro to represent us," he says, "At best, it's a choice between the lesser of two evils if two segregationists are running for the Council."

Nonetheless, it is obvious that in a close election race, the Negro vote might well be the determining factor, the balance of power. This has happened in other Southern cities and, where the Negro uses his vote, he can affect politicians and their policies.

Under court order, and against great resentment, the desegregation of Birmingham schools began in the autumn of 1964.

One was Ramsay High School. The star of its basketball team this year was Curtis Gary Jackson, a Negro.

As for the statistics, 246 Negroes now attend formerly all - white high schools and 115 are in formerly segregated elementary schools. Seven of the nine high schools, which were all - white, and 13 of 45 formerly all - white elementary schools, are now desegregated.

One of the most striking reflections of the new spirit in Birmingham can be seen in the law enforcement agencies. For decades, and often with good reason, the Negro has feared and mistrusted the policeman or sheriff. It will take a long time to change this, but the point is that for the first time the white community is trying.

A tableau:

On a bright sunny morning recently, Sheriff Melvin Bailey, Chief Deputy Raymond Belcher and Police Capt. Glenn Evans drove to the all - Negro Robert R. Moton High School, on the outskirts of Birmingham.

They spoke to students and faculty in the auditorium. Their purpose, Bailey said, was to "alert the communities, white and Negro, to our problems of law enforcement, to identify with the problems, to bring everybody into it."

Said Evans, "There is no longer any room for bias and prejudice in enforcing the law."

Each officer, in one way or another, told the audience he wanted them to believe "the law enforcement officer is a friend, not an enemy."

And, Belcher said, "We have need for qualified officers from the Negro community." He described the in-service training program for officers. Applause interrupted him several times.

This was a "Community Relations Program," the sixth of its kind, instituted by Bailey and Chief of Police Jamie Moore.

Rev. Lowrey called all this "Good, long-range planning."

But he believes desegregation of the district attorney's office, the election of Negro judges and the employment of Negro bailiffs in the courts would carry more conviction in the Negro community.

In this connection, Negro leaders assert that 10 Negroes, and no whites, have been killed by officers in the past 14 months. They argue that such cases should automatically go to the grand jury for investigation. This is one of their principal grievances today.

Some, but not all, Negro leaders claim that the new climate in Birmingham has not erased discrimination against hiring Negroes in business and industry. "The head of the firm," says Dr. Nixon, "may be sincerely interested in improving conditions. But the chances are that his personnel people, who do the actual hiring, are segregationists."

Still, you find Negroes in positions today where they never were before, in the transit companies, in banks and offices.

Mrs. A. G. Gaston, who operates the Booker T. Washington Business College, says 56 students are ready to graduate this year, "and just about all of them are already placed in office jobs."

Along with these sweeping social and political changes, Birmingham is in a ferment of activity focusing on civic and cultural development. The program entails an outlay of $300 million.

It embraces a $25-million civic center complex, already funded; the expansion of the Medical Center and its newly established University of Alabama in Birmingham from 15 to 60 blocks; "Park West," which will replace Negro slums with a high rise and garden complex — this is being largely financed through the Negro leadership; "Operation New Birmingham"; "Operation Pride"; $2.7 million for facilities for music, art, the theater and sciences at Birmingham Southern College; the "Downtown Action Committee" pushing a tremendous building program in the heart of Birmingham; a seven-acre Japanese garden public park; theater groups; fine arts centers.

A statistic shows what has been happening. Average family income is $7,200 a year, up 88 per cent since 1950. Other economic barometers are equally impressive.

In a speech about the "Second Reconstruction" in the South, John Bloomer, managing editor of the Birmingham News, cites his city as an example and said: "There are some who are loudly deploring the evolutionary changes that I have listed. Others, evidently fewer in number, enthusiastically welcome them. In some respects, the South has been dragged by its heels into this new era. But there can be no denial by anyone that the revolution — unarmed but still a revolution — has taken place."

It was on with the special showing as "David Justus," the wise and vividly appealing father of "Dismas," clad in Jewish headdress and striped robes; made his poignant plea to his headstrong son. It was evident even to the novice viewer that "David Justus" had stolen the spotlight.

I commented, "The father is great. He's so realistic."

Mona Brooks, who is a graduate-assistant in Speech, and well-known to Monroe theater-goers, replied smiling, "Yes, he is rather good, isn't he."

Then I realized that George Brian, Jr. had made another of the startling transformations for which he is noted. The speech-professor-projectionist had turned veteran actor.

Commenting on the scene of the crucifixion, Miss Brooks recalled the filming, "It got a little eerie. Each time that Gestas, the second thief, said, "If ye be Christ, release yourself and us," something happened to interrupt filming. First the cross fell, then a prop in the background, and finally the wedge in the ropes which held Dismas. It sobered the actors and made them very convincing."

Brian said, "The students learn to adjust lens, read light meters, and operate the camera. After filming they view their own performance with a critical eye, but most of all they learn to improvise."

The art of improvising comes naturally to Dr. Brian who first appeared before the public at the age of four. It was the beginning of a lifetime of dedication to drama which would develop into a success story resembling the glittering promanade of an opening night.

EARLY DEVOTION

The community spirit that would infect South and North Louisiana with enthusiasm for hundreds of projects started with George Brian, Jr.'s early devotion for dramatic arts. In church, at school, and at civic functions in Baton Rouge, wherever there was a podium or stage, there was young Brian. As a seventeen - year - old student at Baton Rouge High School he singlehandedly wrote, directed, and cast the 75 roles for his mammoth two-year production of "Rhodopis." Working evenings and nights, Brian perfected his play, designed the scenery and costumes, and rehearsed his own leading role to stage his first smash-hit which played to an audience of 2,000 fellow-students and citizens. Complete with Egyptian Pharaohs, this vital production was instrumental in creating what colleagues and theatergoers like to call "Brianism." "Brianism" is the philosophy of a man who has boundless energy, little time, limited facilities, and even less production budget, but who somehow manages to get things done. "I think we can do it."

By 1938, when Brian entered Louisiana State University, he was completely dedicated to his chosen field of drama. His career was interrupted in 1941 when the speech master was cast in a critical role with the United States Army Intelligence Service intercepting messages on the German Army's radio networks in Africa and Europe. Returning to LSU to receive his bachelor of arts degree in 1948, Brian scored another first by giving a record number of talented performances in 17 major campus productions.

DIRECTED LITTLE THEATER

From 1948 to 1952, Brian directed the Baton Rouge Little Theater producing 16 three-act plays, and gaining a place on the group's board of governors, and the positions of vice president, and business manager. Switching from the roles of first manager-director with ease and ability, he cast the plays, directed the productions, supervised the costumes and make-up, and assumed full managerial duties.

As a member of the Circle Players Repertory Company, Brian played summer stock in Biloxi, Miss., and in 1951 he received his master's degree working as a graduate assistant in the LSU Department of Speech. Since education had always shared the spotlight with drama, Brian wrote his dissertation on the "History of The Theater in Louisiana from 1900 to 1925." The lengthy documentary is a valuable record of drama in its fledgling stages in Louisiana. While working on his degrees Brian had again managed to break the LSU acting record by appearing in over 20 top stage productions.

It is easy to see how the characters of "Dr. Brian," and "Mr. Versatility of The Theater" came into being as Brian made transformations to a Chamber-Of-Commerce George Jessel, director of a style show or Miss Louisiana Pageant, and television and radio narrator.

RESISTED URGING

In 1953 when Brian joined the faculty of Northeast his list of credits and popularity was firmly established. For years he has resisted the urging of his colleagues to try his talents on Broadway.

He stated, "I don't think I would like that kind of life even if I were able to make it to the top."

His colleagues, fellow-actors, dazzled students, and his wife, Jo, whom Brian met when she appeared in one of his productions, are confident that he would be a success.

As a graduate assistant in speech, Jo Brian teaches, assists in sewing costumes, does legwork for her husband's productions, and appears in Monroe Little Theatre. She laughed, "Since he spends every waking hour knee-deep in drama, I have accused him at times of being narrow in his interests. I have only to remember his accomplishments to know that it's a remark that needs to be qualified. He has narrowed his interests down to one wide field."

As early as the LSU production of "Village Green," when George Brian, Jr. portrayed the mild-mannered, henpecked husband, Walter Godkin, who underwent an astounding reversal of character to spontaneous applause, there were those who knew that George Brian, Jr. was a professional who would make it just as far as he wanted to go. He has chosen to go as far as Louisianians will go with him.

Brian's talent found a new challenge when he began to study the colorful history of Monroe for his proposed staging of a live pageant on the banks of Bayou DeSiard. As usual, his enthusiasm grew until nothing seemed impossible. In October, 1956, Brian began his documentary color film, "The Gift of The Ouachita," which was 10 years in the making. The film took Brian and his crew of students to actual location spots where historic moments had taken place, and expanded to other parts of Louisiana, into Mississippi, Texas, and Oklahoma. It was a film which taught him patience as he waited for production budgets to mend. Written, directed, and filmed by Brian, the saga of "the sacred silver water," has become a valuable aid to New Orleans Public School System teachers in their film library, in the Baton Rouge State Film Library, and various other institutions in Louisiana for studying and teaching geography and history. From the decade of work, involving staging and restaging, with meticulous attention to research, emerged a factual and colorful account of the settling of the Ouachita.

"When casting the role of Alexander Breard, an early settler who came in 1795 with Don Philip Neri Baron de Bastrop, I went out and found his descendent, Sylvester Breard. Descendants bring the pride of family heritage to their parts."

Pealing notes of alarm grew to drum beats as primitive red men emerged from the bushes to peer warily at the first white settlers. Sturdy cabins sprang up from the wilderness to a bustling symphony, and the scenes grew tamer as the river land became a settlement. Dixie Riverboat tunes heralded the coming of the steamboat, and the tempo grew refined as prim ladies set up school in a one-room cabin.

Pointing out a careful deletion in the film, Brian said, "The pioneer jumped off his horse and his gun belt slid to his feet. It taught me to look at hips when casting the parts for soldiers."

It was winter in the southland. Brian explained, "When researching the history of Monroe we were careful to observe the dates, and film the events according to season. In the big snow of 1958 I made a mad scramble for the camera and crew to shoot the winter scenes."

Chief Tin-Hi-Ouen of the Caddo Nation made a formidable entrance to confer with Commandant Don Juan Filhiol. He confirmed with savage motion that the arrow brought from the neighboring Archer home which was attacked and burned, belonged to the hated tribe of Osage Indians. The discordant movements ended on a courageous rise as Fort Miro, later known as Monroe, was constructed for protection against future attacks. All ended well in the land of "the sacred silver waters."

Speaking of his future plans with no intention of resting on his laurels for a well-deserved intermission Brian said, "I've already started research on "The Battle of Port Hudson," and I'm almost sure that I can get the Corp of Engineers to detonate the explosives for the action scenes."

Brian goes from classroom to stage to Little Theater, out on location, to speaking engagements, on to television appearances, with an occasional breather backstage to climb a ladder and adjust the lights, or supervise the make-up. Wherever he goes it will soon be showtime.

The air was heady with the intoxicating "Brianism."

"I'm still reaching for that perfect play."

"Nothing is too ambitious if you really want to do it."

'It's Nice to Have You in Birmingham,' says the sign at the city's airport. And more people are finding it's nice to be there—nowadays. The Alabama city, a symbol only a few years ago of die hard segregation, and anti-Negro violence has come a long way in establishing a new spirit. All is not 100 per cent perfect by any means, but for Negroes and whites alike, it is a sunnier day.

By RELMAN MORIN
AP Special Correspondent

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Some things are hard to believe even when you see them in operation. Birmingham, Alabama, is the case in point.

The city has made such startling progress in the field of race relations that it is scarcely recognizable today. Quietly, solutions to many problems have been found, answers that would have have been considered impossible, even unthinkable, only a few years ago.

Only a few years ago.

In the hot summer of 1963, thousands of Negroes came boiling out of Kelly Ingram Park in downtown Birmingham, and began a series of large-scale demonstrations in the streets. Photographs flashed around the world, showing water from fire hoses knocking them to the ground, and leashed police dogs lunging at them. More than 3,000 were jailed.

'DYNAMITE HILL'

At night, bombs exploded so frequently in a Negro residential district that it came to be known as "Dynamite Hill." Four Negro girls, attending Sunday School, were killed when a bomb blasted the basement of their church.

Communication between the leadership of the races broke down completely. Overnight, "Birmingham" became a national, even a global, synonym for racial hatred and terror.

As one law-enforcement officer puts it today, "Resistance in high places to desegregation was interpreted to mean, "Get out your dynamite and guns."

At that time, hotels and public facilities were tightly segregated. A Negro couldn't eat a sandwich at a department store lunch counter.

Today, a civic boosters' group meets at breakfast in a major downtown hotel. Negro couples sit at tables with white members of the organization. Negroes attend the annual Man-of-the-Year dinner of the Young Men's Business Club of Birmingham.

At that time, a big, red-hot issue was to get one Negro on the police force.

Today, the department employs nine Negroes, six patrolmen, two clerk-typists, and a nurse matron. It says it has room for more.

At the time, the Negro could take no pride in Birmingham. He wasn't consulted about the problems or the shape of things to come.

Today, Negroes are members of the Chamber of Commerce. They have been brought into the Housing, Planning and Library commissions. They attended meetings of the City Council. And, says Mayor Albert Boutwell, "They exercise their rights of citizenship without fear or restraint."

Perhaps the most significant fact is that communication has been restored between the white and Negro communities. They are talking out their differences now, whereas in 1963-64, the Negro had no channel through which he could voice his grievances. If he tried, the answer was apt to be mass arrests.

This is not to say that a magic wand has been waved over Birmingham, causing all its problems to vanish overnight.

A hard core of segregationist sentiment remains, the city's leaders say. But how great is the influence of this group? Leaders in both races say it has been greatly reduced.

Likewise, some Negroes are anything but satisfied with what has been accomplished. They concede that progress has been made since the dark days, but they say it isn't enough.

"There is no sense of urgency," says the Rev. J. E. Lowrey, pastor of St. Paul Methodist Church, and president of the interdenominational Ministers Alliance. "For one thing, a concentrated program of employment for Negroes is needed."

Says Dr. John W. Nixon, head of the Alabama chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, "We have made progress since 1963, but in terms of 1967, it is too little and too slow. We are still far behind."

To explain how and why the change came about, you get back to 1963-64.

"We had a regressive - minded group in the city government," says Don Stafford, head of the AFL - CIO in Birmingham. They wanted to maintain the status quo. White leaders wouldn't speak up."

"I think the decision markers in the community realized that the disturbances could have been avoided," says a prominent merchant. "But nobody wanted to step out and take the lead. We were all afraid of public opinion."

Then came the street demonstrations, the bombings and killings, the uproars when two schools were desegregated in 1964. Birmingham had a savage, ugly image.

Motivated by practical as well as moral considerations, influential men and women in the city determined that accommodations must be found to the racial and civic problems.

They soon found an asset.

A man who has involved himself deeply in the effort to create a new image says, "We hadn't realized the good and stable leadership in the Negro community. When we did recognize it, we knew we could work together."

One of the motivating factors was just plain business.

Birmingham, like many Southern cities, has been reaching out aggressively to attract firms from other parts of the country. Racial disturbances sharply inhibited the effort. Arthur Shores, a widely respected Negro attorney, said, "Business just wasn't coming to Birmingham.

The degree of success in changing that is illustrated by a statistic. The mayor says, "There are more than 20,000 wage earners today who were unemployed in May, 1963."

He estimates that Negroes are filling half these new jobs. In the great steel mills, says Don Stafford — himself a steel worker in addition to his union duties — Negroes now occupy positions requiring skills, whereas before they could rise no higher than helper to the white man holding such a job.

The political picture has changed Miraculously, too.

Voter registration has enrolled 72,000 Negroes, more than one-fourth of the total vote in Jefferson County, which embraces Birmingham. A Negro businessman said. "White politicians now ask to address our meeting — in churches and so on— when they are campaigning for office."

Arthur Shores is one of 16 Negroes elected to the County Democratic Executive Committee. He says they have been placed in "strategic positions," The committee has 118 members.

A Birmingham professional man says the Negro vote was "instrumental" in changing the form of city government. He described the old one, a three man commission, as "deaf to the needs and pleas of business, industry, and racial minorities alike."

The present government is composed of Mayor Boutwell and a nine-member City Council.

The Councilmen are elected at - large, rather than from individual wards or districts, and therefore it probably will be some time before a Negro is elected to it.

Thus, Dr. Nixon says he is not impressed by the changes in the political pattern in Birmingham.

"We don't elect a Negro to represent us," he says, "At best, it's a choice between the lesser of two evils if two segregationists are running for the Council."

Nonetheless, it is obvious that in a close election race, the Negro vote might well be the determining factor, the balance of power. This has happened in other Southern cities and, where the Negro uses his vote, he can affect politicians and their policies.

Under court order, and against great resentment, the desegregation of Birmingham schools began in the autumn of 1964.

One was Ramsay High School. The star of its basketball team this year was Curtis Gary Jackson, a Negro.

As for the statistics, 246 Negroes now attend formerly all - white high schools and 115 are in formerly segregated elementary schools. Seven of the nine high schools, which were all - white, and 13 of 45 formerly all - white elementary schools, are now desegregated.

One of the most striking reflections of the new spirit in Birmingham can be seen in the law enforcement agencies. For decades, and often with good reason, the Negro has feared and mistrusted the policeman or sheriff. It will take a long time to change this, but the point is that for the first time the white community is trying.

A tableau:

On a bright sunny morning recently, Sheriff Melvin Bailey, Chief Deputy Raymond Belcher and Police Capt. Glenn Evans drove to the all - Negro Robert R. Moton High School, on the outskirts of Birmingham.

They spoke to students and faculty in the auditorium. Their purpose, Bailey said, was to "alert the communities, white and Negro, to our problems of law enforcement, to identify with the problems, to bring everybody into it."

Said Evans, "There is no longer any room for bias and prejudice in enforcing the law."

Each officer, in one way or another, told the audience he wanted them to believe "the law enforcement officer is a friend, not an enemy."

And, Belcher said, "We have need for qualified officers from the Negro community." He described the in-service training program for officers. Applause interrupted him several times.

This was a "Community Relations Program," the sixth of its kind, instituted by Bailey and Chief of Police Jamie Moore.

Rev. Lowrey called all this "Good, long-range planning."

But he believes desegregation of the district attorney's office, the election of Negro judges and the employment of Negro bailiffs in the courts would carry more conviction in the Negro community.

In this connection, Negro leaders assert that 10 Negroes, and no whites, have been killed by officers in the past 14 months. They argue that such cases should automatically go to the grand jury for investigation. This is one of their principal grievances today.

Some, but not all, Negro leaders claim that the new climate in Birmingham has not erased discrimination against hiring Negroes in business and industry. "The head of the firm," says Dr. Nixon, "may be sincerely interested in improving conditions. But the chances are that his personnel people, who do the actual hiring, are segregationists."

Still, you find Negroes in positions today where they never were before, in the transit companies, in banks and offices.

Mrs. A. G. Gaston, who operates the Booker T. Washington Business College, says 56 students are ready to graduate this year, "and just about all of them are already placed in office jobs."

Along with these sweeping social and political changes, Birmingham is in a ferment of activity focusing on civic and cultural development. The program entails an outlay of $300 million.

It embraces a $25-million civic center complex, already funded; the expansion of the Medical Center and its newly established University of Alabama in Birmingham from 15 to 60 blocks; "Park West," which will replace Negro slums with a high rise and garden complex — this is being largely financed through the Negro leadership; "Operation New Birmingham"; "Operation Pride"; $2.7 million for facilities for music, art, the theater and sciences at Birmingham Southern College; the "Downtown Action Committee" pushing a tremendous building program in the heart of Birmingham; a seven-acre Japanese garden public park; theater groups; fine arts centers.

A statistic shows what has been happening. Average family income is $7,200 a year, up 88 per cent since 1950. Other economic barometers are equally impressive.

In a speech about the "Second Reconstruction" in the South, John Bloomer, managing editor of the Birmingham News, cites his city as an example and said: "There are some who are loudly deploring the evolutionary changes that I have listed. Others, evidently fewer in number, enthusiastically welcome them. In some respects, the South has been dragged by its heels into this new era. But there can be no denial by anyone that the revolution — unarmed but still a revolution — has taken place."

FOR THE FIRST time in five weeks the Associated Press Average of 60 stocks advanced, closing Friday at 323.3 from 319.5 a week ago. The Dow Jones Average of 30 industrials closed at 874.89, up from 863.31 a week ago. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Stock Market Snips Decline Of 4 Weeks

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week snipped off a decline of four weeks and posted a good gain on news of the Israeli triumph in the Middle East.

The week began with a jolting loss on first news of the outbreak of hostilities but before Monday was over stock began to recover. They advanced every day thereafter although on the last two trading days the rise was moderate.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week advanced 3.8 to 323.3, making its biggest weekly rise since the week ended April 22 when it gained 4.3.

Volume was 48,544,801 shares compared with 32,566,910 in the four - day trading week previous, shortened by the Memorial Day observance.

In the war-jittery atmosphere Monday, the Dow industrials dropped 20.77 points in the first hour. If that loss had remained, it would have been the steepest slide since the assassination of President Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963 when the Dow fell 21.16.

With fear at its worst and prices at their weakest on Monday, the cool professionals began to pick up cheap stock. For every one of the 11 million shares sold on Monday there was a buyer. These were professionals, specialists on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, floor traders, steady nerved executives of the fast-stepping "performance" mutual funds and even many of the experienced small investors."

The Monday selloff climaxed the four-week decline, the last two weeks of it dominated by the gathering thunder clouds over the Middle East.

Of 1,559 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, 977 rose and 462 fell.

Government and corporate bond prices declined while prices of tax-exempt bonds rose this week.

The Middle East war brought further unsettled conditions to the bond market, faced with a heavy calendar.

FOR THE FIRST time in five weeks the Associated Press Average of 60 stocks advanced, closing Friday at 323.3 from 319.5 a week ago. The Dow Jones Average of 30 industrials closed at 874.89, up from 863.31 a week ago. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Stock Market Snips Decline Of 4 Weeks

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market last week snipped off a decline of four weeks and posted a good gain on news of the Israeli triumph in the Middle East.

The week began with a jolting loss on first news of the outbreak of hostilities but before Monday was over stock began to recover. They advanced every day thereafter although on the last two trading days the rise was moderate.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks this week advanced 3.8 to 323.3, making its biggest weekly rise since the week ended April 22 when it gained 4.3.

Volume was 48,544,801 shares compared with 32,566,910 in the four - day trading week previous, shortened by the Memorial Day observance.

In the war-jittery atmosphere Monday, the Dow industrials dropped 20.77 points in the first hour. If that loss had remained, it would have been the steepest slide since the assassination of President Kenndey on Nov. 22, 1963 when the fell 21.16.

With fear at its worst and prices at their weakest on Monday, the cool professionals began to pick up cheap stock. For every one of the 11 million shares sold on Monday there was a buyer. These were professionals, specialists on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, floor traders, steady nerved executives of the fast-stepping "performance" mutual funds and even many of the experienced small investors."

The Monday selloff climaxed the four-week decline, the last two weeks of it dominated by the gathering thunder clouds over the Middle East.

Of 1,579 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, 977 rose and 462 fell.

Government and corporate bond prices declined while prices of tax-exempt bonds rose this week.

The Middle East war brought further unsettled conditions to the bond market, faced with a heavy calendar.

Arkansas — For: Gathings and Hammerschmidt. Against: Mills and Pryer. Louisiana — For: Rarick. Not voting: Hebert, Long and Willis. All others against.

Rejected (197 for, 210 against) a bill to increase the public debt limit from $285 billion to $365 billion, an actual increase of $29 billion over the temporary debt ceiling of $336 billion.

Future Danish Queen Marries French Envoy

COPENHAGEN (UPI)—The future queen of Denmark married a young French diplomat Saturday, and Copenhagen went wild with joy.

Princess Margrethe and her new husband rode away from the church in a coach-in-four, surrounded by cheering, rice-throwing Danes.

The joy didn't slacken even when a hussar fell off his horse in the royal cavalcade and the horse bolted.

Margrethe said "Ja" to Count Henri de Laborde de Monpezat in a little brick church in downtown Copenhagen. From now on, the dark, good looking Frenchman, who will be 33 Sunday, will be known as "Prince Henrik of Denmark."

They were married before a crowd of kings, queens and newsmen in a little, cross-shaped brick church. The rest of Denmark watched the ceremony on their television sets, and the wedding was also broadcast to France, Belgium, Switzerland, Norway and Sweden.

The new Prince Henrik will be the first prince consort in Danish history when Margrethe, now 27, becomes queen. He has expressed the ambition to become a "hundred per cent Dane," and the wedding made him a Danish citizen.

The romance between the princess and the count, which began two years ago in London, is immensely popular with the royalty loving Danes. They jammed the streets to throw rice and confetti as the royal newlyweds rode off in a carriage escorted by 44 mounted hussars.

Woman Flier Retracing Earhart Trip

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Mrs. Ann Pellegreno, retracing the route of the ill-fated Amelia Earhart, took off from Fort Worth at 9:09 a.m. Saturday for New Orleans.

Mrs. Pellegreno, 30, a Michigan housewife stopped overnight at Southwest Airport with her two-man crew.

The attractive blonde, a flight instructor, began her round-the-world flight Friday in Oakland, Calif., and expects to complete it in four to five weeks.

Her route will take her from New Orleans to Miami, South America, India, Burma and Australia and over Holland Island in the Pacific. This is the point where her co-pilot, Col. Bill Payne, believes Miss Earhart disappeared 30 years ago.

Mrs. Pellegreno's flight will avoid the Middle East.

A second purpose, she said, is to try to discover Miss Earhart's fate.

Away From Home

Richard Enwright

The First Floor Of Heaven

The five cars of the Metro rolled through the tunnel, up a slight grade, and whipped around a curve into the daylight. The Metro seemed as at home above the city as below, and through its big windows, Paris sped by. Soon you could see the Seine and a tall, wraith-like tower which soared into the sky. At the station called "Ecole Militaire," the train stopped.

If you've been to Paris on a summer morning, you won't have forgotten the parks. On such a morning sunlight came through a line of tall poplars and fell near a sidewalk bench on which rested an old man and a young boy. There was an expanse of grass still wet from the night, dewy and clipped as if each blade knew its destiny and contributed to the overall perfection. There was the smell of grass, flowers, and roasting coffee. The park was quiet except for the horn of a taxi. On each of the park's corners rested a giant fot of M. Eiffel's tower.

Once the park had been a parade ground. At the far end, along the Seine, was a palace which had been a military school, "Ecole Militaire," a school built for the sons of aristocrats caught and broken in the floodwaters of a national revolution. In 1791, many of the aristocrats had been massacred on this grass which seemed to know peace, not war, not its place name, "Champ de Mars." But time erases the hurts and scars of even revolutions and the wrongs men do to other men.

A century later, in 1891, occurred a great world's fair, the Paris Exposition. Alexandre Gustave Eiffel, an engineer of the greatest ability, was commissioned to design and construct the symbol of the fair. He built a tower which rose above the city like a great steel ladder which stepped into the clouds. "Zut alors! For Shame!" the outraged citizens cried, "It is le monstre! Hideous! Useless! It is of great danger to Paris and will scare away even the birds. It will cause the lightening to come more often. Furthermore, we don't like it!" But M. Eiffel had a determination equal to his ability, and the tower was completed. Thus it was that seven thousand tons of iron and steel, and over a million dollars rose near the Seine — "Ah, Monsieur, les francs which are in that tower! — and you could almost have seen in its ribs the toil and work of those who rode the steel to dizzy heights. In the year of the fair, the tower paid its way. M. Eiffel's dream came true.

The four "legs" of the tower slope gently toward its center, meet, and move upward to the sky. "Monsieur, please go to the booth of tickets at the north corner. There, you may purchase tickets for all three elevators. For those who come from America, all three trips are necessary, for you should see the top. It is 994 feet, and from there you can see a view of great magnificence." If there were clouds and mist, I would have suggested otherwise," the gendarme said.

The elevator carried a number of passengers, had a wire - mesh door, and leaned backwards as if to catch its breath for the trip aloft. A bell rang, and it gently moved upward. The rooftops of Paris swung into view. You could see the Seine and Quai D'Orsay. Soon, it stopped at the first level and passengers moved to the outer rail. You could catch the aroma of coffee and fresh croissnats at the famed Restaurant Tour D'Argent which lived on that level. Below, the city gleamed in the sun, and in the Seine were mirrored white buildings and orangered roofed houses. Barges and boats gracefully eased up and down the river. Surely, there is no more beautiful city than Paris anywhere, and on that morning, it would have defined the brushes of artists.

But the time of additional accent had arrived, and in a smaller elevator which moved with cautious speed, you were whisked to the second level. Here was a smaller platform and a rushing wind. It was said that men of Paris journey with their amis to this place in the belief that wives would hardly journey to such a difficult height in search of the unfortunate truth.

One marveled at the steel tower and the men of Paris who had caused it to rise, then stepped into a yet smaller elevator. Zup! It climbed past the clouds and reached the top. From the glass windows of the tower, you could see the city spread for miles in all directions. there was wonder and thought about those who lived below. You might have seen the tomb of the unknown soldier who rested in the Arc de Triomphe. In that wind, the eternal flame would have danced and likely gone out. But it would be quiet near the soldier who sleeps for ever. The Champs - Elysees marched across the city, and there was a traffic jam of importance on the Quai de Louvre. Far below, the Place de la Concorde was ablaze with flowers. It would be a time of morning cafe at a table somewhere on the street, near the river, by a church, or beneath the rees. Gamins would stroll through the parks while children played as they have through the centuries. There was a particular sparkle about the fountains which belongs only to Paris.

You thought about these things from the top of M. Eiffel's tower, high above the world. Paris and all of France seemed yours when it was summer on the first floor of heaven.

Homecoming Set

The annual homecoming of the Providence Baptist Church in Point will be held today beginning with regular services at 11 a.m. conducted by the Rev. Charles Holstead.

The Rev. Alvin Peterson is the pastor of the church.

Lunch will be served, and gospel singing is planned for the afternoon.

Surgeon Takes Small Growth From Humphrey

His office announced that the growth, called a papilloma, was removed through a cystoscope. Humphrey is expected to stay in the hospital until the middle of next week and then resume normal activities.

He entered the Bethesda Naval Hospital on Friday night to determine whether antibiotics had been effective in combatting the bladder infection which developed about a month ago.

The drug therapy had been successful and the inflammation had subsided, the announcement said.

Crane Issues Candidate's Statement

JONESVILLE (Special) — Jack Crane of Concordia parish this week issued the following statement with his bid in the race for Representative for the parishes of Catahoula and Concordia.

"I, S. P. (Jack) Crane wish to announce my candidacy for the House of Representatives to serve the parishes of Catahoula and Concordia.

"I feel that I am fully qualified to serve you, having served as the Representative for Concordia Parish under the administration of Governor Robert F. Kennon, Governor Earl Long and Governor Jimmy Davis.

"I know and understand the problems and needs of the people of both parishes and will work with you, the people, to solve them.

"Let me assure you that if I am elected I will work as a full time representative, my time and services being available to all the people at all times.

"Before election day I hope to contact each one of you personally to earnestly solicit your vote and support.

Away From Home

Richard Enwright

The First Floor Of Heaven

The five cars of the Metro rolled through the tunnel, up a slight grade, and whipped around a curve into the daylight. The Metro seemed as at home above the city as below, and through its big windows, Paris sped by. Soon you could see the Seine and a tall, wraith-like tower which soared into the sky. At the station called "Ecole Militaire," the train stopped.

If you've been to Paris on a summer morning, you won't have forgotten the parks. On such a morning sunlight came through a line of tall poplars and fell near a sidewalk bench on which rested an old man and a young boy. There was an expanse of grass still wet from the night, dewy and clipped as if each blade knew its destiny and contributed to the overall perfection. There was the smell of grass, flowers, and roasting coffee. The park was quiet except for the horn of a taxi. On each of the park's corners rested a giant fot of M. Eiffel's tower.

Once the park had been a parade ground. At the far end, along the Seine, was a palace which had been a military school, "Ecole Militaire," a school built for the sons of aristocrats caught and broken in the floodwaters of a national revolution. In 1791, many of the aristocrats had been massacred on this grass which seemed to know peace, not war, not its place name, "Champ de Mars." But time erases the hurts and scars of even revolutions and the wrongs men do to other men.

A century later, in 1891, occurred a great world's fair, the Paris Exposition. Alexandre Gustave Eiffel, an engineer of the greatest ability, was commissioned to design and construct the symbol of the fair. He built a tower which rose above the city like a great steel ladder which stepped into the clouds. "Zut alors! For Shame!" the outraged citizens cried, "It is le monstre! Hideous! Useless! It is of great danger to Paris and will scare away even the birds. It will cause the lightening to come more often. Furthermore, we don't like it!" But M. Eiffel had a determination equal to his ability, and the tower was completed. Thus it was that seven thousand tons of iron and steel, and over a million dollars rose near the Seine — "Ah, Monsieur, les francs which are in that tower! — and you could almost have seen in its ribs the toil and work of those who rode the steel to dizzy heights. In the year of the fair, the tower paid its way. M. Eiffel's dream came true.

The four "legs" of the tower slope gently toward its center, meet, and move upward to the sky. "Monsieur, please go to the booth of tickets at the north corner. There, you may purchase tickets for all three elevators. For those who come from America, all three trips are necessary, for you should see the top. It is 994 feet, and from there you can see a view of great magnificence." If there were clouds and mist, I would have suggested otherwise," the gendarme said.

The elevator carried a number of passengers, had a wire - mesh door, and leaned backwards as if to catch its breath for the trip aloft. A bell rang, and it gently moved upward. The rooftops of Paris swung into view. You could see the Seine and Quai D'Orsay. Soon, it stopped at the first level and passengers moved to the outer rail. You could catch the aroma of coffee and fresh croissnats at the famed Restaurant Tour D'Argent which lived on that level. Below, the city gleamed in the sun, and in the Seine were mirrored white buildings and orange-red roofed houses. Barges and boats gracefully eased up and down the river. Surely, there is no more beautiful city than Paris anywhere, and on that morning, it would have defined the brushes of artists.

But the time of additional al accent had arrived, and in a smaller elevator which moved with cautious speed, you were whisked to the second level. Here was a smaller platform and a rushing wind. It was said that men of Paris journey with their amis to this place in the belief that wives would hardly journey to such a difficult height in search of the unfortunate truth.

One marveled at the steel tower and the men of Paris who had caused it to rise, then stepped into a yet smaller elevator. Zup! It climbed past the clouds and reached the top. From the glass windows of the tower, you could see the city spread for miles in all directions. there was wonder and thought about those who lived below. You might have seen the tomb of the unknown soldier who rested in the Arc de Triomphe. In that wind, the eternal flame would have danced and likely gone out. But it would be quiet near the soldier who sleeps for ever. The Champs - Elysees marched across the city, and there was a traffic jam of importance on the Quai de Louvre. Far below, the Place de la Concorde was ablaze with flowers. It would be a time of morning cafe at a table somewhere on the street, near the river, by a church, or beneath the rees. Gamins would stroll through the parks while children played as they have through the centuries. There was a particular sparkle about the fountains which belongs only to Paris.

You thought about these things from the top of M. Eiffel's tower, high above the world. Paris and all of France seemed yours when it was summer on the first floor of heaven.

Surgeon Takes Small Growth From Humphrey

His office announced that the growth, called a papilloma, was removed through a cystoscope. Humphrey is expected to stay in the hospital until the middle of next week and then resume normal activities.

He entered the Bethesda Naval Hospital on Friday night to determine whether antibiotics had been effective in combating the bladder infection which developed about a month ago.

The drug therapy had been successful and the inflammation had subsided, the announcement said.

Robinson Sparks Reds In Two 3-Run Rallies

CINCINNATI (AP) — Floyd Robinson ignited three-run rallies in the first and third innings sparking the Cincinnati Reds to a 9-4 victory over Houston Saturday.

Mel Queen picked up his seventh victory of the season against only one loss, checking the Astros on seven hits.

Robinson led off the first with a double and scored on a single by Pete Rose. A run-scoring single by Tony Perez and Deron Johnson's RBI single completed the rally.

In the third, Robinson and Pinson ripped singles and Robinson scored as Rose hit into a double play. Johnson, who had three hits, singled another run across and Don Pavletich's triple delivered a third, giving the Reds a commanding 6-1 lead.

The Reds added two runs in the sixth and one in the seventh before Jim Wynn drilled a three-run homer for Houston in the eighth.

Taylor Has Mixup On Saint Pact

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)—Green Bay Packer fullback Jim Taylor told United Press International Saturday that he planned to play football next season with the fledgling New Orleans Saints, but later switched his own signals and said he was misunderstood.

Taylor, the chunky graduate of Louisiana State University and a fixture in the Packer backfield for almost a decade, has been rumored as a cinch member of the Saints since New Orleans was granted the newest National Football League franchise last year.

"I will announce within the near future that I will sign with the Saints," Taylor told UPI early Saturday.

At the end of a lengthy conversation, Taylor was asked:

"Then you will call a press conference in Baton Rouge in the next few weeks?"

"Yes," Taylor said.

"And you will announce at that time that you have signed with the New Orleans Saints?" he was asked.

"Yes," said Taylor.

Giants Clobber Three Homers To End Atlanta Win Skein, 7-4

ATLANTA (AP) — Home runs by Willie McCovey, Tom Haller and Jim Hart powered the San Francisco Giants to a 7-4 victory over Atlanta Saturday night, halting the Braves' winning streak at four games.

McCovey slammed a two-run homer in the first inning, Haller connected with the bases empty in the fifth and Hart hit a two-run shot, also in the fifth, to chase Braves starter Tony Cloninger.

The Giants added two runs in the fourth on a walk, singles by Ollie Brown and Tito Fuentes, and Gary Geiger's two-base error.

Gaylord Perry, who gave up 10 hits in going the distance, evened his pitching record at 5-5 before a crowd of 40,047 — largest at Atlanta this season.

The loss was pinned on Cloninger, now 1-3. Cloninger gave up seven runs before he was relieved by Clay Carroll in the fifth.

McCovey caused most of the trouble for Cloninger, scoring the first three times he came to the plate.

Hank Aaron, returning to the lineup after missing three games with a pulled muscle, had three hits for Atlanta.

However, Perry snapped Joe Torre's consecutive hitting streak at 15 games by getting the big Atlanta catcher to hit into a double play in the first, ground out in the third, pop out in the fifth and hit into a fielder's choice in the seventh.

Plate umpire Lee Weyer said Saturday night that Cloninger would be fined $50 for allegedly throwing at San Francisco's Ollie Brown in the fifth inning.

Cloninger, who gave up home runs in the fifth to Tom Haller and Jim Hart, threw a pitch in the direction of Brown's head when he came up after Hart's blast.

Fords Asked To Slow Down At Le Mans

LE MANS, France (AP) — Ford jumped to a 1-2-3 lead and was setting a blistering pace in the early stages of the 24-hour Le Mans auto race Saturday night while Ford team directors were cautioning their drivers to slow down.

The front running car, a 7-liter Mark IV Ford, driven by Dan Gurney of Costa Mesa, Calif., and A.J. Foyt of Houston, Tex., was a full lap ahead of the nearest challenging Ferrari after six hours.

The Gurney-Foyt car had averaged 140.43 miles per hour.

Gurney and Foyt were followed in order by two other Mark IVs, one driven by Bruce McLaren of New Zealand and Mark Donohue of Stonybrook, N.Y., the other piloted by Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., and Lucien Bianchi of Belgium.

A Chaparral was fourth with Phil Hill of Santa Monica, Calif., and Mike Spence of Britain alternating at the wheel.

The P-4 Ferrari driven by Ludovico Scarfioti of Italy and Britain's Mike Parkes, was in fifth place.

The rest of the seven-car Ferrari entry was clustered in six of the next eight places. It seemed certain the Ferraris, unwilling to make an atetmpt to keep up with the Fords, wanted to stay within striking distance should the Ford machines fail.

Worries about the speed of the pace was apparent in the Ford camp. One Detroit spokesman said, "Our biggest problem now is trying to get our drivers to slow down and save the cars."

The Ford driven by Denis Hulme of New Zealand and Lloyd Ruby of Wichita Falls, Tex., set a lap record for the race in covering the 8.35 mile course in 3 minutes, 23.6 seconds for an average of 147.57 miles per hour.

The old mark was established last year by Gurney in a Mark II Ford at 3:30.6 for an average of 142.66 m.p.h. The Hulme-Ruby car was not among the top five, however, because it was forced to the pits later by mechanical trouble.

Of the 54 cars starting the race, 49 still were running after the first two hours. A Lola-Aston driven by John Surtees of Britain went out after only 19 minutes with a blown gasket and burned piston.

A cool breeze chilled the big crowd as the drivers ran across the track in the classic LeMans start to hop into the cars and roar away from the starting line.

The size of the crowd never is officially announced but estimates Saturday ranged from 250,000 to 300,000. The spectators lined the track to watch the cars flash by, then wandered away to restaurants, bars, carnival attractions, and automobiles exhibits set up in tent cities throughout the area.

The race had been billed as a showdown duel between Ford, which makes some two million cars a year mostly for family use, and Ferrari, which produces about 900 cars a year, most of them destined for racing.

Ford entered four of its latest model Mark IV cars and three of the Mark IIs that made a 1-2-3 sweep at LeMans last year. All of the Fords have big 7-liter engines that force the cars into the pits every hour for gasoline.

Ermer Never Lost Hope Of Going From Minors To Majors

ST. PAUL—MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — At 43, Calvin C. Ermer has spent a third of his life managing minor league baseball teams.

But he never gave up hope that he would one-day be summoned to manage in the major leagues. Friday he was summoned to replace Sam Mele at the helm of the Minnesota Twins.

He remembers the bus rides, the cheap hotels, the penny-pinching and the dusty fields of the minors. He also remembers that a man must have faith in his abilities.

"I started managing," he recalls, "in 1947 when I was 22 years old. I replaced Spencer Abbott at Charlotte. He was the oldest manager in baseball at 69, and I was the youngest.

"Phil Howser put me in as interim manager. The Calvin Griffith came down to Charlotte and asked me if I wanted to keep the job. I said, 'h— yes,' so I finished the season.

"Then, in 1949, Clark Griffith asked me if I wanted to go to Orlando as player-manager. I thought I could still make it to the majors as a player, so I told him no.

"So Mr. Griffith told me he would put me on the Charlotte roster and make me eligible for the player draft. I thought sure I would be drafted, but nobody took me.

"I figured I'd better start managing and I took the Orlando job for 1950. I've been managing ever since, except for one year (1962) as a Baltimore coach and two years (1963 and 1964) as a scout for the Orioles.

"I don't regret the years I spent managing in the minors. I figured someday a major league job would come along.

"Ted Lyons once told me not to take a bad ball club, but I feel I got a contender with the Twins. There are only 20 big league jobs, and it would be hard to turn down any of them. But I feel very good about taking over a club I consider a pennant contender."

Ermer is a lanky 6-feet-1, 190 pounder with a pleasant smile and a quiet manner.

His greying hair and deliberate walking strike to the mound give him a decided resemblance to Mele from a distance.

There are indications he may not be a great deal different from Mele as a manager.

Twins players who served under him in the minors say he stresses fundamentals, expects players to do things the way they should be done and runs his club with a firm but friendly hand.

These were' Mele's trademarks—sometimes described as a "ballplayers' manager"—until Mele appeared to lose contact with his players in the 1966 season.

Unlike Mele, Ermer never made it to the majors as a ballplayer—except for a brief period at the end of the 1947 season. He appeared in one game, going hitless in three times at bat.

"I was a good field, no hit player, I guess," he says laughingly.

Ermer vividly recalls the first game he managed as a 22-year-old at Charlotte 20 years ago. "It was a game like my first game here Friday night," he said. "We got the heck kicked out of us. It was almost the same score—11-1 or 11-2—I think."

Athletics Crush Cleveland, 10-1

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rookies Ramon Webster and Dave Duncan each rapped two-run homers and Kansas City added six unearned runs to crush Cleveland 10-1 Saturday night for their fourth straight victory.

Jim Nash hurled a six-hitter for his seventh triumph against five losses, Although he gave up the first run off Kansas City pitching in 27 innings when Max Alvis singled in a run in the third inning.

Webster hit his third homer in the first inning after loser Sonny Siebert walked rookie Reggie Jackson.

Duncan hit his second homer in as many days since joining the A's when he connected after Webster doubled in the sixth inning.

Rick Monday singled home a third-inning run made possible by Larry Brown's error and Brown's two errors in the seventh inning opened the gate to five more tainted runs.

Three runs scored when shortstop Brown threw wild to first base on Duncan's grounder and he bobbled another grounder, letting in another marker. Monday doubled for the fifth run.

Maris Blasts Homer In 11th For Card Win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Roger Maris blasted a three-run homer in the 11th inning giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-2 victory over Los Angeles Saturday night.

Tim McCarver opened the Cardinals' 11th against reliever Bob Miller with a double. But he was thrown out at third on Dal Maxvill's attempted bunt. Then Bobby Tolan singled and Maris smashed his third homer.

The Cardinals tied the score and knocked out Dodger starter Jim Brewer when pinch hitter Curt Flood walked to lead off the seventh and Tolan lined his second homer over the right field wall.

The Dodgers had taken a 2-0 lead against Larry Jaster in the first inning. Willie Davis opened with a double and Jim Hickman was safe on a fielder's choice when Jaster's throw to third base on his bunt failed to get Davis. Ron Hunt's grounder scored one run and Jim Lefebvre's sacrifice fly brought home the other.

Chisox Lay Waste To Yanks, 9-0

Peters, 7-3, struck out nine Yankees and was backed by an 18-hit attack, including three apiece by rookie Ed Stroud and Peter Ward.

Stroud drove in the only run Peters needed with a single in the first inning, beat out a bunt to touch off a two-run rally in the third and capped a four-run burst in the eighth with another run-scoring single.

Oliva Key To Oriole Drubbing

ST. PAUL — MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Tony Oliva drove in six runs with a homer, double and gjound out and Rich Rollins belted two homers behimd Jim Kaat and the Minnesota Twins crushed Baltimore 8-1 Saturday night.

It was the first victory for the Twins under new Manager Cal Ermer, who replaced Sam Mele Friday night, after the first game of a day-night doubleheader was rained out Saturday afternoon.

Oliva got his first RBI hitting into a force play in the first inning. He doubled home two runs for a 3-0 Minnesota lead in the third and slammed his second homer with two mates aboard for an 8-0 lead in the seventh.

Tribe Athletes In Basin Play

MONROE, La.—Four members of the 1967 Northeast State baseball team are playing summer baseball this year in the Basin League, considered the nation's No. 1 collegiate summer circuit.

Shortstop Joe Canal of Monroe and pitcher David Davis of Norco are playing with the Winner, S.D., team in the six-city league, outfielder - first baseman Marvin Brosset of Alexandria is playing with Mobridge, S.D. and third baseman Glynn Saulters of Lisbon is playing with the Rapid City, S.D., team.

Brosset and Canal are playing with their clubs for the second summer. Canal also played in the Kentucky-Indiana College Baseball League in 1965.

Brosset, Canal and Davis made the 1967 all-Gulf States Conference team selected by league coaches. Brosset was second in the conference in hitting with a .376 average and Davis led the circuit with a 1.2 earned-run aberage. Canal had a .210 average but hit .308 and .338 in 1965 and 1966. Saulters was fourth in GSC batting with a .365 average and led the circuit in runs-batted in with 33.

Pittsburgh Claims Third Straight Win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pinch hitter George Spriggs tripled with one out in the ninth inning and scored on Matty Alou single, lifting the Pittsburgh Pirates past Philadelphia 4-3 Saturday night for their third straight victory.

Spriggs, batting for pitcher Al McBean, tripled off the center field wall against Philadelphia reliever Dick Hall and Alou followed with a single to right.

The Pirates tied it 3-3 in the seventh on a walk, a sacrifice bunt, Alou's infield hit and Manny Mota's sacrifice fly.

Cookie Rojas' bases-loaded single off reliever Steve Blass in the third boosted the Phils' lead to 3-0. Blass came on after Beale gave up singles to Gary Sutherland and Rich Allen, then hit Lock with a pitch to fill the bases.

The Pirates closed the gap with two runs in the sixth. Mota singled, went to third on Robert Clemente's single and scored on an infield out. Bill Mazeroski then singled Clemente across.

Howard Raps Two Homers In Solon Win

BOSTON (AP) — Frank Howard hammered his 13th and 14th homers for three runs and Camilo Pascual and Dave Baldwin combined for a six-hitter as the Washington Senators beat the Boston Red Sox 7-3 Saturday in 95-degree heat.

Howard put the Senators ahead 2-0 in the first inning with a blast off Lee Stange after Fred Valentine doubled, and closed the scoring with a solo smash in the ninth.

Paul Casanova doubled and Ken McMullen singled for a run in the second inning and another scored on Mike Andrews' error in the fourth for the decisive run.

The Senators added two more in the sixth when Casanova lined another double and eventually scored on a suicide squeeze bunt by Pascual and Tim Cullen singled in a run.

Pascual was overtaken by the blistering weather after retiring the first batter in the eighth. Rebounding from arm surgery last year, he surrendered a two-run homer to George Scott in the first inning and a solo shot to Rico Petrocelli starting the second, but allowed only three more hits for his sixth victory against three defeats.

Robinson Sparks Reds In Two 3-Run Rallies

CINCINNATI (AP) — Floyd Robinson ignited three-run rallies in the first and third innings sparking the Cincinnati Reds to a 9-4 victory over Houston Saturday.

Mel Queen picked up his seventh victory of the season against only one loss, checking the Astros on seven hits.

Robinson led off the first with a double and scored on a single by Pete Rose. A run-scoring single by Tony Perez and Deron Johnson's RBI single completed the rally.

In the third, Robinson and Pinson ripped singles and Robinson scored as Rose hit into a double play. Johnson, who had three hits, singled another run across and Don Pavletich's triple delivered a third, giving the Reds a commanding 6-1 lead.

The Reds added two runs in the sixth and one in the seventh before Jim Wynn drilled a three-run homer for Houston in the eighth.

Taylor Has Mixup On Saint Pact

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI)—Green Bay Packer fullback Jim Taylor told United Press International Saturday that he planned to play football next season with the fledgling New Orleans Saints, but later switched his own signals and said he was misunderstood.

Taylor, the chunky graduate of Louisiana State University and a fixture in the Packer backfield for almost a decade, has been rumored as a cinch member of the Saints since New Orleans was granted the newest National Football League franchise last year.

"I will announce within the near future that I will sign with the Saints," Taylor told UPI early Saturday.

At the end of a lengthy conversation, Taylor was asked:

"Then you will call a press conference in Baton Rouge in the next few weeks?"

"Yes," Taylor said.

"And you will announce at that time that you have signed with the New Orleans Saints?" he was asked.

"Yes," said Taylor.

Giants Clobber Three Homers To End Atlanta Win Skein, 7-4

ATLANTA (AP) — Home runs by Willie McCovey, Tom Haller and Jim Hart powered the San Francisco Giants to a 7-4 victory over Atlanta Saturday night, halting the Braves' winning streak at four games.

McCovey slammed a two-run homer in the first inning, Haller connected with the bases empty in the fifth and Hart hit a two-run shot, also in the fifth, to chase Braves starter Tony Cloninger.

The Giants added two runs in the fourth on a walk, singles by Ollie Brown and Tito Fuentes, and Gary Geiger's two-base error.

Gaylord Perry, who gave up 10 hits in going the distance, evened his pitching record at 5-5 before a crowd of 40,047 — largest at Atlanta this season.

The loss was pinned on Cloninger, now 1-3. Cloninger gave up seven runs before he was relieved by Clay Carroll in the fifth.

McCovey caused most of the trouble for Cloninger, scoring the first three times he came to the plate.

Hank Aaron, returning to the lineup after missing three games with a pulled muscle, had three hits for Atlanta.

However, Perry snapped Joe Torre's consecutive hitting streak at 15 games by getting the big Atlanta catcher to hit into a double play in the first, ground out in the third, pop out in the fifth and hit into a fielder's choice in the seventh.

Plate umpire Lee Weyer said Saturday night that Cloninger would be fined $50 for allegedly throwing at San Francisco's Ollie Brown in the fifth inning.

Cloninger, who gave up home runs in the fifth to Tom Haller and Jim Hart, threw a pitch in the direction of Brown's head when he came up after Hart's blast.

Fords Asked To Slow Down At Le Mans

LE MANS, France (AP) — Ford jumped to a 1-2-3 lead and was setting a blistering pace in the early stages of the 24-hour Le Mans auto race Saturday night while Ford team directors were cautioning their drivers to slow down.

The front running car, a 7-liter Mark IV Ford, driven by Dan Gurney of Costa Mesa, Calif., and A.J. Foyt of Houston, Tex., was a full lap ahead of the nearest challenging Ferrari after six hours.

The Gurney-Foyt car had averaged 140.43 miles per hour.

Gurney and Foyt were followed in order by two other Mark IVs, one driven by Bruce McLaren of New Zealand and Mark Donohue of Stonybrook, N.Y., the other piloted by Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., and Lucien Bianchi of Belgium.

A Chaparral was fourth with Phil Hill of Santa Monica, Calif., and Mike Spence of Britain alternating at the wheel.

The P-4 Ferrari driven by Ludovico Scarfioti of Italy and Britain's Mike Parkes, was in fifth place.

The rest of the seven-car Ferrari entry was clustered in six of the next eight places. It seemed certain the Ferraris, unwilling to make an atetmpt to keep up with the Fords, wanted to stay within striking distance should the Ford machines fail.

Worries about the speed of the pace was apparent in the Ford camp. One Detroit spokesman said, "Our biggest problem now is trying to get our drivers to slow down and save the cars."

The Ford driven by Denis Hulme of New Zealand and Lloyd Ruby of Wichita Falls, Tex., set a lap record for the race in covering the 8.35 mile course in 3 minutes, 23.6 seconds for an average of 147.57 miles per hour.

The old mark was established last year by Gurney in a Mark II Ford at 3:30.6 for an average of 142.66 m.p.h. The Hulme-Ruby car was not among the top five, however, because it was forced to the pits later by mechanical trouble.

Of the 54 cars starting the race, 49 still were running after the first two hours. A Lola-Aston driven by John Surtees of Britain went out after only 19 minutes with a blown gasket and burned piston.

A cool breeze chilled the big crowd as the drivers ran across the track in the classic LeMans start to hop into the cars and roar away from the starting line.

The size of the crowd never is officially announced but estimates Saturday ranged from 250,000 to 300,000. The spectators lined the track to watch the cars flash by, then wandered away to restaurants, bars, carnival attractions, and automobiles exhibits set up in tent cities throughout the area.

The race had been billed as a showdown duel between Ford, which makes some two million cars a year mostly for family use, and Ferrari, which produces about 900 cars a year, most of them destined for racing.

Ford entered four of its latest model Mark IV cars and three of the Mark IIs that made a 1-2-3 sweep at LeMans last year. All of the Fords have big 7-liter engines that force the cars into the pits every hour for gasoline.

Ermer Never Lost Hope Of Going From Minors To Majors

ST. PAUL—MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — At 43, Calvin C. Ermer has spent a third of his life managing minor league baseball teams.

But he never gave up hope that he would one-day be summoned to manage in the major leagues. Friday he was summoned to replace Sam Mele at the helm of the Minnesota Twins.

He remembers the bus rides, the cheap hotels, the penny-pinching and the dusty fields of the minors. He also remembers that a man must have faith in his abilities.

"I started managing," he recalls, "in 1947 when I was 22 years old. I replaced Spencer Abbott at Charlotte. He was the oldest manager in baseball at 69, and I was the youngest.

"Phil Howser put me in as interim manager. The Calvin Griffith came down to Charlotte and asked me if I wanted to keep the job. I said, 'h— yes,' so I finished the season.

"Then, in 1949, Clark Griffith asked me if I wanted to go to Orlando as player-manager. I thought I could still make it to the majors as a player, so I told him no.

"So Mr. Griffith told me he would put me on the Charlotte roster and make me eligible for the player draft. I thought sure I would be drafted, but nobody took me.

"I figured I'd better start managing and I took the Orlando job for 1950. I've been managing ever since, except for one year (1962) as a Baltimore coach and two years (1963 and 1964) as a scout for the Orioles.

"I don't regret the years I spent managing in the minors. I figured someday a major league job would come along.

"Ted Lyons once told me not to take a bad ball club, but I feel I got a contender with the Twins. There are only 20 big league jobs, and it would be hard to turn down any of them. But I feel very good about taking over a club I consider a pennant contender."

Ermer is a lanky 6-feet-1, 190 pounder with a pleasant smile and a quiet manner.

His greying hair and deliberate walking strike to the mound give him a decided resemblance to Mele from a distance.

There are indications he may not be a great deal different from Mele as a manager.

Twins players who served under him in the minors say he stresses fundamentals, expects players to do things the way they should be done and runs his club with a firm but friendly hand.

These were' Mele's trademarks—sometimes described as a "ballplayers' manager"—until Mele appeared to lose contact with his players in the 1966 season.

Unlike Mele, Ermer never made it to the majors as a ballplayer—except for a brief period at the end of the 1947 season. He appeared in one game, going hitless in three times at bat.

"I was a good field, no hit player, I guess," he says laughingly.

Ermer vividly recalls the first game he managed as a 22-year-old at Charlotte 20 years ago. "It was a game like my first game here Friday night," he said. "We got the heck kicked out of us. It was almost the same score—11-1 or 11-2—I think."

Athletics Crush Cleveland, 10-1

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rookies Ramon Webster and Dave Duncan each rapped two-run homers and Kansas City added six unearned runs to crush Cleveland 10-1 Saturday night for their fourth straight victory.

Jim Nash hurled a six-hitter for his seventh triumph against five losses, Although he gave up the first run off Kansas City pitching in 27 innings when Max Alvis singled in a run in the third inning.

Webster hit his third homer in the first inning after loser Sonny Siebert walked rookie Reggie Jackson.

Duncan hit his second homer in as many days since joining the A's when he connected after Webster doubled in the sixth inning.

Rick Monday singled home a third-inning run made possible by Larry Brown's error and Brown's two errors in the seventh inning opened the gate to five more tainted runs.

Three runs scored when shortstop Brown threw wild to first base on Duncan's grounder and he bobbled another grounder, letting in another marker. Monday doubled for the fifth run.

Maris Blasts Homer In 11th For Card Win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Roger Maris blasted a three-run homer in the 11th inning giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 5-2 victory over Los Angeles Saturday night.

Tim McCarver opened the Cardinals' 11th against reliever Bob Miller with a double. But he was thrown out at third on Dal Maxvill's attempted bunt. Then Bobby Tolan singled and Maris smashed his third homer.

The Cardinals tied the score and knocked out Dodger starter Jim Brewer when pinch hitter Curt Flood walked to lead off the seventh and Tolan lined his second homer over the right field wall.

The Dodgers had taken a 2-0 lead against Larry Jaster in the first inning. Willie Davis opened with a double and Jim Hickman was safe on a fielder's choice when Jaster's throw to third base on his bunt failed to get Davis. Ron Hunt's grounder scored one run and Jim Lefebvre's sacrifice fly brought home the other.

Chisox Lay Waste To Yanks, 9-0

NEW YORK (AP) — Lefthander Gary Peters pitched a four-hitter and poled a two-run homer, leading the Chicago White Sox to a 9-0 romp over the New York Yankees Saturday.

Peters, 7-3, struck out nine Yankees and was backed by an 18-hit attack, including three apiece by rookie Ed Stroud and Peter Ward.

Stroud drove in the only run Peters needed with a single in the first inning, beat out a bunt to touch off a two-run rally in the third and capped a four-run burst in the eighth with another run-scoring single.

Tribe Athletes In Basin Play

MONROE, La.—Four members of the 1967 Northeast State baseball team are playing summer baseball this year in the Basin League, considered the nation's No. 1 collegiate summer circuit.

Shortstop Joe Canal of Monroe and pitcher David Davis of Norco are playing with the Winner, S.D., team in the six-city league, outfielder - first baseman Marvin Brosset of Alexandria is playing with Mobridge, S.D. and third baseman Glynn Saulters of Lisbon is playing with the Rapid City, S.D., team.

Brosset and Canal are playing with their clubs for the second summer. Canal also played in the Kentucky-Indiana College Baseball League in 1965.

Brosset, Canal and Davis made the 1967 all-Gulf States Conference team selected by league coaches. Brosset was second in the conference in hitting with a .376 average and Davis led the circuit with a 1.2 earned-run aberage. Canal had a .210 average but hit .308 and .338 in 1965 and 1966. Saulters was fourth in GSC batting with a .365 average and led the circuit in runs-batted in with 33.

Pittsburgh Claims Third Straight Win

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pinch hitter George Spriggs tripled with one out in the ninth innjng and scored on Matty Alou single, lifting the Pittsburgh Pirates past Philadelphia 4-3 Saturday night for their third straight victory.

Spriggs, batting for pitcher Al McBean, tripled off the center field wall against Philadelphia reliever Dick Hall and Alou followed with a single to right.

The Pirates tied it 3-3 in the seventh on a walk, a sacrifice bunt, Alou's infield hit and Manny Mota's sacrifice fly.

Cookie Rojas' bases-loaded single off reliever Steve Blass in the third boosted the Phils' lead to 3-0. Blass came on after Beale gave up singles to Gary Sutherland and Rich Allen, then hit Lock with a pitch to fill the bases.

The Pirates closed the gap with two runs in the sixth. Mota singled, went to third on Roberto Clemente's single and scored on an infield out. Bill Mazeroski then singled Clemente across.

Howard Raps Two Homers In Solon Win

BOSTON (AP) — Frank Howard hammered his 13th and 14th homers for three runs and Camilo Pascual and Dave Baldwin combined for a six-hitter as the Washington Senators beat the Boston Red Sox 7-3 Saturday in 95-degree heat.

Howard put the Senators ahead 2-0 in the first inning with a blast off Lee Stange after Fred Valentine doubled, and closed the scoring with a solo smash in the ninth.

Paul Casanova doubled and Ken McMullen singled for a run in the second inning and another scored on Mike Andrews' error in the fourth for the decisive run.

The Senators added two more in the sixth when Casanova lined another double and eventually scored on a suicide squeeze bunt by Pascual and Tim Cullen singled in a run.

Pascual was overtaken by the blistering weather after retiring the first batter in the eighth. Rebounding from arm surgery last year, he surrendered a two-run homer to George Scott in the first inning and a solo shot to Rico Petrocelli starting the second, but allowed only three more hits for his sixth victory against three defeats.

WBA Rejects Clay, Affirms 'Box-Off'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The World Boxing Association's executive committee Saturday rejected an appeal to have Cassius Clay reinstated as heavyweight champion and announced an eight-man elimination tournament to pick his successor.

The WBA reaffirmed its action last month when it stripped Clay of his title for refusing to be inducted into the armed services.

"The executive committee of the WBA finds the action of Ca sius Clay, Muhammed Ali, to be detrimental to the best interests of professional boxing," said Bob Evans, WBA president.

The WBA also released the top 10 heavyweights for the month of June and said the top eight contenders would be eligible to compete in the tournament.

The WBA top ten list includes: 1. Karl Mildenberger, Germany; 2. Joe Frazier, Philadelphia; 3. Oscar Bonavena, Argentina; 4. Ernie Terrell; 5. Thad Spencer, Portland, Ore.; 6. Floyd Patterson, New York; 7. Jerry Quarry, Los Angeles; 8. Jimmy Ellis, Louisville; 9. Leotis Martin, Toledo, Ohio; 10. George Chuvalo, Canada.

Evans said the eight-man tournament would comprise seven different bouts but complete details of th etournament were not immediately available.

Before the executive committee meeting, Hayden Covington, Clay's attorney asked the WBA to use "a sense of fair play" and to reinstate Clay as the champion.

Astrodome Tilts Moved To 8 p.m.

The time has been changed for all remaining Houston Astros baseball games in the Astrodome from 7:30 to 8 p.m., effective this Monday night, H. B. (Spec) Richardson, Astros business manager, has announced.

"We have had many requests from fans for a later starting time due to daylight savings," Richardson said. "We hope this change will make it more convenient for the fans," he said.

The Astros return home Monday night to start an 11 - game homestand. They'll play four 8 p.m. games against the San Francisco Giants, then face the Atlanta Braves in three games, the St. Louis Cardinals in two and the Cincinnati Reds for one game.

Boales Joins McNeese As Head Baseball Coach

LAKE CHARLES(Special) — Hubert Boales, head football coach the past four years at Jasper (Tex.) High School, has joined McNeese State as head baseball and assistant football coach.

The 35 year old coach, who is a graduate of Sam Houston State College, succeeds Desmond Jones as the McNeese baseball coach and Charlie Kuehn as a football assistant.

Jones, who led McNeese to its first winning baseball season in six years this spring, relinquished his baseball chores to devote full time to his football duties as the Cowboys' defensive backfield coach.

Boales comes to McNeese with 12 years of high school coaching experience, all at Jasper High. For the past four years he has served as head football coach at the school but he also spent six years as the head baseball coach and four as the basketball coach while at Jasper.

The new Cowboy coach first entered the coaching ranks in 1956, assuming a position as head baseball coach and football assistant at Jasper High. That first year he led Jasper to a 15-3 baseball record with one of the stars on his team being Max Alvis, who currently plays third base with the Cleveland Indians.

Boales coached baseball in 1956 but then did not handle the team again until 1962. His last year as the school's baseball coach was 1965 when his squad posted a 21-6 record and won district and bi-district titles.

During his six years as the Jasper High baseball coach, Boales led his teams to two district and regional titles and to a third and fourth place finish in the state tournament. His won-loss record for that period was 100-35.

Boales also coached basketball four years at Jasper and in 1963 assumed the head football coaching position at the school. The past season was his most outstanding as football coach with his tea mposting a 7-3 record and finishing third in district play behind eventual state champion Bridge City and Silsbee.

At McNeese, Boales will also serve on the football coaching staff as the Cowboy end coach and chief scout.

A 1955 graduate of Sam Houston State College, Boales holds a B. S. degree in physical education.

Joe Kvaternik, Jr., son of Rivers Ford Sales Manager, wants his friends to know that Rivers Ford has a brand new shipment of the "Hot" Shelby GT Mustang, built by car race champion Carroll Shelby. Due to the tremendous popularity of this car, Rivers Ford has been out, but they now have a large shipment, and Joe urges you to stop in and pick out yours. Joe reminds his friends and potential customers that Rivers Ford is the only Shelby GT dealer between New Orleans and Memphis and between Dallas and Birmingham. SEE THEM NOW!

GSC Track Could Get Even Tougher

By TOMMY POINDEXTER
World Sports Writer

(Editor's Note: The battle for high school talent is still going on between members of the Gulf States Conference. Here Tommy Poindexter, a former quartermiler at Northeast, takes a look at the early recruits and their value to the track program of the GSC member school's.)

The Gulf States Conference track and field circuit appears to be getting tougher as time rolls on, if the early recruiting reports are used as a criteria.

Even with the loss of such outstanding thinclads as Northeast sprinter Ronnie Fountain and hurdle standout Roger Mann, both which hold or share conference records, there appears to be capable replacements coming in from the high school field.

Southwestern, the defending GSC champions for the past three years, has an outstanding crop of freshmen headed by Danny Couvillion, who has clocked 9.6 for the century and 21.8 for the 220 on a full curve. Couvillion heads the state prep track and field list with his 9.6 100 clocking and was voted the outstanding track man at the Preptacluar cinder fest in Alexandria last Saturday for his winning 9.7 performance in the century and his 21.8 in the 220. With USL losing only four seniors, sprinter Larry McCartney, quartermiler Ed Domingues, and Louis Mariast and Howard Trahan, both distance men, the losses shouldn't leave the Ragin Cajun track program too lax.

The south Louisiana Bulldogs have also picked up two fine distance men in milers Ronald Landry of Port Arthur, Tex., (4:17) and Robert Gilbert of Acadia Baptist Academy of Eunice (4.28.6) to join Irishman.

John McDonnell (4:07) who was declared ineligible at the GSC in Monroe and was not allowed to compete in the conference meet.

USL picked up Fair Park's John Trogel to give added strength to weight events. Trogel had a 160 - 6 spin in the discus to rank fourth best in the state throw and a 207 - 5 mark in the javelin which ranked him second in the state behind A. J. Seymour of Elton.

Northeast which has been runner up in the GSC for the last three seasons will probably be hurt more than any other school due to its losses. In addition to the loss of Fountain and Mann, Fred Vogel and Jim Bodan will be gone.

Beebe, who was slowed this year by a leg injury, set the state composite record in the 880 with a 1:52.5 performance while only a junior in addition to the running anchor on all of the Rebel relay teams. He has also dipped down in the low 48's on the mile relay and in the mid 21's on the 880 relay.

Ashley, who ranks as the second prep vaulter in the nation with a 5 - 2 jump, has been consistently over 14 feet most of the season. He will join Indian pole vault corps of Robert Forester (14 - 9), Pete Lenox (14 - 8), Tom Miller (14 - 8) and Ed Thompson (14 - 0), who will be sophomores next year.

Coach Bob Groseclose has also inked Richard Brown a fine miler from Jackson, Miss., who has clocked a 4:22 in the prep ranks.

The Tribe's main weaknesses appear to be the sprints and distances with the loss of Fountain, who you just don't replace over night, but the distance seems to be a carry over from last season since the Redmen did not have an entry in the mile or three mile in the conference meet.

Mann, a three time winner and GSC record holder in the 120 high hurdles and 440 intermediates, a fine relay hand will be missed greatly by Bob Groseclose but freshman Richard Polk proved he has ability. Polk clocked 14.0 to tie the best forsh time in the nation this season.

The Lions of Southeastern seem to be the team with all the speed. Andy Thiel, won the GSC 100 title with a windy 9.3 and the 220 in 21.2. Junior Ken Thibodaux (9.6) and newly recruited Louis Sirmon of Hahnville, who has stepped the century in 9.6 in the prep ranks and the 220 straight away in 21.0, give the Lions added sprint strength. Sirmon won the state AA100 title with a wind assisted 9.6 and the furlong with 21.0 but lost by a step to Couvillion in the Preptacluar.

Southeastern also boasts one of the top high school triple jumpers around in Jerry Cassidy of Fortier of New Orleans (46 - 7½). Cassidy has also gone over the 22 foot mark in the long jump and 6 feet in the high jump which should strengthen the Lion jumping events.

Louisiana Tech, which finished third in the conference meet, lost only Tim Hall, who has spun the discus 182 - 3 and won two GSC titles. But, the Canines have inked Mike Hancock of Ore City, Tex., who ranked among the Texas high school best with a 57 - 2 in the shot and a fair 144 - 2 in the discus.

The Bulldogs have also signed Mike Proctor a middle distance standout from White Oak, Tex., who has clocked 49.2 in the 440 and 1:57.6 in the 880 and Dale Williams a field ace from White House, Tex., who has cleared 14 feet in the pole vault and 6 - 4 in the high jump.

McNeese which finished in the cellar in the conference meet is staging a rebuilding campaign and in the process have picked up some fine prospects.

The Cowboys, under their new coach Bob Hayes, a former Louisiana Tech distance star, have inked Ted Pool of Beaumont, Tex., a 9.7 and 21.5 speedster and Joe Rogers, a weightman from Orange, Texas., who has tossed the shot 57 feet and the discus 175. They also have Eddie Sorrell a 49.5 quartermiler from New Iberia and a pair of the state's top javelin tossers in A. J. Seymour of Elton (218) and Mark Dufrene of Lake Charles (196 - 4.)

Hayes has also signed Lloyd Fisher of Lake Charles a 14 foot pole vaulter and two distance prospects in twin brothers Bobby and Dickie Morgan with Dickie posting the best mark of 4:30.5.

Northwestern will be losing four seniors in half miler Bob Dufalo, who was hampered by injuries most of past season but set the GSC 880 mark at 1:50.3 in 1965. Also lost are sprinters Corky Jackson, Donnie Coker and Steve Shine, so the Demons will be going on somewhat of a rebuilding program.

The Demons have inked two fine prospects in Fair Park sprint ace Gary Posey, who has done the 220 in 21.4 and the century in 9.9 and Leroy Sutton a quartermiler also from Fair Park, who has toured the oval in 50.3 for the open 440 and posted a 49.3 relay leg.

Mangum Holds State Am Golf Lead; Peddy 4 Back

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Jim Mangum continued to hold a one-stroke lead over defending champion Shirley Picard Saturday as both players shot even par 71s in the third round of the 1967 state amateur gold championship.

Spirits were gloomy in the field over the death of a caddy and injuries to three golfers in an auto accident after the tourney's second round Friday.

"It was just one of those rounds where I didn't make any good shots or any bad shots," said Mangum, a New Orleans oilman who won the state golfing crown in 1963.

He had two birdies and two bogeys in touring the 6,339-yard Covington Country Club links.

Picard, a detective captain on the Lafayette police force, echoed the same comment about his round.

"But I'm having putting troubles," he added.

Picard, seeking his third consecutive title, three-putted two greens and his card showed three birdies and the same number of bogeys.

Finals in the 72 hole tourney are Sunday.

Young Wayne Peddy, the 1965 state junior champion now playing on Northeast Louisiana State's golf team, was in third place at 217-four strokes back of Picard. Next came Tommy Wulff of Metairie at 218, followed by Dr. Charles Kennon of Shreveport, son of former Gov Robert Kennon, with a 221.

WBA Rejects Clay, Affirms 'Box-Off'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The World Boxing Association's executive committee Saturday rejected an appeal to have Cassius Clay reinstated as heavyweight champion and announced an eight-man elimination tournament to pick his successor.

The WBA reaffirmed its action last month when it stripped Clay of his title for refusing to be inducted into the armed services.

"The executive committee of the WBA finds the action of Cassius Clay, Muhammed Ali, to be detrimental to the best interests of professional boxing," said Bob Evans, WBA president.

The WBA also released the top 10 heavyweights for the month of June and said the top eight contenders would be eligible to compete in the tournament.

The WBA top ten list includes: 1. Karl Mildenberger, Germany; 2. Joe Frazier, Philadelphia; 3. Oscar Bonavena, Argentina; 4. Ernie Terrell; 5. Thad Spencer, Portland, Ore.; 6. Floyd Patterson, New York; 7. Jerry Quarry, Los Angeles; 8. Jimmy Ellis, Louisville; 9. Leotis Martin, Toledo, Ohio; 10. George Chuvalo, Canada.

Evans said the eight-man tournament would comprise seven different bouts but complete details of th etournament were not immediately available.

Before the executive committee meeting, Hayden Covington, Clay's attorney asked the WBA to use "a sense of fair play" and to reinstate Clay as the champion.

Astrodome Tilts Moved To 8 p.m.

The time has been changed for all remaining Houston Astros baseball games in the Astrodome from 7:30 to 8 p.m., effective this Monday night, H. B. (Spec) Richardson, Astros business manager, has announced.

"We have had many requests from fans for a later starting time due to daylight savings," Richardson said. "We hope this change will make it more convenient for the fans," he said.

The Astros return home Monday night to start an 11 - game homestand. They'll play four 8 p.m. games against the San Francisco Giants, then face the Atlanta Braves in three games, the St. Louis Cardinals in two and the Cincinnati Reds for one game.

CHICAGO FIRST baseman Pete Ward, (8), lunges to snare pop fly off the bat of New York's Horace Clarke in the first inning of the White Sox-Yankees game in New York Saturday as third baseman Don Buford also rushes in in background. Ward made the catch in front of the pitchers mound. Chicago won the game 9-0. (AP Wirephoto)

GSC Track Could Get Even Tougher

By TOMMY POINDEXTER
World Sports Writer

(Editor's Note: The battle for high school talent is still going on between members of the Gulf States Conference. Here Tommy Poindexter, a former quartermiler at Northeast, takes a look at the early recruits and their value to the track program of the GSC member school's.)

The Gulf States Conference track and field circuit appears to be getting tougher as time rolls on, if the early recruiting reports are used as a criteria.

Even with the loss of such outstanding thinclads as Northeast sprinter Ronnie Fountain and hurdle standout Roger Mann, both which hold or share conference records, there appears to be capable replacements coming in from the high school field.

Southwestern, the defending GSC champions for the past three years, has an outstanding crop of freshmen headed by Danny Couvillion, who has clocked 9.6 for the century and 21.8 for the 220 on a full curve. Couvillion heads the state prep track and field list with his 9.6 100 clocking and was voted the outstanding track man at the Preptacluar cinder fest in Alexandria last Saturday for his winning 9.7 performance in the century and his 21.8 in the 220. With USL losing only four seniors, sprinter Larry McCartney, quartermiler Ed Domingues, and Louis Mariast and Howard Trahan, both distance men, the losses shouldn't leave the Ragin Cajun track program too lax.

The south Louisiana Bulldogs have also picked up two fine distance men in milers Ronald Landry of Port Arthur, Tex., (4:17) and Robert Gilbert of Acadia Baptist Academy of Eunice (4.28.6) to join Irishman.

John McDonnell (4:07) who was declared ineligible at the GSC in Monroe and was not allowed to compete in the conference meet.

USL picked up Fair Park's John Trogel to give added strength to weight events. Trogel had a 160 - 6 spin in the discus to rank fourth best in the state throw and a 207 - 5 mark in the javelin which ranked him second in the state behind A. J. Seymour of Elton.

Northeast which has been runner up in the GSC for the last three seasons will probably be hurt more than any other school due to its losses. In addition to the loss of Fountain and Mann, Fred Vogei and Jim Bodan will be gone.

Beebe, who was slowed this year by a leg injury, set the state composite record in the 880 with a 1:52.5 performance while only a junior in addition to the running anchor on all of the Rebel relay teams. He has also dipped down in the low 48's on the mile relay and in the mid 21's on the 880 relay.

Ashley, who ranks as the second prep vaulter in the nation with a 5 - 2 jump, has been consistently over 14 feet most of the season. He will join Indian pole vault corps of Robert Forester (14 - 9), Pete Lenox (14 - 8), Tom Miller (14 - 8) and Ed Thompson (14 - 0), who will be sophomores next year.

Coach Bob Groseclose has also inked Richard Brown a fine miler from Jackson, Miss., who has clocked a 4:22 in the prep ranks.

The Tribe's main weaknesses appear to be the sprints and distances with the loss of Fountain, who you just don't replace over night, but the distance seems to be a carry over from last season since the Redmen did not have an entry in the mile or three mile in the conference meet.

Mann, a three time winner and GSC record holder in the 120 high hurdles and 440 intermediates, a fine relay hand will be missed greatly by Bob Groseclose but freshman Richard Polk proved he has ability. Polk clocked 14.0 to tie the best forsh time in the nation this season.

The Lions of Southeastern seem to be the team with all the speed. Andy Thiel, won the GSC 100 title with a windy 9.3 and the 220 in 21.2. Junior Ken Thibodaux (9.6) and newly recruited Louis Sirmon of Hahnville, who has stepped the century in 9.6 in the prep ranks and the 220 straight away in 21.0, give the Lions added sprint strength. Sirmon won the state AA100 title with a wind assisted 9.6 and the furlong with 21.0 but lost by a step to Couvillion in the Preptacluar.

Southeastern also boasts one of the top high school triple jumpers around in Jerry Cassidy of Fortier of New Orleans (46 - 7½). Cassidy has also gone over the 22 foot mark in the long jump and 6 feet in the high jump which should strengthen the Lion jumping events.

Louisiana Tech, which finished third in the conference meet, lost only Tim Hall, who has spun the discus 182 - 3 and won two GSC titles. But, the Canines have inked Mike Hancock of Ore City, Tex., who ranked among the Texas high school best with a 57 - 2 in the shot and a fair 144 - 2 in the discus.

The Bulldogs have also signed Mike Proctor a middle distance standout from White Oak, Tex., who has clocked 49.2 in the 440 and 1:57.6 in the 880 and Dale Williams a field ace from White House, Tex., who has cleared 14 feet in the pole vault and 6 - 4 in the high jump.

McNeese which finished in the cellar in the conference meet is staging a rebuilding campaign and in the process have picked up some fine prospects.

The Cowboys, under their new coach Bob Hayes, a former Louisiana Tech distance star, have inked Ted Pool of Beaumont, Tex., a 9.7 and 21.5 speedster and Joe Rogers, a weightman from Orange, Texas., who has tossed the shot 57 feet and the discus 175. They also have Eddie Sorrell a 49.5 quartermiler from New Iberia and a pair of the state's top javelin tossers in A. J. Seymour of Elton (218) and Mark Dufrene of Lake Charles (196 - 4.)

Hayes has also signed Lloyd Fisher of Lake Charles a 14 foot pole vaulter and two distance prospects in twin brothers Bobby and Dickie Morgan with Dickie posting the best mark of 4:30.5.

Northwestern will be losing four seniors in half miler Bob Dufalo, who was hampered by injuries most of past season but set the GSC 880 mark at 1:50.3 in 1965. Also lost are sprinters Corky Jackson, Donnie Coker and Steve Shine, so the Demons will be going on somewhat of a rebuilding program.

The Demons have inked two fine prospects in Fair Park sprint ace Gary Posey, who has done the 220 in 21.4 and the century in 9.9 and Leroy Sutton a quartermiler also from Fair Park, who has toured the oval in 50.3 for the open 440 and posted a 49.3 relay leg.

Mangum Holds State Am Golf Lead; Peddy 4 Back

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Jim Mangum continued to hold a one-stroke lead over defending champion Shirley Picard Saturday as both players shot even par 71s in the third round of the 1967 state amateur gold championship.

Spirits were gloomy in the field over the death of a caddy and injuries to three golfers in an auto accident after the tourney's second round Friday.

"It was just one of those rounds where I didn't make any good shots or any bad shots," said Mangum, a New Orleans oilman who won the state golfing crown in 1963.

He had two birdies and two bogeys in touring the 6,339-yard Covington Country Club links.

Picard, a detective captain on the Lafayette police force, echoed the same comment about his round.

"But I'm having putting troubles," he added.

Picard, seeking his third consecutive title, three-putted two greens and his card showed three birdies and the same number of bogeys.

Finals in the 72 hole tourney are Sunday.

Young Wayne Peddy, the 1965 state junior champion now playing on Northeast Louisiana State's golf team, was in third place at 217-four strokes back of Picard. Next came Tommy Wulff of Metairie at 218, followed by Dr. Charles Kennon of Shreveport, son of former Gov. Robert Kennon, with a 221.

Boros, Zarley Tame Soggy Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Veteran Julius Boros and youthful Kermit Zarley made their way through the darkness on rain-soaked Warwick Hills Golf course Saturday to tie with 214s for the third-round lead in the $100,000 Buick Open.

The 47-year-old Boros played in the next-to-last threesome while the 25-year-old Zarley was in the final group which hit the soggy 18th green as darkness fell.

Play in the rain-lagued tournament was held up nearly four hours because of two violent thunderstorms marked with hail and high winds which dumped torrents of water onto the cours and made it look in some places like small swimming pools.

Pro Roger Ginsburg of Bel Aire, N.Y., echoed the sentiments of many of the pros when he told PGA player rerpesentative Doug Ford at the rain-drenched 18th that play should have been halted because of the terrible weather conditions.

Rams Acquire Willie Daniel

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Los Angeles Rams acquired veteran defensive halfback Willie Daniel from the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday in exchange for a future draft choice.

Daniel, 29, has played six seasons in the National Football League. The former Mississippi State back stands 5-foot-11 and weighs 190.

Rams coach George Allen said, "Obtaining Daniel gives us an experienced man and also more flexibility in our defensive backfield."

Second Fast Pitch Tournament Is Set

A total of 16 teams are entered the Second Annual Monroe Jaycees Fast Pitch Invitational Softball tourney scheduled this week.

Play will begin Friday and run through Sunday, with three fields in use, Benoit softball field, Benoit Dixie League field and Selman softball field.

The field represents an increase of three teams over last year's entries.

Cobbs' Barbeque of Shreveport is the defending champion, but state championship teams from Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas appear to be good picks for the second annual title.

Trophies will be awarded to the sponsors of the first, second and third place teams along with individual awards for the players. Also, a Most Valuable Player will be selected.

Admission charges of .50 cents for adults and .25 cents for students over 12 will be in effect with the proceeds helping to finance the Dixie Senior World Series, which will be held in Monroe in August.

Among the top entries are Stephens Truck Lines of Lake Charles, Louisiana State champion and runner-up in regional play; Lincoln Liberty of Shreveport, Louisiana runner-up; El Dorado, Ark., Arkansas champion and Brookhaven, the Mississippi championship team.

Other entries include Burger Chef, third in the state in 1966, and Larry's Gulf Service, both of Monroe; Greenville, Miss; E. N. Edwards of Baton Rouge; Nassif Motors of Alexandria; Frierson Builders of Jackson, Miss; Beeson's Pharmacy of Texarkana, Yazoo of Baton Rouge, England Air Force Base of Alexandria; Texarkana O & C and Monsanto Chemical of New Orleans.

Jaycees Set Tournament In Tallulah

TALLULAH (Special) — The Madison Parish Jaycees announced today that they would hold their first annual four Ball Golf Tournament at the Tallulah Golf and Country Club Sunday, June 25.

The affair will be held to the first 96 players or 48 teams of two each. There will be a championship flight and five other flight and tee - off time is slated for 7:30 a. m.

The championship flight will be three 9 - hole matches of medal play while the other flights will be there 9 - hole matches of match play. Prizes will be given to the winner, runner - up and consolation winners in all fights.

Golfers may qualify on their own course or at Tallulah, however, your qualifying score must be accompanied with your entrance fee, which is $12.50 per player. Entrants will be accepted until all flights are full, however noon Saturday, June 24 has been designated as the deadline for entering.

In case all flights are completed before the deadline, tee times will be announced through the Monroe Morning World, if not they will be printed in the Sunday edition.

All local golfers who expect to enter are urged to enter now as a number of out of town Jaycees are expected to enter, and the flights are expected to be filled very fast.

For further information you are asked to contact Burney Rock Westmoreland, tournament chairman at 245 or call Mark Brown at the Tallulah Country Club at phone 1400.

The club's swimming pool will be open for visiting partiepants and their families.

NPSL Wants Recognition

NEW YORK (AP) — All avenues will be explored in an effort to gain official recognition for the National Professional Soccer League, President Frank Woods of the United States Soccer Football Association said Saturday after a closed-door session between the NPSL and USSFA.

Woods, whose home is in San Francisco, said immediate steps would be taken to bring the United Soccer Association, which has USSFA approval, and the NPSL together for conversations and conferences.

Tigers Announce Grid Schedule

OAK GROVE (Special) — Oak Grove High School will play a 10-game regular season football schedule in the coming season.

Homecoming for the District 2-A Tigers will be Oct. 20th against Holly Ridge.

Coach David A Lee Jr., will be in his sophomore season with the Bengals.

All regular season games, at home and away, will begin at 7:30 p.m. with the Bastrop Jamboree, Sept 1, opening the schedule.

The slate is evenly split with five games at home and five on the road. The Tigers open at home for three consecutive weeks and then hit the road for the next three weeks.

A traditional rival with league opponent, Lake Providence, closes the season on Nov 10th.

Hogan May Be Giant-Killer In U. S. Open

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — The 67th United States Open Golf championship will be played on the rolling green acres of Baltusrol Thursday through Sunday and, for the first time in a decade, Ben Hogan may be a real threat.

While Billy Casper was tossing an open house, while Jack Nicklaus was writing a magazine article, while Arnold Palmer and Gary Player were attending a New York awards dinner, Hogan was hiding out.

The 54-year-old marvel of another golfing age has been in seclusion for two weeks, working with quiet, steady concentration on his golf game — the game that won him four Opens.

"I expect to win every tournament I enter," said Hogan — always a sentimental favorite in his now infrequent appearances on the pro tour.

This time, however, he may be more than a sentimental choice. He has been playing more, and better, than he has in years. He hasn't won a tournament since the 1959 Colonial Nationa, but a refound putting touch has put him third in two major tournaments this season and among the top 10 at the Masters.

Most of the attention however, will be focused on the new giants of the game, Palmer, Player, Nicklaus and Casper, all of whom have been working on the 7,022 yard, par 70 Baltusrol course.

Casper, who recently opened a new home in New Jersey and threw a party to celebrate it, is the defending champion but Palmer —the man he beat in 1966 — may be the favorite.

The course, however, may work against him.

Johnny Farrell, a former Open champion who has been the pro at Baltusrol for about 25 years, said the massive, slick greens require a deft, cautious putter.

"A bold putter will kill himself," Farrell said.

And boldness, of course, is the key to Palmer's game.

"Strange things happen in the Open," Nicklaus commented, "but in any tournament you have to figure there are three or four players — you know them as well as I do — who you have to figure as the men to beat."

Palmer heads the list. The others, presumably, would be Player, Casper and perhaps Julius Boros and Gay Brewer.

Palmer, a golfing millionaire from Ligonier, Pa., has won only one Open in 1960, but has finished the regulation 72 holes in a tie for the top three other times — losing them all.

He lost to Nicklaus in 1962, lost in a three-way playoff the following year when Boros won his second title and, of course, to Casper last year in Palmer's fantastic collapse at the Olympic Club in San Francisco.

He had a seven stroke lead with nine holes to play, then blew it and Casper came on to tie him. In the 18-hole playoff, Palmer again took a lead, and again Casper came on, eventually beating him 73-69.

"It's not something you forget overnight," Palmer admitted. But he's put it from his mind well enough to put together one of his better seasons. He currently leads the PGA money winners with almost $100,000 for the year and appears at the top of his game.

Player, the little South African who won in 1965 and heads a seven-man foreign contingent, and Capser haven't played particularly well this season — at least by their previous standards — but both noted that "this is one you get up for."

Nicklaus, who toured the course a couple of weeks ago to write a magazine article, has been in a slump all year. He hasn't won an official tournament and missed the cut at the Masters.

The 27-year-old Ohio strongboy, however, is losse and confident.

"My game is coming around okay," he said. "I think I've got it licked."

Masters champ Gay Brewer, the 47-year-old Boros and young Frank Beard also will get plenty of attention. Boros had a remarkable spring tour while Beard has played some of the best golf on the tour in the last couple of months.

The field of 150 — 135 pros and 15 amateurs — will be cut to the low 60 and ties after Friday's second round. If a playoff is necessary — and four of the last five Opens have ended in ties — it will be over 18 holes Monday.

Rivers Ford has just received another shipment of SHELBY G.T.350/500
Champion race driver turned car builder, Carroll Shelby, takes a stock Mustang, adds a number of high performance options, modifies the suspension and steering to accommodate the added power, and creates one of the most talked about cars in the industry. The Shelby GT has such unique features as the functional brake ventilator and air scoop . . . competition-inspired front assembly . . . rollbar . . . real spoiler . . . bold racing stripe. It's powered by Ford's 428 cu. in. powerplant, modified to produce 355 horses . . . yet it's gentle enough to respond to a woman's touch.
Because of the overwhelming acceptance of the Shelby GT Mustang, we have been in short supply. However, we're happy to announce a new, large shipment. Come in soon . . . and pick out yours.

Boros, Zarley Tame Soggy Buick Open

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Veteran Julius Boros and youthful Kermit Zarley made their way through the darkness on rain-soaked Warwick Hills Golf course Saturday to tie with 214s for the third-round lead in the $100,000 Buick Open.

The 47-year-old Boros played in the next-to-last threesome while the 25-year-old Zarley was in the final group which hit the soggy 18th green as darkness fell.

Play in the rain-lagued tournament was held up nearly four hours because of two violent thunderstorms marked with hail and high winds which dumped torrents of water onto the cours and made it look in some places like small swimming pools.

Pro Roger Ginsburg of Bel Aire, N.Y., echoed the sentiments of many of the pros when he told PGA player rerpesentative Doug Ford at the rain-drenched 18th that play should have been halted because of the terrible weather conditions.

Rams Acquire Willie Daniel

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Los Angeles Rams acquired veteran defensive halfback Willie Daniel from the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday in exchange for a future draft choice.

Daniel, 29, has played six seasons in the National Football League. The former Mississippi State back stands 5-foot-11 and weighs 190.

Rams coach George Allen said, "Obtaining Daniel gives us an experienced man and also more flexibility in our defensive backfield."

Second Fast Pitch Tournament Is Set

A total of 16 teams are entered the Second Annual Monroe Jaycees Fast Pitch Invitational Softball tourney scheduled this week.

Play will begin Friday and run through Sunday, with three fields in use, Benoit softball field, Benoit Dixie League field and Selman softball field.

The field represents an increase of three teams over last year's entries.

Cobbs' Barbeque of Shreveport is the defending champion, but state championship teams from Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas appear to be good picks for the second annual title.

Trophies will be awarded to the sponsors of the first, second and third place teams along with individual awards for the players. Also, a Most Valuable Player will be selected.

Admission charges of .50 cents for adults and .25 cents for students over 12 will be in effect with the proceeds helping to finance the Dixie Senior World Series, which will be held in Monroe in August.

Among the top entries are Stephens Truck Lines of Lake Charles, Louisiana State champion and runner-up in regional play; Lincoln Liberty of Shreveport, Louisiana runner-up; El Dorado, Ark., Arkansas champion and Brookhaven, the Mississippi championship team.

Other entries include Burger Chef, third in the state in 1966, and Larry's Gulf Service, both of Monroe; Greenville, Miss; E. N. Edwards of Baton Rouge; Nassif Motors of Alexandria; Frierson Builders of Jackson, Miss; Beeson's Pharmacy of Texarkana, Yazoo of Baton Rouge, England Air Force Base of Alexandria; Texarkana O & C and Monsanto Chemical of New Orleans.

Jaycees Set Tournament In Tallulah

TALLULAH (Special) — The Madison Parish Jaycees announced today that they would hold their first annual four Ball Golf Tournament at the Tallulah Golf and Country Club Sunday, June 25.

The affair will be held to the first 96 players or 48 teams of two each. There will be a championship flight and five other flight and tee - off time is slated for 7:30 a. m.

The championship flight will be three 9 - hole matches of medal play while the other flights will be there 9 - hole matches of match play. Prizes will be given to the winner, runner - up and consolation winners in all fights.

Golfers may qualify on their own course or at Tallulah, however, your qualifying score must be accompanied with your entrance fee, which is $12.50 per player. Entrants will be accepted until all flights are full, however noon Saturday, June 24 has been designated as the deadline for entering.

In case all flights are completed before the deadline, tee times will be announced through the Monroe Morning World, if not they will be printed in the Sunday edition.

All local golfers who expect to enter are urged to enter now, as a number of out of town Jaycees are expected to enter, and the flights are expected to be filled very fast.

For further information you are asked to contact Burney Rock Westmoreland, tournament chairman at 245 or call Mark Brown at the Tallulah Country Club at phone 1400.

The club's swimming pool will be open for visiting participants and their families.

NPSL Wants Recognition

NEW YORK (AP) — All avenues will be explored in an effort to gain official recognition for the National Professional Soccer League, President Frank Woods of the United States Soccer Football Association said Saturday after a closed-door session between the NPSL and USSFA.

Woods, whose home is in San Francisco, said immediate steps would be taken to bring the United Soccer Association, which has USSFA approval, and the NPSL together for conversations and conferences.

Tigers Announce Grid Schedule

OAK GROVE (Special)—Oak Grove High School will play a 10-game regular season football schedule in the coming season.

Homecoming for the District 2-A Tigers will be Oct. 20th against Holly Ridge.

Coach David A Lee Jr., will be in his sophomore season with the Bengals.

All regular season games, at home and away, will begin at 7:30 p.m. with the Bastrop Jamboree, Sept. 1, opening the schedule.

The slate is evenly split with five games at home and five on the road. The Tigers open at home for three consecutive weeks and then hit the road for the next three weeks.

A traditional rival with league opponent, Lake Providence, closes the season on Nov. 10th.

Hogan May Be Giant-Killer In U. S. Open

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP) — The 67th United States Open Golf championship will be played on the rolling green acres of Baltusrol Thursday through Sunday and, for the first time in a decade, Ben Hogan may be a real threat.

While Billy Casper was tossing an open house, while Jack Nicklaus was writing a magazine article, while Arnold Palmer and Gary Player were attending a New York awards dinner, Hogan was hiding out.

The 54-year-old marvel of another golfing age has been in seclusion for two weeks, working with quiet, steady concentration on his golf game — the game that won him four Opens.

"I expect to win every tournament I enter," said Hogan — always a sentimental favorite in his now infrequent appearances on the pro tour.

This time, however, he may be more than a sentimental choice. He has been playing more, and better, than he has in years. He hasn't won a tournament since the 1959 Colonial Nationa, but a refound putting touch has put him third in two major tournaments this season and among the top 10 at the Masters.

Most of the attention however, will be focused on the new giants of the game, Palmer, Player, Nicklaus and Casper, all of whom have been working on the 7,022 yard, par 70 Baltusrol course.

Casper, who recently opened a new home in New Jersey and threw a party to celebrate it, is the defending champion but Palmer —the man he beat in 1966 — may be the favorite.

The course, however, may work against him.

Johnny Farrell, a former Open champion who has been the pro at Baltusrol for about 25 years, said the massive, slick greens require a deft, cautious putter.

"A bold putter will kill himself," Farrell said.

And boldness, of course, is the key to Palmer's game.

"Strange things happen in the Open," Nicklaus commented, "but in any tournament you have to figure there are three or four players — you know them as well as I do — who you have to figure as the men to beat."

Palmer heads the list. The others, presumably, would be Player, Casper and perhaps Julius Boros and Gay Brewer.

Palmer, a golfing millionaire from Ligonier, Pa., has won only one Open in 1960, but has finished the regulation 72 holes in a tie for the top three other times — losing them all.

He lost to Nicklaus in 1962, lost in a three-way playoff the following year when Boros won his second title and, of course, to Casper last year in Palmer's fantastic collapse at the Olympic Club in San Francisco.

He had a seven stroke lead with nine holes to play, then blew it and Casper came on to tie him. In the 18-hole playoff, Palmer again took a lead, and again Casper came on, eventually beating him 73-69.

"It's not something you forget overnight," Palmer admitted. But he's put it from his mind well enough to put together one of his better seasons. He currently leads the PGA money winners with almost $100,000 for the year and appears at the top of his game.

Player, the little South African who won in 1965 and heads a seven-man foreign contingent, and Capser haven't played particularly well this season — at least by their previous standards — but both noted that "this is one you get up for."

Nicklaus, who toured the course a couple of weeks ago to write a magazine article, has been in a slump all year. He hasn't won an official tournament and missed the cut at the Masters.

The 27-year-old Ohio strongboy, however, is losse and confident.

"My game is coming around okay," he said. "I think I've got it licked."

Masters champ Gay Brewer, the 47-year-old Boros and young Frank Beard also will get plenty of attention. Boros had a remarkable spring tour while Beard has played some of the best golf on the tour in the last couple of months.

The field of 150 — 135 pros and 15 amateurs — will be cut to the low 60 and ties after Friday's second round. If a playoff is necessary — and four of the last five Opens have ended in ties — it will be over 18 holes Monday.

Stanford Rates As Favorite In College Baseball World Series

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Top-ranked Stanford has all it takes to live up to its favorite's roll in the NCAA's 21st college Baseball World Series. But at least five other clubs including Houston, Stanford's first-round foe Monday, have championship talent.

The field includes the nation's top six teams in the final poll of college coaches, plus Oklahoma State, No. 12 and Boston College, No. 19.

Stanford has probably its finest team in Dutch Fehring's 12-year term as head coach. The Indians finished with a 33-4 won-lost record and were a narrow choice for No. 1 over Auburn, 30-8.

Defending champion Ohio State, winner of 12 of its last 14 games for a 25-18 record, finished No. 3, but the Buckeyes will be hurt by the loss of Bo Rein, their shortstop and top hitter, through ineligibility.

Arizona State, 48-11, was ranked fourth; Rider of New Jersey, 30-6, fifth; and Houston, 18-19, sixth.

Stanford will have its work cut out at the outset of the six-day double-elimination meet, because the top bracket includes three of the top four clubs plus Houston. The Stanford-Houston winner meets the Auburn-Ohio State winner in the second round. Boston college meets Rider and Oklahoma State faces Arizona State in the first round night games Monday.

Stanford has five pitchers who have worked between 45 and 80 innings. They are headed by Sandy Vance, 10-0 and 1.34 in earned run average with his smoking fast ball; and gangling Rod Potcete, 1.24 with his herky-jerky windup. First baseman Mark Marquess, a .402 hitter, leads the attack.

The top Houston hitter is Tom Paciorek with a .453 average. It's worth noting that three of Houston's top six hitters are left-handers, while Stanford's top five pitchers are all right-handed.

The ERA average of 2.90 of Houston's pitching staff isn't close to Stanford's 1.85 but Houston coach Lovette Hill says "our staff is one of the finest in the country because I can get top effort from any one of six boys."

Auburn, led by Rick Contryman's .375 hitting and Q.V Lowe's 13-1 pitching, will be hurt by the loss of its No. 3 and No. 4 pitchers, Gene Collins and Tommy Smith, through ineligibility. Ohio State has the pitching staff and over-all strength to survive Rein's loss.

Oklahoma State pitching, according to coach Chet Bryan, is as good as any around. The top man, both starting and in relief, is Larry Burchart, a 6-foot-3, 210-pounder with a blazing fast ball. But Bryan has five good ones.

Arizona State has four regulars hitting over .300 and a strong staff headed by Gary Gentry, 15-1 and 1.19.

Boston College, 13-5, a surprise winner in its district playoff, is a strong hitting club but lacks pitching depth behind Bill O'Brien.

Rider, with an outstanding 1.49 staff ERA and strong hitting, could be the dark horse of the tournament.

Boys' Club Aided By Pro Athletes

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Henry Armstrong wants to help youngsters because of everything he missed when he was young. Joe Cunningham wants to help because of everything he didn't miss as a boy.

"I grew up in a big family and things were pretty tough," said Armstrong, the only man ever to hold the featherweight, welterweight and lightweight boxing crowns at the same time.

"I used to hear about Al Capone all the time when I was a kid in St. Louis and I wanted to get money like him. I guess I could have gone bad, but I was lucky. I had the talent to be a boxer. But there are kids in St. Louis who won't get that chance," Armstrong added.

Cunningham, who played baseball for the St. Louis Cardinals, Chicago White Sox and the Washington Senators, said he had a tremendous childhood.

"I knew what it was like having the love of two fine parents and never worrying about a broken home," Cunningham said. "I thought we could help the ones who never had this."

Armstrong and Cunningham work for the Herbert Hoover Boys' Club in St. Louis. Armstrong is assistant executive director and Cunningham is director of physical education.

The Boys' Club is being built on the site of old Busch Stadium and dedication ceremonies are scheduled June 18. The president of the baseball Cardinals, August A. Busch Jr., donated the land to the club.

"I could have stayed in baseball. I had an offer to manage in the Baltimore organization. Or I could have gone with Bing Devine, general manager and president, of the New York Mets," said Cunningham, a vice president of the St. Louis chapter of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

"But I wanted to do something worthwhile. When I played ball I saw homes and families break up and boys wander away. You could tell they needed something.

"When I was released by the Senator last year, I came back to St. Louis and I heard about the donation of the land for the club. A friend of mine, Walter Creely of Goldman Sachs (investment brokers) contacted the director of the Western Division of the Boys' Club of America, Frank Wade, about the possibility of me working for the club."

Cunningham, 35, spent a month at New York University taking a course in administration, then had on-the-job training in 16 boys' clubs around the country.

U. S. Looks For Russian Cage Win

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP)—The United States team will be rooting for the Soviet Union to beat Yugoslavia Sunday night in the first game of the closing doubleheader in the world amateur basketball championships.

The reason is simple. If the Soviets win, the U.S. can take the title by beating Brazil in the second game.

If Yugoslavia defeats the Soviets, however, they will win the title for the second straight year regardless of what the Americans do against Brazil. All four of the leaders were idle Saturday.

Going into the final games of the round-robin the U.S., Yugoslavia and the Soviets are tied for the lead. Each has four victories and one defeat.

The U.S. administered Russia its only defeat, 59-58. Yugoslavia then handed the U.S. its lone setback 73-72. Uruguay's 58-57 major upset over Yugoslavia Friday night gave the defending champs their only defeat.

Under the tournament rules, if two teams are tied for the lead after the round-robin, the championship goes to the winner of the game between the two.

Thus if Russia beats Yugoslavia and the U.S. downs Brazil, they will finish at 5-1, but the Americans will take the title because of their victory over Russia. Conversely, if Yugoslavia and the U.S. win they will tie, but the Americans will lose out because of their loss to the Yugoslavs.

Of course, Brazil could knock the Americans out of everything by winning. The title then would go to the winner of the Yugoslavia-Russia game.

Al Tucker of Oklahoma Baptist, led the U.S. to its latest victory, a 91-61 romp over Poland Friday night. Tucker scored 18 points. Yugoslavia lost to underdog Uruguay on Gomez's layup in the last two seconds.

'Wild' Horses And Park Elk

With Paul Martin

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Paul Martin is on vacation. Guest writer today is Willard T. Johns, editor of Conservation News, an educational service of the National Wildlife Federation.)

By WILL JONES
(Editor Conservation News)

Recent nationwide publicity on two of the West's most famous animals has fanned a long smouldering feud into new flames. As usual in such melodramas, especially in Western states, the Federal government is cast in the role of villain. The setting this time, by coincidence, is Montana and the "underdogs" were wild horses and Wapati.

In both cases, it all started years ago, almost at the same time. During 1934 - 35 a population control program was started on elk in Yellowstone National Park. In 1936 a rancher named Tillett applied to and received from the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Department of Interior, a permit to graze cattle and about 20 head of horses on public domain near the Montana - Wyoming border. Like thousands of other ranchers throughout the West, the Tilletts needed additional pasture, especially in summer, for their livestock.

First, let's take a look at the Tillett horses which today number an estimated 150 head and are running wild in the Pryor Mountain area. To identify and show private ownership, many of these horses were branded. Under Montana law, in fact, there are no real "wild" horses since every steed, pony or mustang is considered to be owned by someone, somewhere. And so, even though this band of horses roams the range year round, from a legal point of view they can only be considered as "feral" — a once domesticated animal which has escaped from man's control to live in an untamed state of nature, or the offspring of such an animal.

Down through the years, this band of feral horses increased far beyond the number authorized in Tillett's grazing permit. Starting about seven years ago, the Bureau of Land Management, has been making serious efforts to have the legal owner reduce the herd. How this can be accomplished is entirely up to the permit holder. Normally, ranchers buy or lease other pasture or, in the case of cattle and sheep, they roundup and market the annual surplus. This annual roundup of cattle and sheep, of course, has long been the stuff from which has emerged much of the legend and folklore of the Old West.

Two years ago Bureau officials finally got tired of asking Tillett to comply with terms of his grazing allotment and his annual permit was not renewed. Until then, the permit was renewed every year despite obvious violation. In fact, BLM officials never reduced or threatened to reduce the authorization of 20 head of horses. In recent years, they offered Tillett the alternative of reducing the number of cattle he also grazes on this tract of public land. He did not choose to follow such an alternative. He evidently based his argument on the fact that the horses in question are now "wild," despite his assuming protective ownership of them. And he is quoted in an article currently appearing in a nationally circulated man's magazine as saying, "I'm going to save those horses no matter what."

Many people, reading of Tillett's fight to save his "wild" horses have jumped to the conclusion that the Bureau of Land Management is opposed to horses grazing on public land. This simply is not true. The Bureau permits thousands of ranchers to graze horses on their allotments throughout the public domain. And the Bureau has even gone to the extent of establishing a 435,000 acre refuge in southern Nevada to protect and preserve wild horses.

The Bureau is responsible for the administration of approximately 460 million acres of public lands under the principles of multiple use. This responsibility has been given this Federal agency by laws enacted by Congress. As part of that trust, the Bureau must see to it that grazing lands are not over-used.

The Yellowstone Elk

Paralling Montana's wild horse story, and getting as much publicity if not more, was a winter of discontent for National Park Service officials trying to reduce the northern Yellowstone elk herd. Yellowstone provides adequate summer range for elk but in winter deep snows force these big game animals down to lower elevations. In earlier times the Northern Yellowstone elk herd (biologists recognize five distinct herds of elk in the area, including the huge and world - famous herd that moves south into Wyoming and congregates at Jackson Hole each winter) moved onto winter ranges outside the Park in Montana, extending as much as 60 miles or more along the wide Yellowstone River Valley to the north. Development of these lowlands for agriculture and livestock production, along with heavy hunting, forced the elk to winter on previously marginal ranges, mostly inside Park boundaries.

Hunting was prohibited in Yellowstone (as it is today both there and in all other national parks) in 1883, eleven years after it became a park, and by 1891 there were at least 25,000 elk wintering in or near Yellowstone. That number was far in excess of carrying capacity, so Nature took care of reducing the herd. She killed, through winter starvation, 5,000 elk in 1892 and elk populations, like deer, can bounce back quickly. By 1914, the northern Yellowstone herd totalled some 35,000 elk. Nature waited five years this time and although some winter mortality occurred each year, the big kill occurred in the hard winter of 1919 - 20 when 14,000 elk died of starvation.

In those early years Park officials tried to keep the herd in balance with available winter food supply by live - trapping some of the elk. Between 1911 and 1934, 3,590 elk were trapped in the park and transplanted throughout Montana and many other states. A few were even shipped as far east as Pennsylvania to replace the Commonwealth's native elk which had been exterminated. Descendants of those Yellowstone elk can still be found in the wild in the Keystone State and, appropriately enough, in Elk County.

Live trapping, however, wasn't accomplishing the necessary herd reduction by itself. And in addition to almost annual winter starvatin of elk, the over - grazing of the range was beginning to show in many other ways. Quaking aspen and willow were disappearing and with these favorite foods vanishing, the beaver was going out of the Yellowstone picture as well. Deer couldn't withstand the competition for food and they either died or moved out. The entire ecology of Yellowstone (for which the park was established in the first place) was being seriously upset. The basic Act of Congress creating Yellowstone National Park stipulates that ALL features within the area shall be preserved in their natural condition. Thus the National Park Service has the responsibility of maintaining ALL species of animals in their environment in as near the original or primitive character as possible.

Starting in the winter of 1934-35 a more extensive elk population control program was started. It consisted of three basic elements: (1) hunter harvest outside the park; (2) additional efforts in live - trapping and transfer; and (3) direct reduction of elk numbers within the Park by Park Rangers. Then, as now, it was the shooting of elk by the Park Rangers that caused the most controversy. During this past winter the same basic program was placed into effect again. Comparatively mild and open winters in recent years, coupled with insufficient herd reduction, had allowed the northern Yellowstone herd to build up to some 8,000 head. The range could only feed 5,000. The inevitable was about to take place — 3,000 animals were probably going to be dead by spring and in the natural process, the surviving elk would have again seriously damaged the range through over - graze.

Throughout the winter Park personnel were hard at work in live - trapping operations. By March 1 more than 1,000 animals had been trapped, crated and shipped elsewhere.

In addition, hunters had harvested slightly more than 1,100 elk outside the park. But it was apparent the necessary herd reduction could not be accomplished entirely by live - trapping and public hunting, even though the Montana department authorized another special three - day open season for the weekend of March 3 - 5. And so Park Rangers were ordered to shoot some of the elk. As in the past, this announcement set off a wave of rumors, arguments, and public debates. Many people unfamiliar with the Yellowstone elk problem and ignorant or unwilling to accept Nature's laws, could not or would not accept any human reduction of the herd. Others got the impression that the elk were to be slaughtered.

The facts, however, shows that Park Rangers killed no more than 300 elk within the park boundaries and then only as a last resort to achieve the necessary balance between the herd and abailable food supplies. They did so in a humane manner. They did not shoot from helicopters and they shot selectively, dropping only those animals that biologically were best weeded out of the herd.

(Editor's Note: The National Audubon Society is on record as prefering that any necessary killing be done expertly by trained rangers who remove the least fit rather than taking the largest and healthiest as hunters prefer to do.)

With elk, as with horses, the lesson is clear. When the numbers of animals exceeds the amount of food and cover on the winter range, something has to give. First it is the range itself; then it is the animals. The tragedy is that so many people are unwilling or unable to understand nature's laws and to accept the inevitable punishment — animal death by starvation and plant destruction by over - grazing. The end result is a biological wasteland.

North Central Sets Three Tilts

RUSTON (Special) — Three games are on tap for the North Central League today with Ruston visiting Arcadia in the main attraction. Downsville is at W. S. Young, and Hodge travels to Simsboro as the second round of the season begins.

The W. S. Young Mets are currently riding a perfect 4-0 record for the league lead.

Arcadia is in second place with a 3-1 showing, Ruston and Simsboro in third with 3-2 marks, Downsville fifth at 1-4, and Hodge is last while looking for their first win after five starts.

The Simsboro diamondmen played a makeup game Thursday night at Ruston against Downsville .The "Boro" took the game 7-3 to move into a third place tie with the Ruston Ramblers. Bob Price went all the way to pick up the win in his first start this year. Larry Antley took the loss for Downsville.

Arcadia will be looking for its fifth straight win over the Ramblers, dating back to last season. The Ramblers will be out to avenge an earlier 3-2 setback at the hands of the Aces on opening day.

Bill Duncan is next in the pitching department with a 1-0 record. He has thrown ten innings of relief work, winning one, saving one, allowing

'Wild' Horses And Park Elk

With Paul Martin

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Paul Martin is on vacation. Guest writer today is Willard T. Johns, editor of Conservation News, an educational service of the National Wildlife Federation.)

By WILL JONES
(Editor Conservation News)

Recent nationwide publicity on two of the West's most famous animals has fanned a long smouldering feud into new flames. As usual in such melodramas, especially in Western states, the Federal government is cast in the role of villain. The setting this time, by coincidence, is Montana and the "underdogs" were wild horses and Wapati.

In both cases, it all started years ago, almost at the same time. During 1934 - 35 a population control program was started on elk in Yellowstone National Park. In 1936 a rancher named Tillett applied to and received from the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Department of Interior, a permit to graze cattle and about 20 head of horses on public domain near the Montana - Wyoming border. Like thousands of other ranchers throughout the West, the Tilletts needed additional pasture, especially in summer, for their livestock.

First, let's take a look at the Tillett horses which today number an estimated 150 head and are running wild in the Pryor Mountain area. To identify and show private ownership, many of these horses were branded. Under Montana law, in fact, there are no real "wild" horses since every steed, pony or mustang is considered to be owned by someone, somewhere. And so, even though this band of horses roams the range year round, from a legal point of view they can only be considered as "feral" — a once domesticated animal which has escaped from man's control to live in an untamed state of nature, or the offspring of such an animal.

Down through the years, this band of feral horses increased far beyond the number authorized in Tillett's grazing permit. Starting about seven years ago, the Bureau of Land Management, has been making serious efforts to have the legal owner reduce the herd. How this can be accomplished is entirely up to the permit holder. Normally, ranchers buy or lease other pasture or, in the case of cattle and sheep, they roundup and market the annual surplus. This annual roundup of cattle and sheep, of course, has long been the stuff from which has emerged much of the legend and folklore of the Old West.

Two years ago Bureau officials finally got tired of asking Tillett to comply with terms of his grazing allotment and his annual permit was not renewed. Until then, the permit was renewed every year despite obvious violation. In fact, BLM officials never reduced or threatened to reduce the authorization of 20 head of horses. In recent years, they offered Tillett the alternative of reducing the number of cattle he also grazes on this tract of public land. He did not choose to follow such an alternative. He evidently based his argument on the fact that the horses in question are now "wild," despite his assuming protective ownership of them. And he is quoted in an article currently appearing in a nationally circulated man's magazine as saying, "I'm going to save those horses no matter what."

Many people, reading of Tillett's fight to save his "wild" horses have jumped to the conclusion that the Bureau of Land Management is opposed to horses grazing on public land. This simply is not true. The Bureau permits thousands of ranchers to graze horses on their allotments throughout the public domain. And the Bureau has even gone to the extent of establishing a 435,000 acre refuge in southern Nevada to protect and preserve wild horses.

The Bureau is responsible for the administration of approximately 460 million acres of public lands under the principles of multiple use. This responsibility has been given this Federal agency by laws enacted by Congress. As part of that trust, the Bureau must see to it that grazing lands are not over-used.

Coaches, Coaches Ev erywhere, But Only Three Were Signed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They ran, kicked, caught passes and dripped with sweat under the critical eyes of Coach Tom Fears and his New Orleans Saints coaching staff Saturday and at day's end the National Football League had signed three hopefuls to pro contracts.

The Saints wound up their two-day public tryout camp and pronounced it a success. An even 300 turned up with dreams of becoming a teammate of Paul Hornung' Gary Cuozzo and other Saints.

"I didn't think we'd really find anybody, except possibly a kicking prospect," said Don Smith, the Saints publicity director.

In addition to the three signees, Fears invited 11 other hopefuls to return Monday for more workouts. The team brings in all of its quarterbacks, receivers and defensive backs — rookies and veterans—for three days of skill sessions and drills on Monday.

"We'll take a look at these 11 up against veterans," said Fears.

Some 300 spectators were out to watch Saturday's proceedings in the tryout camp. They got a number of good laughs from some of the hopefuls who obviously were in the mind-willing-but-flesh-weak class.

"This is a lot funnier than some of our games may be," quipped Larry Karl, general manager of the club. Karl was with Dallas during its initial NFL season and recalls the Cowboys didn't win a game.

A handsome youngster wearing shorts was rifling passes to would-be receivers with deadly accuracy. A quarterback prospect?

No. He turned out to be Larry Karl Jr., son of the general manager. The younger Karl was slated to be the starting quarterback this fall at Woodrow Wilson High in Dallas as a junior but with his dad's shift from the Cowboys to the Saints he will now play at East Jefferson High in suburban Metairie.

"I cut off his allowance this week so he wouldn't be considered a pro while throwing the ball," said the elder Karl in a moch-serious vein.

Given contracts were offensive back Benny Blundell, punter Thomas McNeill and receiver Michael Spratt.

Blundell, 23, 5-foot-10 and 185, did not attend college. He lives in Winnsboro, Tex. "The coaching staff liked Blundell's speed," said Karl. "He was timed in 4.5 and 4.4 for 40 yards."

Spratt, 5-10 and 170, formerly played at Houston and has run the 100 in 9.5. He is 23 and lives in Mission, Tex. McNeill, 23, of Houston, last attended Stephen F. Austin College. He is 6-1 and weighs 195.

Directors Meet

A special meeting of the Little League Board of Directors will be held Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Louisiana Training Institute.

Jack Hesketh, director of the Monroe Recreation Department, urged all members to be present for the dinner meeting.

Tourney Entries Start Brush Up

Three teams start brushing up today for the Second Annual Monroe Jaycees Invitational Fast Pitch Softball tournament which will be held this week.

Nassif Motors of Alexandria will play both Burger Chef and Larry's Gulf of Monroe in a doubleheader at Selman field.

Larry's, with L. V. Norris on the mound, will play the first game beginning at 1:30 p.m. Burger Chef, with Red Campbell hurling, will play against Nassif in the second game immediately following.

Anglo Dana and Jerry Lasphere will pitch for Nassif.

Coaches, Coaches Everywhere, But Only Three Were Signed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They ran, kicked, caught passes and dripped with sweat under the critical eyes of Coach Tom Fears and his New Orleans Saints coaching staff Saturday and at day's end the National Football League had signed three hopefuls to pro contracts.

The Saints wound up their two-day public tryout camp and pronounced it a success. An even 300 turned up with dreams of becoming a teammate of Paul Hornung' Gary Cuozzo and other Saints.

"I didn't think we'd really find anybody, except possibly a kicking prospect," said Don Smith, the Saints publicity director.

In addition to the three signnees, Fears invited 11 other hopefuls to return Monday for more workouts. The team brings in all of its quarterbacks, receivers and defensive backs — rookies and veterans—for three days of skill sessions and drills on Monday.

"We'll take a look at these 11 up against veterans," said Fears.

Some 300 spectators were out to watch Saturday's proceedings in the tryout camp. They got a number of good laughs from some of the hopefuls who obviously were in the mind-willing-but-flesh-weak class.

"This is a lot funnier than some of our games may be," quipped Larry Karl, general manager of the club. Karl was with Dallas during its initial NFL season and recalls the Cowboys didn't win a game.

A handsome youngster wearing shorts was rifling passes to would-be receivers with deadly accuracy. A quarterback prospect?

No. He turned out to be Larry Karl Jr., son of the general manager. The younger Karl was slated to be the starting quarterback this fall at Woodrow Wilson High in Dallas as a junior but with his dad's shift from the Cowboys to the Saints he will now play at East Jefferson High in suburban Metairie.

"I cut off his allowance this week so he wouldn't be considered a pro while throwing the ball," said the elder Karl in a moch-serious vein.

Given contracts were offensive back Benny Blundell, punter Thomas McNeill and receiver Michael Spratt.

Blundell, 23, 5-foot-10 and 185, did not attend college. He lives in Winnsboro, Tex. "The coaching staff liked Blundell's speed," said Karl. "He was timed in 4.5 and 4.4 for 40 yards."

Spratt, 5-10 and 170, formerly played at Houston and has run the 100 in 9.5. He is 23 and lives in Mission, Tex. McNeill, 23, of Houston, last attended Stephen F. Austin College. He is 6-1 and weighs 195.

Directors Meet

A special meeting of the Little League Board of Directors will be held Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Louisiana Training Institute.

Jack Hesketh, director of the Monroe Recreation Department, urged all members to be present for the dinner meeting.

Tourney Entries Start Brush Up

Three teams start brushing up today for the Second Annual Monroe Jaycees Invitational Fast Pitch Softball tournament which will be held this week.

Nassif Motors of Alexandria will play both Burger Chef and Larry's Gulf of Monroe in a doubleheader at Selman field.

Larry's, with L. V. Norris on the mound, will play the first game beginning at 1:30 p.m. Burger Chef, with Red Campbell hurling, will play against Nassif in the second game immediately following.

Anglo Dana and Jerry Lasphere will pitch for Nassif.

Spurrier Will Quarterback East Stars

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Steve Spurrier, Florida's clutch quarterback who won the 1966 Heisman Trophy, will quarterback the East in the Coaches All-America football game July 8.

Backing up the slock-passing Floridian will be Purdue's Bob Griese, the man Spurrier beat out for the coveted trophy symbolic of the nation's top college football player.

The two quarterbacks will have plenty of running support from nimble Floyd Little of Syracuse and explosive Nick Eddy of Notre Dame, who also are talented pass catchers.

Main target, however, of the East's passes will be Gene Washington, sure-handed Michigan State receiver.

The 30-man East squad was announced Saturday. The West team, which includes such standouts as halfbacks Mel Farr of UCLA anl Harry Wilson of Nebraska and quarterbacks Jon Brittenum of Arkansas and Bob Burris of Houston, was announced a week ago.

The East is loaded with defensive standouts, including linebackers Jim Lynch of Notre Dame and Paul Naumoff of Tennessee, and defensive backs Tom Beier of Miami and Lynn Hughes of Georgia.

Alabama's Cecil Dowdy, a tackle, and center Bob Hyland, a 260 - pound Boston College blocking ace, head up the offensive line.

The East, trounced 24-7 last year in the first staging of the all-star game in Atlanta, is expected to rely heavily on the passing of Spurrier and Grise.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—The East squad that will play the West in the Coaches All-America football game July 8:

Ends — Frank Richter, Georgia; Tom Schwartz, Army; Gene Washington, Michigan Swate; Dave Dunaway, Duke, and John Schroer, Georgia Tech.

Tackles—Dickie Phillips, Georgia; Mike Current, Ohio State; Don Bruce, Virginia Tech; Robert Rowe, Western Michigan, and Gary Bugenhagen, Syracuse.

Guards — Paul Naumoff, Tennessee; Townsend Clarke, Army; Jim Lynch, Notre Dame; Cecil Dowdy, Alabama, and Del Williams, Florida State.

Center—Bob Hyland, Boston College.

Halfbacks — Tom Francisco, Virginia Tech; Craig Baynham, Georgia Tech; Floyd Little, Syracuse; Tom Beier, Miami; J. C. Charles, Purdue; Lynn Hughes, Georgia; P. C. Clark, Northwestern, and Gary Rowe, North Carolina State.

Fullback—Nick Eddy, Notre Dame.

Basketball Not Phased By Lack Of Winter Days

NEW YORK (AP) — Basketball in summer? Yes.

The world basketball championships end tonight in South America in Uruguay. The Pan-American championships are scheduled for Winnipeg in Canada in August and the National Basketball Association and the new pro loop, the American Basketball Association, have been busy with off court details. ofrecruits lined upby Oldham college basketball, too. Especially recruiting of high school stars. In fact, there seems to be a new dynasty in the making at Western Kentucky to take over when the UCLA-Lew Alcindor era ends with the 1969 season.

Alcindor was the 7-foot-1 super-sophomore last season who led UCLA to the national championship unbeaten through a 30-game schedule and who is expected to do it again in 1968 and 1969 as a junior and senior.

What has Western Kentucky been doing? Johnny Oldham, head coach of the Ohio Valley Conference champions, has been very successful in getting Kentucky high schools stars to sign conference grants-in-aid and letters of intent.

Bobby Jones, 5-11 backcourt ace for Frankfort High, is the latest to join the impressive list of recruits lined up by Oldham and his assistants. Altogether eight scholastic stars from throughout the state have signed with the Hilltoppers.

Perhaps the most outstanding is Jim McDaniels, a 205-pound, seven-footer who starred at Allen County High School. He is regarded as excellent in every phase of the game and is reported a phenomenal outside shooter for a big man.

Another tall man, Clarence Glover, 6-8, from Caverna High, is rated a top defensive player in the pivot.

Monroe Netters Beaten Out

Bill Koch of Little Rock, Ark., is heading for a lot of hardware in the Crossett Jaycee Junior Open tennis tournament as he knocked off Glenn Miller of Leland, Miss., 6-4, 6-1 in the 18-and-under division and made the finals in 16-and-under by downing Randy Cooper, Little Rock, 5-3, 6-3.

Gary Liles of Jonesboro advanced to the semis in the 18 division by topping Wallace Storey, 6-3, 6-0, as did Willie Stroope of Magnolia by besting Padg Bolton of Monroe, 6-1, 6-2 and Todd Landes, Magnolia, by bopping Tommy James of North Little Rock, 10-8, 7-5.

Liles and Bill Hudson, Little Rock, advanced to the finals in 18 doubles by passing Storey-Stroope, 6-3, 6-4 in third round play.

Koch and Randy Cooper, Little Rock, and Bill Clark-Alex Gallespy of Little Rock will square off in the 16 doubles today.

Monroe netters Hughes Abell and Jeff Liner were downed in the second round of 18 doubles by Miller and Joe John Sandifer, 6-3, 6-2.

Brenda Scisson of Crossett and Mary Ely of Shaw seemed to control action in the girls events as they swept their semi-final matches and teamed up to make their way into the doubles final.

Reign Of Terror In Mexican Area

HERMOSILLO, Mexico, (AP) Citizens are hijacked off streets and held incommunicado. Students flee to the United States to escape arrest. Lawyers and editors go to jail for criticizing the government.

This isn't happening in some troubled Latin-American dictatorship. It's right in this busy, prosperous corner of northwest Mexico, a model of Latin-American political and economic stability for 37 years.

Political disturbances here the last three months and in other parts of the republic the past year point up large cracks in the facade of Mexican peace and progress. Pessimists see grave trouble ahead. The official attitude here is of indifference and irritation, as with a village squabble. Still, federal and state officials tried to hush up the disturbances. The state governor asked U.S. diplomats if they could help curb what was termed unfavorable newspaper reports in Arizona.

In responsible quarters, however, the unrest is regarded as symptomatic of ills in the country's social and political structures, outgrown by an exploding population far more mature politically than when the systems were created at the end of Mexico's turbulent 1920s.

Hermosillo, capital of the state of Sonora, and the larger communities in the area wear an air of enforced tranquility—federal troops are present. The problem that led to violence is far from settled. There are fears disorders will erupt again around election time July 2, or after the new governor takes over in September.

The troops were called in last month and quickly dislodged striking students from the university and other centers of youthful resistance throughout the state. The students didn't return to their classrooms, and the university was forced to suspend classes until fall.

The arrival of federal forces signaled the start of arrests of citizens and students.

Many students went into hiding and at least 50, some accompanied by relatives and friends, fled to neighboring Arizona on "vacations" to escape arrest.

At least 75 persons are believed still in jail, among them four newsmen. Seven persons picked up by federal agents were flown bound and blindfolded to Mexico City for questioning, kept incommunicado 12 days and finally were released here without charges. Four of these, one a prominent physician- were rearrested immediately without explanation by state officials.

The stage for the northwest Mexico disturbances isn't just any backwoods area. The state of Sonora is one of the republic's richest. It is the top producer in wheat, cotton, among the leaders in cattle, mining. Literacy is 77 per cent, well above the national average.

Veteran politicians regard the political storm as significant because it marks, they say, the first serious challenge — from within its own ranks — to the dictates of the official Institutional Revolutionary Party — PRI. Neither the traditional opposition factions nor leftist extremists were involved.

The explosion was mainly over the gubernatorial race. The seeds for dissent, however, were sown in the previous campaign, in 1961, when, as in the present case, the official party chieftians in Mexico City rejected the apparently popularly acclaimed candidates.

Rhodesia Economic Sanctions Failure

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Most U.N. diplomats are ready to write off as a failure the economic sanctions voted six months ago in an effort to topple the white minority government in Rhodesia.

"The sanctions are having no effect whatsoever on the Rhodesian situation," says Ambassador Joseph Ben Mwemba of Zambia, who reflects the views of many African countries.

"Zambia is the one that has no oil."

The British cling to the hope that economic pressure will force the downfall of the Ian Smith regime and that all that is needed is more time. They stand virtually alone, however.

Reports from inside Rhodesia indicate that the government is feeling the pinch, but there is no sign of any major opposition to the Smith regime.

Effectiveness of the sanctions has been undermined by cheating and by open defiance on the part of some key countries.

Some of Rhodesia's former trading partners, such as Zambia, are feeling the pressure as much or more.

The United Nations has done nothing to carry out its obligation under the charter to aid countries which suffer undue economic hardship by joining in sanctions.

The sanctions, imposed by the council last Dec. 16, were the first mandatory penalties ever ordered by the United Nations. Similar measures were voted against Italy 32 years ago by the League of Nations. Completely ineffective, they were canceled six months later after Italy announced the annexation of Ethiopia.

The Security Council faces growing demands for a reappraisal of the sanctions policy and there is little doubt it will have to meet soon to consider possible enforcement measures.

It will be asked either to take action against the governments not complying with the sanctions resolution or to order the use of military force to overthrow the Smith regime. It seems unlikely that either course could win approval.

As in the case of the league sanctions, the ineffectiveness of the U.N. penalties can be attributed mainly to the refusal of important trading countries to comply.

One of Rhodesia's neighbors, South Africa, has ignored U.N. communications regarding compliance with the sanctions resolution and has continued openly to supply oil and other essentials to Rhodesia.

Other supplies are flowing into Rhodesia from Portuguese Mozambique.

A U.N. report issued in mid-May quoted unconfirmed South African reports as saying Rhodesia had imported enough oil from Mazambique to stockpile against two years of sanctions.

Rationing has cut gasoline consumption by about one-third since the oil embargo began, but this has had no serious effect on transportation. Cuts on imports of some luxury items have been as high as 75 per cent. Imports hardest hit include clothing, tableware, perfume, glassware, chocolate and other foodstuffs.

But, as one African diplomat said recently, these shortages are not hurting the Rhodesian economy enough to bring about the desired results.

"If one or two fellows are short of matches or a television set, that is not important," he added.

One of Rhodesia's biggest problems is getting rid of its 200 million pounds of tobacco produced in 1966-67. Because of the embargo, the Smith government has resorted to secret sales and has set up elaborate security arrangements to protect the identity of buyers. The secret sales take the place of public auctions previously used.

A U.N. report said that the Union Carbide Co., an American concern, has established a new company in South Africa to take over its interests in southern Africa including three Rhodesian chrome mines. The report said the move was intended to avoid embarrassment for the parent company over efforts of the Rhodesian mines to evade sanctions on chrome exports.

Reporter Gives Report On Scouting Of North Viet Force

EDITORS NOTE: UPI reporter Thomas Corpora recently accompanied a long range reconnaissance patrol on a mission into positions of the North Vietnamese army along the Cambodian border in the Central Highlands of South Vietnam. Here is his report.

By THOMAS CORPORA

LANDING ZONE REGULARS, Vietnam (UPI)—Monsoon rains are for cursing. I cursed one for two days. Now every breath begged for a deluge.

We were fewer than half a dozen Americans, trapped by North Vietnamese soldiers 2,500 meters from the Cambodian border. The thick brush jungle in which we lay protected us from their eyes. But the jungle also was our jail.

If we tried to crawl away, the deadfall on the jungle floor would sound like popcorn gone mad. Our only hope was the monsoon. In the jungle, its driving rains would drown the sounds of even the clumsiest.

It was high noon and the hot tropic sun steamed us in our sweat as we lay ready to fight our way out if discovered. A North Vietnamese Army (NVA) mortar position was not 15 feet from me. Two groups of between 12 and 15 men had passed to our front and taken up positions that formed a rough semi-circle around us.

There was nothing to do but wait.

JOINED PATROL

Our plight had started 24 hours earlier at the Oasis, the forward base camp of the 4th Infantry Dvision's 2nd brigade, a few miles south of Pleiku City.

The 1st Battalion, 22nd Infantry, operating along the border, had asked for two Long Range Reconnaissance Patrols (LRRPs, pronounced "lurp") to locate NVA infiltration routes from Cambodia.

I was to go with the team led by S-Sgt. Charles J. Britt, a serious, 23-year-old soldier from Ferndale, Md.

We were to leave the battalion position at dusk and move into an AO (area of operations) about 2,500 meters southeast and the same distance from the border. If the patrol was not compromised, we would stay out five days.

We were promised artillery and air support, if we needed it.

We carried 10 dried LRRP rations, two a day, four canteens of water, a poncho and poncho liner, a compass and map, two smoke grenades, fragmentation grenades and 200-plus round sof ammunition.

ON THEIR OWN

I had armed myself with a rifle, but intended to use it only in self-defense and in defense of the men who would defend me if we got into a fight. The "weapon" I had hoped to use was my camera.

Britt and I wore jungle fatigues. The others had on green and Navy blue "tiger" camouflage.

We were guided through the perimeter defenses and then left on our own. Spec. 4 Male Hatchett, a handsome, quiet 22-year-old Negro from Detroit, was the point man.

Britt followed Hatchett and was followed by Spec. 4 Daniel L. Harmon, a 21-year-old Cherokee Indian whose forebears somehow got to Kodiak, Alaska. He was the radio man.

I followed Danny and Sgt. Ronald Lee Speck, 21, of Memphis, Tenn., a draftee like Danny ,was rear security.

He volunteered for this patrol when another man got sick.

About midnight we reached the border of our area of operations and Britt ordered us to halt for the night.

It rained hard and the spot where I lay became a small lake. At 7:30 a.m., after a cup of cold coffee and candy bar from the LRRP rations, we were on our way again.

Britt decided to find a place where we could listen for movement on the trail and not be seen.

About 11:00 I dozed off, woke 10 minutes later in a sweat and then fell off again. At 11:57 I awoke againl Hatchett was wide awake and listening. Danny had picked up his rifle. He was staring straight past me into the bushes behind. Britt was doing the same. I couldn't see Speck.

Then we heard it. People moving, a too heavy step, the clunk of metal and finally voices in high pitched vietnamese.

A shock wave of fear swept from my brain down my spine to every nerve in my body. Panic, a flash and it was gone. Now I was held in sustained fear, constant but controlled. I lawy without moving, hardly breathing, my heart pounding and every pore in my body streaming sweat.

Hong Kong Bank Key For Red Chinese

HONG KONG (AP)—Two Chinese lions, carved of stone and looking more like oversized Pekinese lapdogs tormented into snarls, guard the wide bronze doors through which $750 million worth of hard currency flows into Communist China every year.

This is the Bank of China's Hong Kong branch, 16 stories of yellowing gray concrete dedicated to collecting capitalist nations' cash to help finance Communist China's battle against capitalism, develop her nuclear weapons, lift her industry and feed her 740 million people.

Roughly two-thirds of the money which the Bank of China collects here comes from China's exports to this tiny British colony.

The other third includes millions in remittances from overseas Chinese to relatives in China, and payments funneled through the Hong Kong bank from Asian, African and South American nations.

Why did the bank's management and 300-man staff spearhead May's mob rioting and violent anti-British demonstrations which, if successful, world have wrecked the colony's always precarious economy and gravely cut China's collections?

A number of China experts here blame it on the growing irrationality of Communist Chinese caught in the power struggle between Mao Tse-tung and Liu Shao-chi.

They think the bank's management, although formerly oriented toward Liu's pragmatism, now believes Mao to be the eventual winner and thus accepted direct orders from pro-Maoists in Peking to manage and direct the anti-British violence.

Whatever the reasons, the bank did take the lead. Its building in the heart of Hong Kong's business and financial district became headquarters for planning.

One of its own employes says it furnished office space and staff for a pro-Maoist official who came from Canton to coordinate and monitor the anti-British campaign.

Batteries of loudspeakers, mounted on rooftops and in windows facing all four directions, dinned inflammatory accusations of British "Fascist atrocities," "police brutality" and "racial suppression." A woman's shrill voice repeatedly urged Hong Kong's 94 per cent Chinese police force to turn against and overthrow their British commanders—an exhortation totally ignored.

For three days during the height of anti-British demonstrations in the downtown district, the bank's doors were closed and barricaded. The average collection and transmission to China for three days, according to several Bank of China employes, would be $6 million to $7 million.

One employe, a Communist who gives the impression of being incensed by disturbances that interfere with business, reports the bank sent $750 million in 1966 "and it would have been closer to $800 million this year."

"We should still come close to that," he says, "if there are no more disturbances. What has happened so far should not cause a drop in the year's overall exports from China to Hong Kong and should have no effect on collections here from other areas."

The bank's security keeps most of its employes from even being seen talking to non-Communists. But the disgruntled worker, apparently anxious to let off steam, gives a picture of the bank's operation that squares with what non-Communist bankers here know of it.

All hard-currency transmissions to China are handled by the Bank of China, and much of the local collections also are made by the bank.

Nine other authorized banks in the colony—with three to five branches each—are Communist-owned. Most Communist and pro-Communist businessmen use these banks, both for deposits and for payments to China concerns.

Hong Kong Bank Key For Red Chinese

HONG KONG (AP)—Two Chinese lions, carved of stone and looking more like oversized Pekinese lapdogs tormented into snarls, guard the wide bronze doors through which $750 million worth of hard currency flows into Communist China every year.

This is the Bank of China's Hong Kong branch, 16 stories of yellowing gray concrete dedicated to collecting capitalist nations' cash to help finance Communist China's battle against capitalism, develop her nuclear weapons, lift her industry and feed her 740 million people.

Roughly two-thirds of the money which the Bank of China collects here comes from China's exports to this tiny British colony.

The other third includes millions in remittances from overseas Chinese to relatives in China, and payments funneled through the Hong Kong bank from Asian, African and South American nations.

Reporter Gives Report On Scouting Of North Viet Force

EDITORS NOTE: UPI reporter Thomas Corpora recently accompanied a long range reconnaissance patrol on a mission into positions of the North Vietnamese army along the Cambodian border in the Central Highlands of South Vietnam. Here is his report.

By THOMAS CORPORA

LANDING ZONE REGULARS, Vietnam (UPI)—Monsoon rains are for cursing. I cursed one for two days. Now every breath begged for a deluge.

We were fewer than half a dozen Americans, trapped by North Vietnamese soldiers 2,500 meters from the Cambodian border. The thick brush jungle in which we lay protected us from their eyes. But the jungle also was our jail.

If we tried to crawl away, the deadfall on the jungle floor would sound like popcorn gone mad. Our only hope was the monsoon. In the jungle, its driving rains would drown the sounds of even the clumsiest.

It was high noon and the hot tropic sun steamed us in our sweat as we lay ready to fight our way out if discovered. A North Vietnamese Army (NVA) mortar position was not 15 feet from me. Two groups of between 12 and 15 men had passed to our front and taken up positions that formed a rough semi-circle around us.

There was nothing to do but wait.

JOINED PATROL

Our plight had started 24 hours earlier at the Oasis, the forward base camp of the 4th Infantry Dvision's 2nd brigade, a few miles south of Pleiku City.

The 1st Battalion, 22nd Infantry, operating along the border, had asked for two Long Range Reconnaissance Patrols (LRRPs, pronounced "lurp") to locate NVA infiltration routes from Cambodia.

I was to go with the team led by S-Sgt. Charles J. Britt, a serious, 23-year-old soldier from Ferndale, Md.

We were to leave the battalion position at dusk and move into an AO (area of operations) about 2,500 meters southeast and the same distance from the border. If the patrol was not compromised, we would stay out five days.

We were promised artillery and air support, if we needed it.

We carried 10 dried LRRP rations, two a day, four canteens of water, a poncho and poncho liner, a compass and map, two smoke grenades, fragmentation grenades and 200-plus round sof ammunition.

ON THEIR OWN

I had armed myself with a rifle, but intended to use it only in self-defense and in defense of the men who would defend me if we got into a fight. The "weapon" I had hoped to use was my camera.

Britt and I wore jungle fatigues. The others had on green and Navy blue "tiger" camouflage.

We were guided through the perimeter defenses and then left on our own. Spec. 4 Male Hatchett, a handsome, quiet 22-year-old Negro from Detroit, was the point man.

Britt followed Hatchett and was followed by Spec. 4 Daniel L. Harmon, a 21-year-old Cherokee Indian whose forebears somehow got to Kodiak, Alaska. He was the radio man.

I followed Danny and Sgt. Ronald Lee Speck, 21, of Memphis, Tenn., a draftee like Danny ,was rear security.

He volunteered for this patrol when another man got sick.

About midnight we reached the border of our area of operations and Britt ordered us to halt for the night.

It rained hard and the spot where I lay became a small lake. At 7:30 a.m., after a cup of cold coffee and candy bar from the LRRP rations, we were on our way again.

Britt decided to find a place where we could listen for movement on the trail and not be seen.

About 11:00 I dozed off, woke 10 minutes later in a sweat and then fell off again. At 11:57 I awoke againl Hatchett was wide awake and listening. Danny had picked up his rifle. He was staring straight past me into the bushes behind. Britt was doing the same. I couldn't see Speck.

Then we heard it. People moving, a too heavy step, the clunk of metal and finally voices in high pitched vietnamese.

A shock wave of fear swept from my brain down my spine to every nerve in my body. Panic, a flash and it was gone. Now I was held in sustained fear, constant but controlled. I lawy without moving, hardly breathing, my heart pounding and every pore in my body streaming sweat.

Guide To Good Reading

Several Fiction Books Are Added To Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

My article of last Sunday in regard to the new books in the genealogy collection caused so much comment, that I am going to try a new format for a few weeks. Each time, I will discuss books in some special category. Today I am going to write about the new books of fiction recently added to the collection. In the past two weeks there have been 35 new fiction titles added to the library collection. Duplicate copies of these titles bring the total number of new books of fiction up to 115 books. We very rarely puchase only one copy of a book of fiction and our average number of copies is 4. For some books we purchase even more than that. The main library receives a copy of every book added to the collection, the other copies are distributed among the branches according to the use made of the resources of the branches. Thus West Monroe gets more new books than the other branches, for it's adult circulation is second in the parish system.

Let's look at some of the new books of fiction which may interest you. "The Power of the Dog" by Thomas Savage is a marvelous story of brotherly love, and of life on an isolated farm and it is beautifully written. It ends with a stunning climax and it can be recommended as a very good example of what a novel should be. There are two really good business novels this week. One is "The Job Hunter" by Allen R. Dodd and the other is "Picture of Success" by Florence Soman. Both of them are concerned with what happens to a highly paid executive when he finds himself out of a job. These books are thoughtfully written and they provide a wonderful insight into the world of big business. "The Thousand Hour Day" by W. S. Kuniczak is a tragic tale of the defeat of Poland in 1939. It is a heartbreaking story and will interest students of history. An interesting novel about the early days of our country is "The Prospering" written by Elizabeth Speare. This is her first book for adults and it will appeal primarily to young adults. The scene is in Stockbridge, Massachusetts in the early eighteenth century. There are many readers who will thoroughly enjoy this book.

John Masters new book "The Breaking Strain" will be especially appealing to men. It is a novel of adventure and intrigue extending backward in time from 1971 to 1936. The scene shifts from Scotland to Shiprock, New Mexico, through the Canadian Wilderness on to Iceland and finally to Spain. It is worth your reading time. "A Good Day to Die" by Thomas Wakefield Blackburn is the account of one of the most tragic days in United States History, the massacre of the Sioux Indians by the U. S. Cavalry at the battle of Wounded Knee. Mr. Blackburn writes well, although his characters are not outstanding. Strictly for women is "Every Day By Storm" written by Michael O'Malley. It is the story of the breakup of a marriage and the events that follow. "His Excellency the Ambassador" by Erico Verissimo is a very fine political novel of life in Brazil, written by a Brazilian. For solid reading, do not miss this. "Winterwood" is the title of Dorothy Eden's new book and will interest those readers who enjoy stories of the "Rebecca" type.

"The Whole Truth" by Robert Daley gives an excellent account of the way a big time newspaper functions. It is a good story and should be especially interesting to all journalists. "Brothers in Arms" by Hans Hellmut Kirst is not a pleasant book, but it is a superb job of story telling and will appeal to all men who have known military life. "The Last of the Crazy People" by Timothy Findley is a touching story of a young boy in his 11th summer and how life seems to close in on him. "Beam of Malice" by Alex Hamilton is a book of fifteen short stories of pure terror. Read at your own risk. In direct contrast is a delightful fresh novel with lot's of humor. It is called "The Pheasant-Lined Vest of Charlie Freeman" and the author is John D Sooner. "North Against the Sioux" is another story of Indian warfare in the West and the author is Kenneth Ulyatt. "The Valdez Horses" by Lee Hoffman is also an exciting western story. A pleasant and natural story of two Southern boys is "Moonshine Light, Moonshine Bright" written by William Price Fox, who evidently knows his region. "Diary of a Mad Housewife" by Sue Kaufman will find a ready identity with many women, who also feel harried, rushed and unappreciated. "The Seersucker Whipsaw" by Thomas Ross is a highly readable political novel of life in South Africa. Don't miss this. "Other People's Money" is the title of Jerome Weidman's latest book and it should have a ready audience.

The many readers who enjoy mystery stories will be happy to know that there are several new titles available. "The Nameless Ones" by Lesley Egan, "House of Cards" by Stanley Ellin, "To Hell for Half a - Crown" by Hugh Parry, "The Past Through Tomorrow" by Robert Heinlein, "An American Omnibus" by Georges Simenon, "The James Joyce Murder" by Amanda Cross and "Devil At Your Elbow" written by D. M. Devine are all exciting mystery stories and will be eagerly read and enjoyed.

Remember the Main Library will be open this afternoon and every Sunday afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m.

BBC Goes Through Change

Auntie Is A Teeny Bapper In England

EDITOR'S NOTE — She's a swinging gal now, decked out in miniskirt and talking the latest liv. It has come as a shock — and delight to many — to find that old Auntie, also known as the British Broadcasting Corp. had so much life in her. But with new ideas, fresh young talent, the BBC is kicking its heels, outraging some listeners, but recovering audiences from the commercial stations in Britain.

LONDON (AP) — The announcers used to read the news over the radio in such dignified accents that they seemed to be wearing tuxedos — and sometimes they were.

The British Broadcasting Corp. was so cautious and smug that it was nicknamed "Auntie." But bared satire, uninhibited drama and frank discussion panels have put Auntie into a miniskirt.

The BBC was formed in 1927 to exploit the new medium of radio. The government charted it as an independent corporation and appointed a part-time board of directors. Set owners paid an annual license fee—now $14 for radio and TV—and the money went to the BBC without any parliamentary strings. From the start, the BBC has been financially and politically independent. But it also has had to attract and hold an audience: no listeners, no license fees.

So long as the BBC had a monopoly, the viewers had to take it or leave it.

In 1955, however, the BBC felt the first blast of competition. The Conservative government approved commercial television, which put entertainment first, and BBC audiences dwindled.

A government commission later warned the BBC against segregating listeners into upper, middle and low-brow mentalities and told it to act like a mass medium. It was also urged "to sharpen and improve" its light entertainment programs.

The recommendations released the latent energies of talent the BBC had been storing up. Director-General Sir Hugh Greene had adopted a policy of hiring young producers, directors and writers and putting them into creative teams. One of these teams, working entirely on its own, came up with the famous—and, to some, infamous—satire show, "That Was the Week That Was" to the consternation, and delight, of listeners.

Experiment spread into other fields, most notably drama. The "Wednesday Play" series, which specializes in a type of semidocumentary, has dealt with the mods-and-rockers' life of South London, the problem of abortion, and the plight of the homeless.

This season's hit, "Cathy Come Home," told of a young mother whose children were forced into an orphanage because of the housing shortage. The play's impact forced several town councils to change their policies, and the Daily Mail commented that "Cathy" had done more to help Britain's homeless than anything done in Parliament for years. Indicative of the change in the BBC is the fact that the play was turned down by the drama department three years ago as too depressing.

In the field of comedy, the BBC has won grudging admiration from its commercial rival, Independent Television. A secret memorandum from TV headquarters recently admitted: "This category (light entertainment) is not, as it once was, one of marked strength compared with the BBC. The position of comedy is worse. ITV undoubtedly has the resources, both creative and financial, yet the BBC shows appear to have more polish, more originality, and to be better scripted."

Most daring of this year's comedy shows is "Till Death Us Do Part," which concentrates on Alf Garnett, a lumpish cockney whose prejudices run against "the blacks" and in favor of the royal family.

"Prince Philip, he may be a Greek, but he's not one of them restaurant Greeks," goes one of his lines.

Guide To Good Reading

Several Fiction Books Are Added To Library

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

My article of last Sunday in regard to the new books in the genealogy collection caused so much comment, that I am going to try a new format for a few weeks. Each time, I will discuss books in some special category. Today I am going to write about the new books of fiction recently added to the collection. In the past two weeks there have been 35 new fiction titles added to the library collection. Duplicate copies of these titles bring the total number of new books of fiction up to 115 books. We very rarely puchase only one copy of a book of fiction and our average number of copies is 4. For some books we purchase even more than that. The main library receives a copy of every book added to the collection, the other copies are distributed among the branches according to the use made of the resources of the branches. Thus West Monroe gets more new books than the other branches, for it's adult circulation is second in the parish system.

Let's look at some of the new books of fiction which may interest you. "The Power of the Dog" by Thomas Savage is a marvelous story of brotherly love, and of life on an isolated farm and it is beautifully written. It ends with a stunning climax and it can be recommended as a very good example of what a novel should be. There are two really good business novels this week. One is "The Job Hunter" by Allen R. Dodd and the other is "Picture of Success" by Florence Soman. Both of them are concerned with what happens to a highly paid executive when he finds himself out of a job. These books are thoughtfully written and they provide a wonderful insight into the world of big business. "The Thousand Hour Day" by W. S. Kuniczak is a tragic tale of the defeat of Poland in 1939. It is a heartbreaking story and will interest students of history. An interesting novel about the early days of our country is "The Prospering" written by Elizabeth Speare. This is her first book for adults and it will appeal primarily to young adults. The scene is in Stockbridge, Massachusetts in the early eighteenth century. There are many readers who will thoroughly enjoy this book.

John Masters new book "The Breaking Strain" will be especially appealing to men. It is a novel of adventure and intrigue extending backward in time from 1971 to 1936. The scene shifts from Scotland to Shiprock, New Mexico, through the Canadian Wilderness on to Iceland and finally to Spain. It is worth your reading time. "A Good Day to Die" by Thomas Wakefield Blackburn is the account of one of the most tragic days in United States History, the massacre of the Sioux Indians by the U. S. Cavalry at the battle of Wounded Knee. Mr. Blackburn writes well, although his characters are not outstanding. Strictly for women is "Every Day By Storm" written by Michael O'Malley. It is the story of the breakup of a marriage and the events that follow. "His Excellency the Ambassador" by Erico Verissimo is a very fine political novel of life in Brazil, written by a Brazilian. For solid reading, do not miss this. "Winterwood" is the title of Dorothy Eden's new book and will interest those readers who enjoy stories of the "Rebecca" type.

"The Whole Truth" by Robert Daley gives an excellent account of the way a big time newspaper functions. It is a good story and should be especially interesting to all journalists. "Brothers in Arms" by Hans Hellmut Kirst is not a pleasant book, but it is a superb job of story telling and will appeal to all men who have known military life. "The Last of the Crazy People" by Timothy Findley is a touching story of a young boy in his 11th summer and how life seems to close in on him. "Beam of Malice" by Alex Hamilton is a book of fifteen short stories of pure terror. Read at your own risk. In direct contrast is a delightful fresh novel with lot's of humor. It is called "The Pheasant-Lined Vest of Charlie Freeman" and the author is John D Sooner. "North Against the Sioux" is another story of Indian warfare in the West and the author is Kenneth Ulyatt. "The Valdez Horses" by Lee Hoffman is also an exciting western story. A pleasant and natural story of two Southern boys is "Moonshine Light, Moonshine Bright" written by William Price Fox, who evidently knows his region. "Diary of a Mad Housewife" by Sue Kaufman will find a ready identity with many women, who also feel harried, rushed and unappreciated. "The Seersucker Whipsaw" by Thomas Ross is a highly readable political novel of life in South Africa. Don't miss this. "Other People's Money" is the title of Jerome Weidman's latest book and it should have a ready audience.

The many readers who enjoy mystery stories will be happy to know that there are several new titles available. "The Nameless Ones" by Lesley Egan, "House of Cards" by Stanley Ellin, "To Hell for Half a - Crown" by Hugh Parry, "The Past Through Tomorrow" by Robert Heinlein, "An American Omnibus" by Georges Simenon, "The James Joyce Murder" by Amanda Cross and "Devil At Your Elbow" written by D. M. Devine are all exciting mystery stories and will be eagerly read and enjoyed.

Remember the Main Library will be open this afternoon and every Sunday afternoon from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m.

BBC Goes Through Change

Auntie Is A Teeny Bapper In England

EDITOR'S NOTE — She's a swinging gal now, decked out in miniskirt and talking the latest jiv. It has come as a shock — and delight to many — to find that old Auntie, also known as the British Broadcasting Corp. had so much life in her. But with new ideas, fresh young talent, the BBC is kicking its heels, outraging some listeners, but recovering audiences from the commercial stations in Britain.

LONDON (AP) — The announcers used to read the news over the radio in such dignified accents that they seemed to be wearing tuxedos — and sometimes they were.

The British Broadcasting Corp. was so cautious and smug that it was nicknamed "Auntie." But bared satire, uninhibited drama and frank discussion panels have put Auntie into a miniskirt.

The BBC was formed in 1927 to exploit the new medium of radio. The government charted it as an independent corporation and appointed a part-time board of directors. Set owners paid an annual license fee—now $14 for radio and TV—and the money went to the BBC without any parliamentary strings. From the start, the BBC has been financially and politically independent. But it also has had to attract and hold an audience: no listeners, no license fees.

So long as the BBC had a monopoly, the viewers had to take it or leave it.

In 1955, however, the BBC felt the first blast of competition. The Conservative government approved commercial television, which put entertainment first, and BBC audiences dwindled.

A government commission later warned the BBC against segregating listeners into upper, middle and low-brow mentalities and told it to act like a mass medium. It was also urged "to sharpen and improve" its light entertainment programs.

The recommendations released the latent energies of talent the BBC had been storing up. Director-General Sir Hugh Greene had adopted a policy of hiring young producers, directors and writers and putting them into creative teams. One of these teams, working entirely on its own, came up with the famous—and, to some, infamous—satire show, "That Was the Week That Was" to the consternation, and delight, of listeners.

Experiment spread into other fields, most notably drama. The "Wednesday Play" series, which specializes in a type of semidocumentary, has dealt with the mods-and-rockers' life of South London, the problem of abortion, and the plight of the homeless.

This season's hit, "Cathy Come Home," told of a young mother whose children were forced into an orphanage because of the housing shortage. The play's impact forced several town councils to change their policies, and the Daily Mail commented that "Cathy" had done more to help Britain's homeless than anything done in Parliament for years. Indicative of the change in the BBC is the fact that the play was turned down by the drama department three years ago as too depressing.

In the field of comedy, the BBC has won grudging admiration from its commercial rival, Independent Television. A secret memorandum from TV headquarters recently admitted: "This category (light entertainment) is not, as it once was, one of marked strength compared with the BBC. The position of comedy is worse. ITV undoubtedly has the resources, both creative and financial, yet the BBC shows appear to have more polish, more originality, and to be better scripted."

Most daring of this year's comedy shows is "Till Death Us Do Part," which concentrates on Alf Garnett, a lumpish cockney whose prejudices run against "the blacks" and in favor of the royal family.

"Prince Philip, he may be a Greek, but he's not one of them restaurant Greeks," goes one of his lines.

The Gallup Report

Wallace Bigger Threat To Parties Than King

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCTON, N. J., — Evidence accumulates that GOP fears of a third party bid by Geroge Wallace are well founded. On the other hand, peace party headed by Martin Luther King poses only a minor threat to President Johnson.

The latest "trial heats" show that a Wallace candidacy would hurt the Republicans far more than the Democrats. The damage to the GOP is particularly evident in the South, Wallace's powerbase.

This question was first asked of all voters in a nationwide survey:

"Suppose the presidential election were being held today and George Romney were the Republican candidate and Lyndon Johnson were the Democratic candidate, which would you like to see win?"

Here are the latest national results, showing a loss in support for Romney since March, when his vote was 52 per cent to 43 per cent for Johnson, with 5 per cent undecided:

Nationwide 2-Way Race

Romney	48%
Johnson	45
Undecided	7

The same voters were then asked the following question: there were four candidates — Lyndon Johnson, the Democrat;

"Suppose the presidential election were being held today and there were four candidates — Lyndon Johnson, the Democrat; George Romney, the Republican; George Wallace, the States' Rights candidate; and Martin Luther King, peace party candidate. Which would you like to see win?"

With Wallace and King in the race, Romney's strength is cut sharply and Johnson emerges with a slight lead over the field:

Nationwide 4-Way Race

Johnson	41%
Romney	39
Wallace	11
King	2
Undecided	7

A Wallace candidacy hurts the Republicans most in the South. President Johnson, Romney and Wallace are in a tight 3-way race in this region of the nation as the figures below reveal:

South Only 2-Way Race

Romney	48%
Johnson	38
Undecided	14

South Only 4-Way Race

Johnson	30%
Romney	28
Wallace	27
King	3
Undecided	12

Wallace Strong With Independents

Wallace's support in a 4-way race is greater among men than women, greater among persons with a high school background or less than among those with college training. He is particularly strong among voters who describe themselves as independents.

Wallace is thriving on anti-Johnson sentiment not only in the South but elsewhere in the nation. Because his strength comes largely from those opposed to President Johnson, he wins the support of many who would otherwise vote for a Republican candidate.

Peace Party Has Little Appeal

Support for the Reverend Martin Luther King tends to hurt the Democrats more than the Republicans, but the appeal of a peace party led by King is slight at this point.

King has taken a strong stand against U.S. involvement in Vietnam, maintaining that the Negro cause is suffering due to huge expenditures in Southeast Asia.

The support given a "peace party" led by King in the 4-way race is not a measure of the appeal of the peace issue, or even of the popularity of King. What the results indicate is that such a party led by King has little political appeal at the moment.

A meaningful analysis of the basis of King's support is impossible because his vote is too small. Nevertheless, the findings do shed some light on the nature of his support.

King's following is greatest among persons with less formal education and in lower income groups, a reflection of the fact that his support rests largely with persons of his own race.

President Johnson wins a larger share of the vote among Negroes in this 4-way race than does King or the other candidates.

Details Of Survey

Results in the current survey are based on personal interviews with 1507 people in 326 sampling points across the country. The design of the sample is that of replicated probability sample down to the block level in the case of urban areas, and to segments of townships in the case of rural areas.

Ten years ago—Soviet Premier Khrushchev warned Finland and other Scandinavian nations against the dangers of joining international power blocs.

One year ago—Hurricane Alma struck the Florida west coast after battering Cuba.

The Gallup Report

Wallace Bigger Threat To Parties Than King

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCTON, N. J., — Evidence accumulates that GOP fears of a third party bid by Geroge Wallace are well founded. On the other hand, peace party headed by Martin Luther King poses only a minor threat to President Johnson.

The latest "trial heats" show that a Wallace candidacy would hurt the Republicans far more than the Democrats. The damage to the GOP is particularly evident in the South, Wallace's powerbase.

This question was first asked of all voters in a nationwide survey:

"Suppose the presidential election were being held today and George Romney were the Republican candidate and Lyndon Johnson were the Democratic candidate, which would you like to see win?"

Here are the latest national results, showing a loss in support for Romney since March, when his vote was 52 per cent to 43 per cent for Johnson, with 5 per cent undecided:

Nationwide 2-Way Race

Romney	48%
Johnson	45
Undecided	7

The same voters were then asked the following question: there were four candidates — Lyndon Johnson, the Democrat;

"Suppose the presidential election were being held today and there were four candidates — Lyndon Johnson, the Democrat; George Romney, the Republican; George Wallace, the States' Rights candidate; and Martin Luther King, peace party candidate. Which would you like to see win?"

With Wallace and King in the race, Romney's strength is cut sharply and Johnson emerges with a slight lead over the field:

Nationwide 4-Way Race

Johnson	41%
Romney	39
Wallace	11
King	2
Undecided	7

A Wallace candidacy hurts the Republicans most in the South. President Johnson, Romney and Wallace are in a tight 3-way race in this region of the nation as the figures below reveal:

South Only 2-Way Race

Romney	48%
Johnson	38
Undecided	14

South Only 4-Way Race

Johnson	30%
Romney	28
Wallace	27
King	3
Undecided	12

Wallace Strong With Independents

Wallace's support in a 4-way race is greater among men than women, greater among persons with a high school background or less than among those with college training. He is particularly strong among voters who describe themselves as independents.

Wallace is thriving on anti-Johnson sentiment not only in the South but elsewhere in the nation. Because his strength comes largely from those opposed to President Johnson, he wins the support of many who would otherwise vote for a Republican candidate.

Peace Party Has Little Appeal

Support for the Reverend Martin Luther King tends to hurt the Democrats more than the Republicans, but the appeal of a peace party led by King is slight at this point.

King has taken a strong stand against U.S. involvement in Vietnam, maintaining that the Negro cause is suffering due to huge expenditures in Southeast Asia.

The support given a "peace party" led by King in the 4-way race is not a measure of the appeal of the peace issue, or even of the popularity of King. What the results indicate is that such a party led by King has little political appeal at the moment.

A meaningful analysis of the basis of King's support is impossible because his vote is too small. Nevertheless, the findings do shed some light on the nature of his support.

King's following is greatest among persons with less formal education and in lower income groups, a reflection of the fact that his support rests largely with persons of his own race.

President Johnson wins a larger share of the vote among Negroes in this 4-way race than does King or the other candidates.

Details Of Survey

Results in the current survey are based on personal interviews with 1507 people in 326 sampling points across the country. The design of the sample is that of replicated probability sample down to the block level in the case of urban areas, and to segments of townships in the case of rural areas.

Ten years ago—Soviet Premier Khrushchev warned Finland and other Scandinavian nations against the dangers of joining international power blocs.

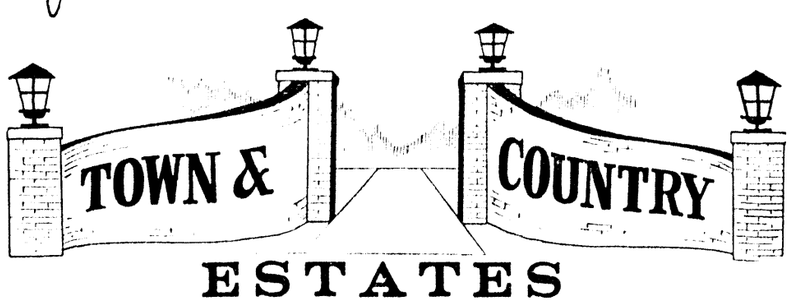
10 Good Reasons Why You Should Live in



ESTATES

(1) Large tree covered lots with concrete streets and curbs.
(2) Public sewerage, water, and no city taxes.
(3) Better fire protection (fire hydrants within every 1,000 feet of every house)
(4) More house and better quality for your money than you can get anywhere else since Holiday Homes is developing the land, building the homes and obtain all materials that go into the homes direct from factory outlets thus saving the purchaser money.
(5) Suburban, country atmosphere yet only ½ mile from Monroe city limits, 2 minutes from Northeast College and only minutes away from shopping centers.
(6) Only private swimming pool club of its kind in the Monroe area and membership open only to residents of Town & Country Estates.
(7) Waterfront lots available on 2½ mile long Lake with fishing ½ boating.
(8) All lots restricted for protection of homeowners.
(9) Plenty of financing money available-conventional, VA and FHA, 6% money available.
(10) School within walking distance of any home in Town & Country Estates.

Drive out to beautiful Town and Country Estates and inspect many of our homes in various stages of construction and you will be convinced why you should own a "Holiday Home" which is the symbol of quality in construction.

LET US CUSTOM-BUILD TO YOUR PLANS!
. . . OUR PLAN DEPT. IS AT YOUR SERVICE

Our complete plans department will be happy to design your home in Town & Country Estates . . . from your own ideas or from our many plans. Drop by and discuss your building problems with us.

BECAUSE . . . all Holiday Homes are Medallion Homes! . . . earning this distinction through their "Total Electric" kitchens, flameless air conditioning and many other electrical features. You pay no more for these advantages.

10 Good Reasons Why You Should Live in TOWN & COUNTRY ESTATES

(1) Large tree covered lots with concrete streets and curbs.
(2) Public sewerage, water, and no city taxes.
(3) Better fire protection (fire hydrants within every 1,000 feet of every house)
(4) More house and better quality for your money than you can get anywhere else since Holiday Homes is developing the land, building the homes and obtain all materials that go into the homes direct from factory outlets thus saving the purchaser money.
(5) Suburban, country atmosphere yet only ½ mile from Monroe city limits, 2 minutes from Northeast College and only minutes away from shopping centers.
(6) Only private swimming pool club of its kind in the Monroe area and membership open only to residents of Town & Country Estates.
(7) Waterfront lots available on 2½ mile long Lake with fishing ½ boating.
(8) All lots restricted for protection of homeowners.
(9) Plenty of financing money available-conventional, VA and FHA, 6% money available.
(10) School within walking distance of any home in Town & Country Estates.

Drive out to beautiful Town and Country Estates and inspect many of our homes in various stages of construction and you will be convinced why you should own a "Holiday Home" which is the symbol of quality in construction.

Above: Amid a setting of all white flowers and myriad crystal votive lights which adorned the altar of First Methodist Church, Monroe, Miss Betty Jean Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack S. Campbell, 2117 Oliver Road, became the bride of John Walter James, also of this city, on Saturday, June 10 at 6 p.m. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Andy Clayton James of Columbia. Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Upon return from a wedding trip to Destin, Fla., the couple will be at home at 1700 Shannon in Monroe.

Below at center: In a candlelight ceremony Saturday evening, June 10 in College Place Baptist Church, Miss Phyllis Lyn Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Peters, Monroe, became the bride of Stephen Brian White, son of Mrs. Hazel White and the late James C. White of West Monroe. The couple will be at home here for the summer, returning to Ruston in the fall where both will continue studies at Louisiana Tech.

Above: Jamaica is the destination of Mr. and Mrs. Marlow Neil Morgan, whose wedding was an event of Thursday evening, June 8 in First Methodist Church of Monroe. The bride is the former Miss Frances Amanda Cobb, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Benajah Bibb Cobb, 2761 Point Drive, in whose home a reception was held following the 7 p.m. ceremony. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lee Morgan, 2801 Pargoud Blvd. Upon return from their wedding trip the couple will be at home at 1103 McGuire, Monroe.

At left: Dr. and Mrs. Jacob Evans Levine of New York City, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Roberta Levine to Sam Pasternack Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Myer Weldman, of Monroe. Miss Levine was graduated from the Fieldston School and is attending Boston University. Mr. Pasternack is a graduate of Neville high school and Massachusetts Institute of Technology and will complete his work for a Master of Science degree in Aeronautics at M.I.T. in June. Rabbi Lawrence W. Schwartz of White Plains, will officiate at the 8 p.m. ceremony on August 26 at the Plaza Hotel in New York City.

Our Lady of Fatima Church, Monroe, was scene of the ceremony Saturday, June 10 at 2 p.m. which united in marriage Miss Julia Salley Hover, Monroe and William Flood Smith, Bastrop. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hover of Fayetteville, Ark., formerly of this city and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John Madison Smith of Bastrop. After a wedding trip to Florida the couple will reside in Baton Rouge where they are attending LSU. A reception following the ceremony was held in the Paragon Club Ballroom.

Miss Frances Kay Jones, daughter of James L. Jones Jr., Monroe, and the late Dorothy Hodges Jones, became the bride of Timothy Towers King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hughey Hope King of Baton Rouge, in a ceremony Saturday, at 7 p.m. in First Presbyterian Church, Monroe. A reception following the exchange of vows was held in the Church Courtyard. The couple will reside in Minden where the bride will teach this fall while Mr. King completes his studies at Louisiana Tech.

MRS. SIDNEY TRUETT GLASS

Donna Sue Johns Becomes Bride Of Sidney T. Glass

Baskets of yellow gladioli and daisies alternated with branched candelabra holding white tapers formed an altar setting in Locharbor Baptist Church Saturday, June 10 for the wedding of Miss Donna Sue Johns and Sidney Truett Glass.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. E. Gewin of Collinston and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. James E. Glass, Monroe.

Mrs. James T. Glass, rendered an organ prelude and Rector Hopgood sang, accompanied by Miss Carolyn Savage, prior to the double ring vows performed by Rev. James L. Strittman at 7 p.m.

Given in marriage by Mr. Gewin the bride was wearing a bouffant gown of white peau de soie with fitted bodice featuring sweetheart neckline and long sleeves. Lace appliques embellished with seed pearls adorned the gown. Her veil of illusion was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a cascade of white carnations.

Capt. James T. Glass served as best man and groomsmen-ushers were Burl Stewart, T. L. Rhymes, Kenneth Johns and Hilton Johns Jr. Dewayne Aswell acted as ring bearer.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall where Miss Linda Jinks greeted guests at the bride's book table. Pyramid candelabra holding white tapers and enterlaced with white pompons and yellow roses formed the central decor for the reception table. Mrs. Raymond Beasley and Mrs. Bill Nolan served cake and presiding at the punch bowl were Mrs. Durryl Killen and Mrs. James A. Morgan.

For their wedding trip to the Gulf Coast the bride traveled wearing a pink linen suit with black patent accessories and a white pixie carnation corsage. They will be at home in New Orleans. The bride graduated from Collinston high school and attended Northeast Louisiana State College and a West Monroe beauty school. Mr. Glass was graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and from Northeast.

Betty Jean Campbell, John Walter James Wed In Candlelight Setting At Methodist Church

Twinkling crystal votive lights set amid Boston ferns and all white flowers formed a setting in First Methodist Church, Monroe, Saturday, June 10 for the ceremony in which Miss Betty Jean Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack S. Campbell, 2117 Oliver Road, became the bride of John Walter James, Monroe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Clayton James, Columbia.

Centering the altar was a mass arrangement of white gladioli, pompons, Fuji and large chrysanthemums in a white pedestaled urn. A 15-branched candelabra with crystal votive lights formed an arch behind the altar at either side of which were large Boston ferns in white ribbed planters atop pedestals. Completing the setting were myriad twinkling votive lights in cathedral and seven-branched candelabra, entwined with Southern Smilax.

Rev. Fred S. Flurry performed the double ring vows at 6 p.m. following an organ preiude by Mrs. Everett Zeagler and The Lord's Prayer sung by Garland Shell.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore an Empire sheath gown of silk peau de soie with reembroidered lace motifs enhancing the bodice and bell sleeves, joined to a yoke of lace, embellished with pearls. A bouffant Watteau train, bordered in matching Chantilly lace, fell court length from the shoulders. Her elbow length veil of illusion drifted from a flower and sequin trimmed headpiece of peau de soie. The bride's bouquet was an ethereal cascade of stephanotis blossoms centered with a white cattleya orchid in a setting of variegated pothos foliage and French maline.

Mrs. Robert Martin Jackson, Fort Worth, Texas, cousin of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. John Stone Campbell Jr., Baton Rouge, sister - in - law of the bride; Mrs. F. Malcolm Hood, Monroe, Miss Helen Jean Kimball, Haynesville, both cousins of the bride; and Miss Penelope Sims of Bastrop. They wore Empire floor length gowns of avocado chiffon over taffeta with fluted sleeves. The Empire line was accented with a pale blue satin band, ending with a bow and hemline streamers. Matching avocado shoes and crowns of pale blue satin finished with flat bows, completed their attire. The attendants carried posy bouquets of green Fuji chrysanthemums with dark green foliage, touches of blue-green lace and stems of moss green velvet ribbon.

Mr. James served as best man for his son and groomsmen included Andy Clayton James Jr., Franklinton, brother of the groom; Samuel Oldham Henry III, West Monroe; Otis Leon Johnson Jr., Overland Park, Kans., James David Bruno, New Orleans; Richard Michael Campbell, Monroe and John Stone Campbell Jr., Baton Rouge, both brothers of the bride.

Mrs. Campbell was wearing for her daughter's wedding a floor length gown of yellow chiffon, fashioned on Empire lines, with lace bodice and sleeves, and floating chiffon panels falling from the neckline in back. She wore yellow shoes and a veiled yellow crown and a white Japhet orchid corsage. Mrs. James, mother of the groom, was attired in a semi-fitted dress of sky blue bonded crepe in floor length with shadowed lace yoke and sleeves; a matching hat and shoes and cultured pearl accessories. Her corsage was also a white Japhet orchid. White Cymbidium orchids were presented to the grandmothers.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were hosts at a reception at Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Noted in the entrance was an arrangement of white gladioli and white stock interspersed with green Fuji chrysanthemums in a silver wine cooler. Ornamenting the guest book table was a bride's memory candle, inside a large hurricane globe, bedecked with green and white flowers and foliage.

A pair of ferns on pedestals provided a background for the receiving line. Southern smilax and white bridal blossoms encircled the tiered wedding cake, while centering the refreshment table, which was garlanded with boxwood, was a pyramid of white stock, white iris and white roses combined with green Fuji chrysanthemums in a tall silver epergne with lighted tapers. All tables were draped with white organdy cloths.

Greeting guests at the door and in the foyer leading to the ballroom were Mrs. Merton Abington, Monroe; Mrs. Russell Cummings, Columbia; Mrs. J. M. Lafferty, Columbia; Mrs. Grayson Guthrie; Mrs. Kennedy Abington, Monroe; Mrs. Edgar Duke, Mrs. Johnnye West, Columbia, and Mrs. Henry E. Guerriero. Circulating among the guests was Miss Lillian Tarver.

Wedding cake was served by Mrs. Robert L. Searcy, Lewisville, Ark., Mrs. James David Bruno, New Orleans; Mrs. Samuel O. Henry III, West Monooe; Mrs. Frank Budde, Shreveport; Mrs. George M. More Square Heels, Toes Seen For Fall

Unlike clothes, shoes have to be started many months ahead of a season, because they begin with the wooden forms called "lasts," on which they are made, and the heels which must be turned out in quantity to go with those lasts.

So look to last and heel makers for early fashion predictions. For fall, they say, shoes will be squarer of heel and toe than they've been in 20 years. Real chunky is the word. Many mature women will find the look familiar, but there's a whole new generation which hasn't seen it.

. . .new look to spring-summer pumps, in bright brown patent, soft purple burnished leather, with buckles or flowers set to rise high.

HURRY UP, GIRLS!

NEW YORK (UPI) — Girls now in their late teens had better find a husband before the age of 30. After that, according to a study by Meinhard - Commercial Corp., chances are low.

Currently there are more women than men in the 25 to 29 age group. But by 1975, experts predict, there will be 66,000 more men than women that age. And that will be the last time in her statistical life that a woman will find herself outnumbered by men.

MRS. SIDNEY TRUETT GLASS

Donna Sue Johns Becomes Bride Of Sidney T. Glass

Baskets of yellow gladioli and daisies alternated with branched candelabra holding white tapers formed an altar setting in Locharbor Baptist Church Saturday, June 10 for the wedding of Miss Donna Sue Johns and Sidney Truett Glass.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. E. Gewin of Collinston and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. James E. Glass, Monroe.

Mrs. James T. Glass, rendered an organ prelude and Rector Hopgood sang, accompanied by Miss Carolyn Savage, prior to the double ring vows performed by Rev. James L. Strittman at 7 p.m.

Given in marriage by Mr. Gewin the bride was wearing a bouffant gown of white peau de soie with fitted bodice featuring sweetheart neckline and long sleeves. Lace appliques embellished with seed pearls adorned the gown. Her veil of illusion was held in place by a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a cascade of white carnations.

Capt. James T. Glass served as best man and groomsmen-ushers were Burl Stewart, T. L. Rhymes, Kenneth Johns and Hilton Johns Jr. Dewayne Aswell acted as ring bearer.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall where Miss Linda Jinks greeted guests at the bride's book table. Pyramid candelabra holding white tapers and enterlaced with white pompons and yellow roses formed the central decor for the reception table. Mrs. Raymond Beasley and Mrs. Bill Nolan served cake and presiding at the punch bowl were Mrs. Durryl Killen and Mrs. James A. Morgan.

For their wedding trip to the Gulf Coast the bride traveled wearing a pink linen suit with black patent accessories and a white pixie carnation corsage. They will be at home in New Orleans. The bride graduated from Collinston high school and attended Northeast Louisiana State College and a West Monroe beauty school. Mr. Glass was graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and from Northeast.

Twinkling crystal votive lights set amid Boston ferns and all white flowers formed a setting in First Methodist Church, Monroe, Saturday, June 10 for the ceremony in which Miss Betty Jean Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack S. Campbell, 2117 Oliver Road, became the bride of John Walter James, Monroe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Clayton James, Columbia.

Centering the altar was a mass arrangement of white gladioli, pompons, Fuji and large chrysanthemums in a white pedestaled urn. A 15-branched candelabra with crystal votive lights formed an arch behind the altar at either side of which were large Boston ferns in white ribbed planters atop pedestals. Completing the setting were myriad twinkling votive lights in cathedral and seven-branched candelabra, entwined with Southern Smilax.

Rev. Fred S. Flurry performed the double ring vows at 6 p.m. following an organ prelude by Mrs. Everett Zeagler and The Lord's Prayer sung by Garland Shell.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore an Empire sheath gown of silk peau de soie with reembroidered lace motifs enhancing the bodice and bell sleeves, joined to a yoke of lace, embellished with pearls. A bouffant Watteau train, bordered in matching Chantilly lace, fell court length from the shoulders. Her elbow length veil of illusion drifted from a flower and sequin trimmed headpiece of peau de soie. The bride's bouquet was an ethereal cascade of stephanotis blossoms centered with a white cattleya orchid in a setting of variegated pothos foliage and French maline.

Mrs. Robert Martin Jackson, Fort Worth, Texas, cousin of the bride, served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. John Stone Campbell Jr., Baton Rouge, sister - in - law of the bride; Mrs. F. Malcolm Hood, Monroe, Miss Helen Jean Kimball, Haynesville, both cousins of the bride; and Miss Penelope Sims of Bastrop. They wore Empire floor length gowns of avocado chiffon over taffeta with fluted sleeves. The Empire line was accented with a pale blue satin band, ending with a bow and hemline streamers. Matching avocado shoes and crowns of pale blue satin finished with flat bows, completed their attire. The attendants carried posy bouquets of green Fuji chrysanthemums with dark green foliage, touches of blue-green lace and stems of moss green velvet ribbon.

Mr. James served as best man for his son and groomsmen included Andy Clayton James Jr., Franklinton, brother of the groom; Samuel Oldham Henry III, West Monroe; Otis Leon Johnson Jr., Overland Park, Kans., James David Bruno, New Orleans; Richard Michael Campbell, Monroe and John Stone Campbell Jr., Baton Rouge, both brothers of the bride.

Mrs. Campbell was wearing for her daughter's wedding a floor length gown of yellow chiffon, fashioned on Empire lines, with lace bodice and sleeves, and floating chiffon panels falling from the neckline in back. She wore yellow shoes and a veiled yellow crown and a white Japhet orchid corsage. Mrs. James, mother of the groom, was attired in a semi-fitted dress of sky blue bonded crepe in floor length with shadowed lace yoke and sleeves; a matching hat and shoes and cultured pearl accessories. Her corsage was also a white Japhet orchid. White Cymbidium orchids were presented to the grandmothers.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Campbell were hosts at a reception at Bayou DeSiard Country Club. Noted in the entrance was an arrangement of white gladioli and white stock interspersed with green Fuji chrysanthemums in a silver wine cooler. Ornamenting the guest book table was a bride's memory candle, inside a large hurricane globe, bedecked with green and white flowers and foliage.

A pair of ferns on pedestals provided a background for the receiving line. Southern smilax and white bridal blossoms encircled the tiered wedding cake, while centering the refreshment table, which was garlanded with boxwood, was a pyramid of white stock, white iris and white roses combined with green Fuji chrysanthemums in a tall silver epergne with lighted tapers. All tables were draped with white organdy cloths.

Greeting guests at the door and in the foyer leading to the ballroom were Mrs. Merton Abington, Monroe; Mrs. Russell Cummings, Columbia; Mrs. J. M. Lafferty, Columbia; Mrs. Grayson Guthrie; Mrs. Kennedy Abington, Monroe; Mrs. Edgar Duke, Mrs. Johnnye West, Columbia, and Mrs. Henry E. Guerriero. Circulating among the guests was Miss Lillian Tarver.

Presiding at the punch table were Mrs. J. L. McGrew, Columbia; Mrs. Andy Clayton James Jr., Franklinton; Mrs. E. B. Head, Monroe; Mrs. Aaron B. Fuller, Shreveport; Mrs. Edward J. Seymour, Monroe; Mrs. Helen K. Garrett, and Mrs. Charles Arthur Kimball Jr., of Haynesville; Mrs. A. Stone Palmer, Shreveport and Mrs. Harold G. Smith, Oxford, Miss.

Wedding cake was served by Mrs. Robert L. Searcy, Lewisville, Ark., Mrs. James David Bruno, New Orleans; Mrs. Samuel O. Henry III, West Monooe; Mrs. Frank Budde, Shreveport; Mrs. George M. Rorex, Mrs. William R. Kitchens, Monroe; Mrs. David Gartman, Miss Roslyn Walker and Mrs. S. H. Walker, all of Columbia.

Julia Salley Hover Weds William Flood Smith June 10

Our Lady of Fatima Catholic Church, Monroe, was scene of the ceremony Saturday, June 10 at 2 p. m. which united in marriage Miss Julia Salley Hover of this city and William Flood Smith, Bastrop.

Linda Gay Calhoun, New Orleans.

After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in Dallas. For travel the bride wore a yellow ensemble with beige accessories and the white orchid from her bouquet. Mrs. Stewart has completed her junior year at Louisiana Tech where she is a member of Sigma Kappa sorority. She plans to continue her studies at North Texas State University in Denton. Mr. Stewart was graduated from Tech with a B.S. in electrical engineering. Employed in Dallas, he is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity; Eta Kappa Nu honorary engineering fraternity and was Senior Men's Senator in the Student Senate.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hover of Fayetteville, Ark., formerly of Monroe and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. John Madison Smith, Bastrop.

White gladioli were used in the four altar vases and pews were marked with clusters of white flowers. The Rev. George Martinez performed the double ring ceremony following organ selections by Mrs. Della Williamson, who also accompanied the soloist, Miss Elizabeth Barham.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was wearing an empire gown of white satin brocade, featuring tent sleeves, a cowl collar and white satin cathedral length train. Her elbow length veil of double illusion drifted from a headdress of layers of satin petals, sprinkled with rhinestones. She carried a bouquet of white bridal roses encircling a yellow-throated white orchid.

Miss Jan Mason, maid of honor and the bridesmaids, Miss Helen Jeanne Smith, sister of the groom; Miss Mary Louise Tolar and Miss Lucille Morton, wore gowns of yellow linen with the empire waist accented by white lace daisies which extended in double rows down each side to the hem. Their scalloped circular veils were anchored to clusters of fresh white daisies and they carried matching daisy bouquets.

Flower girls were Misses Katherine and Jacqueline Hover, nieces of the bride, who wore dresses identical to the other attendants, and carried baskets of daisies.

Mr. Smith served as best man for his son and groomsmen were Arthur S. McMeans III, Thomas P. Moore III, Frank W. Hover, and Capt. Jack H. Hover, both brothers of the bride. Darrell Hover, her nephew, acted as ring bearer.

RECEPTION

Centering the reception table was a silver urn filled with Majestic daisies and white stock flanked by five - branch silver candelabra. Garlands of white daisies and greenery encircled the bride's tiered wedding cake, topped with a white orchid and decorated with yellow roses, and similar garlands wreathed the groom's chocolate cake.

A memory candle ornamented the guest book table presided over by Misses Eileen Pressee, Jane Cook, Renee Breard and Cherri Turpin. Serving the cakes were Mrs. Ray Foster Sr., Mrs. Russell Leonard, Mrs. Turpin Davidson, Mrs. Frank W. Hover, Bossier City; Mrs. Daniel Madere and Mrs. Bob Drinkwater. Alternating at the punch bowl were Mrs. Frank W. Hover of Tallulah; Mrs. Hugh G. Parker Jr., Mrs. Douglas P. Davison and Mrs. Jack H. Hover.

Tea girls were Miss Debbie Drinkwater, Abilene, Tex., Miss Christie Morton, Miss Jean Tolar, Miss Kate Carey, Oak Ridge and Miss Kay Turner and distributing yellow and white rice bags were Miss Carmen Hover, and the flower girls.

For their wedding trip to New Orleans and Florida the bride traveled in an olive green and beige ensemble with beige accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in Baton Rouge. The bride graduated from Neville high school and is presently attending LSU where she is a member of Phi Mu social sorority. Mr. Smith graduated from Bastrop high school and is also a student at LSU, majoring in architecture. He is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha social fraternity and the American Institute of Architects LSU Student chapter.

MRS. JAMES THOMAS STEWART

Diane Moore, James Stewart Exchange Vows On Saturday

Baskets of white gladioli and daisies flanked by candelabra formed an altar setting in First Baptist Church of Sterlington for the wedding Saturday, June 10 of Miss Priscilla Diane Moore of Sterlington and James Thomas Stewart, Dallas, Tex.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edmund Moore, Sterlington and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edison Stewart, Ruston.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a full length gown of white peau de soie with beaded lace jacket. Rose lace appliques enhanced the chapel length train. Her triple veil of illusion was held in place by a double crown of pearls and she carried a bouquet of white carnations centered with an orchid and cascades of ivy.

Miss Martha Puckett, Sterlington, who served as maid of honor, wore a full length yellow gown with yellow lace jacket and a headpiece of three roses attached to a veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of yellow carnations and daisies. Flower girl was Miss Polly Ann Shipp, dressed identically to the maid of honor.

Mr. Stewart was his son's best man and ushers were Thomas Edmund Moore Jr., brother of the bride; Randall Louis Stewart, brother of the groom; William Whit Rodgers, Ruston and Claude Terrall Cheatham, Alvin, Texas. Candlelighter was Kirby Shipp of Alexandria.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Moore wore a knit suit of aquamarine bordered in white, white accessories and a white cymbidium orchid. The groom's mother chose a pink silk linen ensemble with flower hat, matching accessories and a white cymbidium orchid.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the education building of the church. Centering the reception table was an arrangement of gladioli and daisies while on the guest book table was a rice bag tree and a memory candle. Miss Linda Stewart, sister of the groom, presided at the guest book and serving cake and punch were Miss Glynda Bounds of Bossier City and Mrs. Robert Foreman, Plano, Tex. Tea girls were Misses Susan Stone of Dallas and Employed in Dallas, he is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity; Eta Kappa Nu honorary engineering fraternity and was Senior Men's Senator in the Student Senate.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hover of Fayetteville, Ark., formerly of Monroe and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. John Madison Smith, Bastrop.

White gladioli were used in the four altar vases and pews were marked with clusters of white flowers. The Rev. George Martinez performed the double ring ceremony following organ selections by Mrs. Della Williamson, who also accompanied the soloist, Miss Elizabeth Barham.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was wearing an empire gown of white satin brocade, featuring tent sleeves, a cowl collar and white satin cathedral length train. Her elbow length veil of double illusion drifted from a headdress of layers of satin petals, sprinkled with rhinestones. She carried a bouquet of white bridal roses encircling a yellow-throated white orchid.

Miss Jan Mason, maid of honor and the bridesmaids, Miss Helen Jeanne Smith, sister of the groom; Miss Mary Louise Tolar and Miss Lucille Morton, wore gowns of yellow linen with the empire waist accented by white lace daisies which extended in double rows down each side to the hem. Their scalloped circular veils were anchored to clusters of fresh white daisies and they carried matching daisy bouquets.

Flower girls were Misses Katherine and Jacqueline Hover, nieces of the bride, who wore dresses identical to the other attendants, and carried baskets of daisies.

Mr. Smith served as best man for his son and groomsmen were Arthur S. McMeans III, Thomas P. Moore III, Frank W. Hover, and Capt. Jack H. Hover, both brothers of the bride. Darrell Hover, her nephew, acted as ring bearer.

RECEPTION

Centering the reception table was a silver urn filled with Majestic daisies and white stock flanked by five - branch silver candelabra. Garlands of white daisies and greenery encircled the bride's tiered wedding cake, topped with a white orchid and decorated with yellow roses, and similar garlands wreathed the groom's chocolate cake.

A memory candle ornamented the guest book table presided over by Misses Eileen Pressee, Jane Cook, Renee Breard and Cherri Turpin. Serving the cakes were Mrs. Ray Foster Sr., Mrs. Russell Leonard, Mrs. Turpin Davidson, Mrs. Frank W. Hover, Bossier City; Mrs. Daniel Madere and Mrs. Bob Drinkwater. Alternating at the punch bowl were Mrs. Frank W. Hover of Tallulah; Mrs. Hugh G. Parker Jr., Mrs. Douglas P. Davison and Mrs. Jack H. Hover.

Tea girls were Miss Debbie Drinkwater, Abilene, Tex., Miss Christie Morton, Miss Jean Tolar, Miss Kate Carey, Oak Ridge and Miss Kay Turner and distributing yellow and white rice bags were Miss Carmen Hover, and the flower girls.

For their wedding trip to New Orleans and Florida the bride traveled in an olive green and beige ensemble with beige accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will be at home in Baton Rouge. The bride graduated from Neville high school and is presently attending LSU where she is a member of Phi Mu social sorority. Mr. Smith graduated from Bastrop high school and is also a student at LSU, majoring in architecture. He is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha social fraternity and the American Institute of Architects LSU Student chapter.

NEW SPONGE MOP

A practical sponge mop, attached to a handle made of flexible plastic — including the hinge — makes it easy to wash floors under beds, low furniture, and appliances.

Diane Moore, James Stewart Exchange Vows On Saturday

Baskets of white gladioli and daisies flanked by candelabra formed an altar setting in First Baptist Church of Sterlington for the wedding Saturday, June 10 of Miss Priscilla Diane Moore of Sterlington and James Thomas Stewart, Dallas, Tex.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edmund Moore, Sterlington and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edison Stewart, Ruston.

Dr. Walter B. Shurden performed the double ring ceremony with traditional music provided by Mrs. Warren G. Ledger, organist.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a full length gown of white peau de soie with beaded lace jacket. Rose lace appliques enhanced the chapel length train. Her triple veil of illusion was held in place by a double crown of pearls and she carried a bouquet of white carnations centered with an orchid and cascades of ivy.

Miss Martha Puckett, Sterlington, who served as maid of honor, wore a full length yellow gown with yellow lace jacket and a headpiece of three roses attached to a veil of illusion. She carried a bouquet of yellow carnations and daisies. Flower girl was Miss Polly Ann Shipp, dressed identically to the maid of honor.

Mr. Stewart was his son's best man and ushers were Thomas Edmund Moore Jr., brother of the bride; Randall Louis Stewart, brother of the groom; William Whit Rodgers, Ruston and Claude Terrall Cheatham, Alvin, Texas. Candlelighter was Kirby Shipp of Alexandria.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Moore wore a knit suit of aquamarine bordered in white, white accessories and a white cymbidium orchid. The groom's mother chose a pink silk linen ensemble with flower hat, matching accessories and a white cymbidium orchid.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the education building of the church. Centering the reception table was an arrangement of gladioli and daisies while on the guest book table was a rice bag tree and a memory candle. Miss Linda Stewart, sister of the groom, presided at the guest book and serving cake and punch were Miss Glynda Bounds of Bossier City and Mrs. Robert Foreman, Plano, Tex. Tea girls were Misses Susan Stone of Dallas and

Honeymoon In Jamaica Follows Thursday Vows Of Frances Amanda Cobb, Marlow Neil Morgan

The wedding of Miss Frances Amanda Cobb, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Benajah Bibb Cobb and Marlow Neil Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lee Morgan, 2801 Pargoud Blvd., was solemnized at 7 o'clock Thursday evening, June 8 in the First Methodist Church. A reception followed at the Cobb home, 2761 Point Drive, overlooking Bayou DeSiard.

The altar was centered with a 33-branch candle tree, garlanded with woodwardia fern and Jade foliage. Flanking the tree were majestic arrangements in white urns atop ribbed pedestals, of white gladioli, white and yellow stock, white and yellow Killian daisies and pink peonies. Spiral candelabrum, also garlanded with foliage, enhanced the arrangements. Centering the choir loft was a 15-branch arch candelabra which held an outline arrangement of Mexican Jade foliage, flanked by fern trees of woodwardia. Family pews were defined by white satin ribbon and bouquets of daisies.

White tapers used in all candelabra were lighted by Rhymes Oliver and McVea Oliver. Mrs. Everett Zeagler, organist, accompanied Mrs. Joe Caskey, who sang "Thine Alone," prior to the double ring ceremony performed by Rev. George Harbuck.

Entering on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage the bride wore a wedding gown of white silk organza with an Empire bodice of tucked organza featuring a scooped neckline and tiny sleeves. Appliques of Alencon lace marked the high waistline and embellished the full skirt, forming a wide band at the hemline. A triple train of illusion fell from the shoulders to court length. A half cap, edged with the lace medallions, held her three tiered veil of illusion. The bride carried a bouquet of stephanotis blossoms centered with two white cattleya orchids, in cascade design with variegated phothos foliage used as a background.

The bride was preceded down the aisle by her attendants, Miss Roberta Cobb, maid of honor; Miss Caroline Cobb, junior bridesmaid; Miss Bibb Cobb, Miss Janie Cobb, all sisters of the bride; Miss Susan Sherrouse, Mrs. George Smelser, Mrs. John Blackman and Miss Elizabeth Cobb, cousin of the bride. Misses Layne and Wynne Morgan, nieces of the groom, served as flower girls.

The bridesmaids wore identical dresses of white cotton lace over yellow polished cotton, featuring scoop necklines and brief sleeves in waists of empire style, banded in yellow with flat back bows and full skirts. They carried white baskets of yellow, white and pink Marguerite daisies, accented by French maline in shades of white and yellow, and wore white horsehair braid crownless hats, tied with yellow ribbon.

Flower girls wore matching dresses of white cotton lace over yellow polished cotton in empire style with yellow hair ribbons, and carried smaller identical baskets.

Mrs. Cobb, mother of the bride, wore a slender floor length model of pale yellow crepe, featuring a simply-cut bodice solidly beaded in chalk white, with a tiny yellow hat and a white cattleya orchid corsage. Mrs. Morgan was gowned in pale green chiffon with beading encircling the neckline and at the hem of the underdress revealed through the flowing chiffon skirt. She wore a flat green bow headdress of matching fabric and a white cattleya orchid.

Mrs. R. R. Rhymes, grandmother of the bride, wore a mauve silk with lace bodice and matching flower hat and a rose corsage. The groom's grandmother, Mrs. Amiee Cook, wore a gray-blue chiffon with fitted bodice and full skirt and a matching hat. Her corsage was a pink cymbidium orchid.

RECEPTION

Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception at their home. The drive to the residence was outlined with pink caladium and hurricane lamps. On each side of the entrance were mass arrangements of white gladioli, stock, daisies and peonies.

Guests were invited into the back yard where scenic Bayou DeSiard provided the background and masses of green and white caladium outlined the flower beds. Punch was served from twin punch bowls on glass topped tables centered with silver candelabra twinkling with votive lights and entwined with gardenias and magnolias. The twin groom's cakes were centered with a single Florentine candle holder.

The brick patio outlined with white wrought iron hurricane lamps set amidst white petunias and caladium was the setting for the table holding the bride's cake topped with silver nuptial cups from which the bride and groom drank. A white flower cart filled with pots of daisies, magnolias and gardenias, was nestled against a brick wall. A platform on the bayou's edge furnished dancing space to the music of Phares Corder's orchestra. At nightfall many candles glittered on the bayou bank and around the lawn.

The receiving line was formed in the den which was decorated with magnolia leaves and white doves. A silver epergne overflowing with pink garden party roses centered the dining table and on the piano was a mass arrangement of Tiffany roses in a silver wine cooler. Tiffany roses in white and gold vases were also used on the mantel.

Those assisting with serving were Mrs. J. W. Perry, Mrs. Robert Oliver, Mrs. H. D. Touchstone, Mrs. Roy Kelly, Mrs. Faheam Cannon, Mrs. Ray Rhymes, Mrs. Burchall Liles, Mrs. Brewer Godfrey, Mrs. Armand McHenry, Mrs. Arthur Grant, Mrs. Guy Campbell, Mrs. John Sherrouse Jr., Mrs. Evans Ethridge, Mrs. Pete Godwin, Mrs. Henry Hammonds, Mrs. Dewitt Milam, Mrs. Bishop Johnston, Mrs. Allan Barham, Mrs. Lee Vanderpool, Mrs. Louis Peters, Mrs. Harold Woods, Mrs. George Snellings Jr., Mrs. Grayson Guthrie, Mrs. Henry Guerriero, Mrs. Conway Crossland, Mrs. Vagie Rivers, Mrs. George Weaks, Mrs. Shelby Hill, Mrs. Fred Parrish, Mrs. James Moore, Mrs. Corbin Turpin, Mrs. Laslie Richardson, Mrs. George Walker, Mrs. Ed Seymour, Mrs. Fred Amman, Mrs. Oliver Lowery, Mrs. John Jordan, Mrs. Richard Kellogg, Mrs. T. O. Bancroft Jr., Mrs. Cyril Yancey, Mrs. Fred Cook, Mrs. Harold Keeling, Mrs. Jay Adams, Mrs. F. E. McCarty and Mrs. Noland Harvey.

At the bride's book were Mrs. Ray Doege, Miss Gayle Kelly, Miss Janet Moses, Miss Sally Ensminger, Miss Fahye Cannon and Miss Connie Yancey. Rice girls, wearing white dresses with yellow ribbons, were Misses Lee Bancroft, Nancy Touchstone, Allison Rhymes, Larke Woods, Francesca Biedenharn and Julie Cobb.

When the couple left for a honeymoon in Jamaica, the bride was wearing a white dress with navy linen jacket, alligator shoes and bag and two cattleya orchids for her corsage. On their return they will be at home in Monroe.

MRS. LUCIAN HUGHES SHOCKEY

Shockey-Langley Wedding Held In Candlelight Setting

Fern trees and white tapers in wrought iron candelabra entwined with smilax formed a background for altar arrangements of white California gladioli in Southside Methodist Church Friday, June 9 for the wedding of Miss Wanda Dean Langley of Monroe and Lucian Hughes Shockey of Mer Rouge.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John Thomas Sanders, Monroe and T. J. Langley of Dallas, Texas. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Shockey, Mer Rouge.

A white prie dieu entwined with smilax and stephanotis and massive arrangements of white gladioli and stock in the sanctuary and foyer of the church completed the setting. Rev. Lea Joyner performed the vows at 7:30 p.m. with nuptial music by Miss Anne Roberts, organist and Rev. William Evans, soloist.

The aisle marking the path of the bride, escorted by her father, Mr. Langley, was lined with candelabra. The bride's gown of white duchess satin featured appliques of French reembroidered Alencon lace, lavished with crystals and pearls at the hem of the A-line skirt and wrists of the long Bishop sleeves of the lace. A detachable court train of duchess satin fell from the waist. Her full length veil of silk illusion was attached to a cluster of reembroidered lace flowers and she carried a bouquet of white butterfly roses and stephanotis centered with a yellow - throated white orchid.

Wearing floor length gowns of deep turquoise silk faced peau with detachable court trains were the bride's attendants, Mrs. John Louis Ford, matron of honor; Miss Polly Johnson, Miss Carolyn Courson, Miss Pat Ayers, all of Monroe; Miss Jan Hillman, Mobile, Ala., and Mrs. David Shelby, San Antonio, Texas. Their headdresses were flower clusters of the dress fabric with shoulder length turquoise veils. They carried crescent bouquets of pink traveler gladioli with pink satin streamers.

Dressed identically to the other attendants was the flower girl, Kathy Ford, who carried a miniature crescent bouquet of pink gladioli.

Mr. Shockey was his son's best man and groomsmen included Neal Willett, John Louis Ford, Keith Babb, all of Monroe; Cleo Shockey and Hillman Shockey, Mer Rouge.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Sanders entertained at a reception at the Paragon Club. The bride's mother received guests wearing a suit of pale pink silk Alaskine with matching silk accessories and a purple orchid corsage. The groom's mother chose a dress of beige lace with beige accessories and a purple orchid corsage.

Covered with a floor length satin cloth, garlanded with string smilax, the reception table was centered with pink sensation roses in a cupid epergne flanked by matching cupid candelabra holding pink tapers. The bride's table which held the tiered wedding cake was also draped in white satin with garlands of smilax, as was the groom's table which held an arrangement of white butterfly roses in center of the cake. A memory candle and pink roses adorned the guest book table.

For going away when the couple left on a wedding trip to Hot Springs, Ark., the bride changed into a pale pink linen ensemble with beige accessories and a white orchid corsage. They will be at home in Mer Rouge.

Mrs. Shockey was graduated from Neville high school and is a senior at Northeast Louisiana State College, where she has served as first and second vice-president of her sorority, Zeta Tau Alpha. A graduate of Mer Rouge high school Mr. Shockey received his B.S. degree from Northeast where he is presently a graduate student in business administration. He is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities and is vice - president of Morehouse Cattlemen's Association.

MRS. CLYDE ALLEN BELL

Green, White Motif Featured At Kozlovsky-Bell Wedding

Twin baskets of white gladioli, pale green chrysanthemums and two multi-branched candelabra with green foliage formed an altar setting in the Forsythe Avenue Church of Christ for the wedding of Miss Patsy Lynn Kozlovsky and Clyde Allen Bell, on Friday, June 9 at 7:30 p.m.

An identical bouquet of the flowers was placed at the foot of the cross behind the altar and two large brass cathedral candle stands were at the steps.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Kozlovsky, 43 Oakwood Drive, Town and Country and Mr. Bell is the son of Mrs. G. H. Strong, 504 N. 5th, and the late C. C. Bell Sr.

E. C. McKenzie, minister of the church, officiated at the double ring ceremony with nuptial music provided by Ronnie Brothers, organist.

Wearing a white lace sheath gown in afternoon length, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bodice, featuring long pointed sleeves and a scoop neckline, was embellished with seed pearls and Swiss crystals. The belled over-skirt of Chantilly lace was caught at the waist by a flat bow. Her veil of white net was attached to a flat bow embellished with lace, seed pearls and crystals. She carried a white Bible crested with white cymbidium orchids with fleur d'amour in a cascade of feathered carnations.

Miss Pat Pounders, maid of honor, wore a pale green modified tent dress of sheer voile with long sleeves over a satin sheath, with self fabric bow headpiece, matching peau de soie shoes and white nylon gloves. She carried an arm bouquet of mint green glamellias, cascaded with ivy foliage. Flower girl, Dawn Zellers, wore a pale yellow frock with lace bodice. Her headdress was a velvet circlet with yellow rosebuds.

Darryl Bruce Martin attended Mr. Bell as best man and ushers were Bobby Robinson, Freddy Kozlovsky, Donnie Temple and Vernon Houston. Desi Ray Koslovsky, brother of the bride, acted as ring bearer.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a coral organza sheath with self fabric coat, white gloves and bag and shoes and headdress of coral. Her corsage was of ivory cymbidium orchids. The groom's mother was wearing a mint green lace sheath with bone accessories and a rose cymbidium orchid.

Fellowship Hall of the church was scene of the reception which followed. A large urn arrangement of white gladioli, pale green chrysanthemums and daisies formed the centerpiece for the bride's table which was covered with white satin, overlaid with white net and garlands of ivy. The guest book table holding the bride's memory candle and book, was covered with a floor length white satin cloth, overlaid with white net. Miss Mary Margaret Marsala presided at the table.

Mrs. Calvin Folds served the tiered wedding cake and alternating at the punch bowl were Mrs. Tommy Barker and Miss Carolyn Fisher. Tea girls were Miss Suzanne May and Miss Tesa Snively and presenting rice bags to the guests was Miss Cindy Williams.

For going away the bride donned a misty blue silk shantung ensemble with white accessories. The couple will be at home at 1609 Cole Ave. Both were graduated from Neville high school. The bride attended Northeast where Mr. Bell is presently a student. She is a member of National Collegiate Association for Secretaries and he is a member of Delta Sigma fraternity.

Goldie Lay Is Bride Of Grady Snider

MRS. GRADY NAUGHF SNIDER

Vows uniting in marriage Miss Goldie Marie Lay, Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, Monroe, and Grady Naughf Snider, Shreveport, were solemnized Sunday, June 4 at 3 p.m. in Elizabeth Baptist Church at Elizabeth. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lay and parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Snider of Shreveport.

Rev. William E. Hines performed the double ring vows in a candlelight setting with baskets of gladioli and chrysanthemums and fern balls decorating the altar.

Mrs. William E. Hines of Elizabeth was organist and soloists were Mr. and Mrs. Jim Keith of Fort Worth, Texas.

Wade B. East, superintendent of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, gave the bride in marriage. Her gown of silk organza and Chantilly lace was fashioned on sheath lines with a detachable chapel train. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline and elbow sleeves, embellished with appliques of lace and seed pearls, which were repeated at the hemline and on the train. A crown of pearls held her veil of illusion and she carried a white orchid surrounded by small white flowers.

Mrs. Paula Lay Keith attended her sister as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Janice Lynn Lay, also a sister of the bride and Miss Joanne Autrey. They wore floor length gowns of Nile green styled with belled sleeves and A-line skirts. Three self fabric roses defined the empire waistline with matching streamers.

Serving as best man for his brother was Cecil E. Snider of Shreveport and groomsmen were Jack Snider, Fort Worth, also his brother. Ushers were Jack Merritt, Shreveport; Ray Ford of Epps and Ronnie Laughlin of Pineville.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the social hall of the church. Mrs. Ronnie Laughlin presided at the guest book at a table covered with Nile green lace and decorated by a single candle. The bride's table from which cake and punch were served, was centered with an arrangement of yellow gladioli.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to South Texas, the bride was wearing a two piece ensemble composing a sleeveless white A-line dress with a beige flowered coat. The couple will be at home in College Marriage Apts., Pineville for one year before moving to Fort Worth, Texas to enroll at Southern. The bride was graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and will graduate in January 1968 from Louisiana College with a B.A. in business education. Mr. Snider graduated from Fair Park high school in Shreveport and will graduate next May from Louisiana College.

Charles Masur of Monroe, will serve as his brother's best man. Ushers will be Jesse Lipcon and Ira Davidoff, both of Staten Island, N. Y. and Ronald Marks of Monroe.

SCORE RIND

If you want to remove sections of rind, one at a time, from citrus fruit, use a small sharp knife to score the fruit. After scoring, you should be able to peel off each section. Rind removed this way may be cut into even strips for use in candying the citrus peel.

Dunn-McGowen Vows Read In Yellow, White Setting

A theme of bridal white and yellow was carried out in the background setting and dresses of the bridal attendants for the wedding Tuesday, June 6 of Miss Dorothy Mae McGowen of West Monroe and Rev. Hugh Garland Dunn Jr., Mangham, in Southside Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Jefferson McGowen, 914 Cypress, West Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Garland Dunn of Minden.

Rev. Lea Joyner and Rev. Fred Wall officiated at the double ring ceremony against a background of wrought iron branched candelabra entwined with magnolia foliage and holding tall yellow tapers. Fan arrangements of yellow gladioli were used on each side of the altar which was centered with an arrangement of all white gladioli and a prie dieu.

A prenuptial concert was rendered by Mrs. Elaine Chapman, organist; Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, at the cello, and Miss Letha Thompson, flutist. Mrs. Bertie Hibbard was soloist.

James Watson McGowen gave his sister in marriage. She wore a full length gown of white peau de soie with long tapered sleeves and chapel train. White lace medallions, etched with white seed pearls were used around the neck, down front and outlined the train. A peau de soie wedding ring with front bow held her waist length veil which was also appliqued with the lace medallions. She carried a crescent bouquet of a yellow throated white orchid with stephanotis and white satin streamers.

Mrs. J. B. Dumas, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a full length pastel yellow gown with bell shaped lace sleeves. Her headpiece was a ring of peau de soie with a lace shoulder length veil and she carried a crescent bouquet of yellow pompons with matching streamers. Bridesmaids, dressed identically to the honor attendant, were Miss Rilla Peske and Miss Deloris Del Rio.

Serving his brother as best man was Jerry Dunn and groomsmen were Rev. Sammy Hargrove and Rev. Bobby Burgess. Ushers were Donald Aulds, Marion Cash, Larry Dobson and Johnny Watkins. Shelby Aulds III was ring bearer.

Mrs. McGowen chose for the occasion a beige bonded lace dress with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother wore a green silk dress with matching lace trim, and green accessories. Her corsage was also of yellow roses.

A reception followed in the church reception hall where the guest book was presided over by Mrs. Mabel Dowdy. Draped with a floor length white satin cover, garlanded with string smilax and yellow bows, the bride's table held a central arrangement of white stock and yellow chrysanthemums with yellow tapers in silver candelabra. The guest book table, similarly covered, held a memory candle, encircled with greenery.

When the couple departed on a trip to Washington D. C., the bride was wearing a brown and white jersey knit ensemble with white accessories and a white orchid. They will make their home in Mangham where Rev. Dunn is pastor of Mangham Methodist Church.

Rev. William E. Hines performed the double ring vows in a candlelight setting with baskets of gladioli and chrysanthemums and fern balls decorating the altar.

Mrs. William E. Hines of Elizabeth was organist and soloists were Mr. and Mrs. Jim Keith of Fort Worth, Texas.

Wade B. East, superintendent of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, gave the bride in marriage. Her gown of silk organza and Chantilly lace was fashioned on sheath lines with a detachable chapel train. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline and elbow sleeves, embellished with appliques of lace and seed pearls, which were repeated at the hemline and on the train. A crown of pearls held her veil of illusion and she carried a white orchid surrounded by small white flowers.

Mrs. Paula Lay Keith attended her sister as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss Janice Lynn Lay, also a sister of the bride and Miss Joanne Autrey. They wore floor length gowns of Nile green styled with belled sleeves and A-line skirts. Three self fabric roses defined the empire waistline with matching streamers.

Serving as best man for his brother was Cecil E. Snider of Shreveport and groomsmen were Jack Snider, Fort Worth, also his brother. Ushers were Jack Merritt, Shreveport; Ray Ford of Epps and Ronnie Laughlin of Pineville.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the social hall of the church. Mrs. Ronnie Laughlin presided at the guest book at a table covered with Nile green lace and decorated by a single candle. The bride's table from which cake and punch were served, was centered with an arrangement of yellow gladioli.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to South Texas, the bride was wearing a two piece ensemble composing a sleeveless white A-line dress with a beige flowered coat. The couple will be at home in College Marriage Apts., Pineville for one year before moving to Fort Worth, Texas to enroll at Southern. The bride was graduated from Ouachita Parish high school and will graduate in January 1968 from Louisiana College with a B.A. in business education. Mr. Snider graduated from Fair Park high school in Shreveport and will graduate next May from Louisiana College.

MRS. HUGH GARLAND DUNN JR.

Dunn-McGowen Vows Read In Yellow, White Setting

A theme of bridal white and yellow was carried out in the background setting and dresses of the bridal attendants for the wedding Tuesday, June 6 of Miss Dorothy Mae McGowen of West Monroe and Rev. Hugh Garland Dunn Jr., Mangham, in Southside Methodist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Jefferson McGowen, 914 Cypress, West Monroe and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Garland Dunn of Minden.

Rev. Lea Joyner and Rev. Fred Wall officiated at the double ring ceremony against a background of wrought iron branched candelabra entwined with magnolia foliage and holding tall yellow tapers. Fan arrangements of yellow gladioli were used on each side of the altar which was centered with an arrangement of all white gladioli and a prie dieu.

A prenuptial concert was rendered by Mrs. Elaine Chapman, organist; Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, at the cello, and Miss Letha Thompson, flutist. Mrs. Bertie Hibbard was soloist.

James Watson McGowen gave his sister in marriage. She wore a full length gown of white peau de soie with long tapered sleeves and chapel train. White lace medallions, etched with white seed pearls were used around the neck, down front and outlined the train. A peau de soie wedding ring with front bow held her waist length veil which was also appliqued with the lace medallions. She carried a crescent bouquet of a yellow throated white orchid with stephanotis and white satin streamers.

Mrs. J. B. Dumas, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a full length pastel yellow gown with bell shaped lace sleeves. Her headpiece was a ring of peau de soie with a lace shoulder length veil and she carried a crescent bouquet of yellow pompons with matching streamers. Bridesmaids, dressed identically to the honor attendant, were Miss Rilla Peske and Miss Deloris Del Rio.

Serving his brother as best man was Jerry Dunn and groomsmen were Rev. Sammy Hargrove and Rev. Bobby Burgess. Ushers were Donald Aulds, Marion Cash, Larry Dobson and Johnny Watkins. Shelby Aulds III was ring bearer.

Mrs. McGowen chose for the occasion a beige bonded lace dress with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother wore a green silk dress with matching lace trim, and green accessories. Her corsage was also of yellow roses.

A reception followed in the church reception hall where the guest book was presided over by Mrs. Mabel Dowdy. Draped with a floor length white satin cover, garlanded with string smilax and yellow bows, the bride's table held a central arrangement of white stock and yellow chrysanthemums with yellow tapers in silver candelabra. The guest book table, similarly covered, held a memory candle, encircled with greenery.

When the couple departed on a trip to Washington D. C., the bride was wearing a brown and white jersey knit ensemble with white accessories and a white orchid. They will make their home in Mangham where Rev. Dunn is pastor of Mangham Methodist Church.

MISS KATHERINE ANN MARTIN

The Rev. and Mrs. James Eugene Marshall, New Orleans, are announcing the engagement of her daughter, Miss Katherine Ann Martin, formerly of Monroe to Robert Adam Hebert HI, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adam Hebert Jr., also of New Orleans. Miss Martin is also the daughter of the late Floyd Leon Martin of Monroe.

The engagement was revealed locally at an announcement tea held Friday, June 9 in the home of Mrs. Fletcher Ashcraft, 1510 Island Drive, aunt of the bride - elect. Hostesses with Mrs. Ashcraft for the event were Mrs. F. Lestar Martin, Mrs. J. Howard Carroll, Mrs. Charles M. Womack, all of this city and Mrs. Ernest L. Edmonds, Jonesboro, also an aunt of the bride - elect.

Miss Martin, who received with her mother and Mrs. Ashcraft, wore for her party a black and white checked voile A - line dress, complemented by a corsage of white cymbidium orchids. Mrs. Marshall chose a white linen model with blue trim, and an orchid corsage. All the hostesses wore yellow cymbidium orchids with their summer dresses, as they assisted in receiving the guests who called during the appointed hours of 4 until 6 p.m.

White tapers burned in silver candle holders on the mantel which was centered with an arrangement of white stock, yellow gladioli, iris and daisies. Focal point in the living room was a mass of yellow daisies. Further carrying out the yellow and white decor for the party was the centerpiece for the tea table which combined white stock, yellow roses and Fuji chrysanthemums, and white candles.

Alternating in pouring during the afternoon were Mrs. E. L. Mobley, Jonesboro; Mrs. G. Aubrey Boyd, Mrs. Foster Wallace, Mrs. Jesse L. Adams, Mrs. Craig Morgan, of Monroe; Mrs. Jack Field and Mrs. Manny Walker, both of Alexandria. Assisting in the courtesies were Mrs. Henry Guerriero and Mrs. Henry Hinkle.

Tea girls were Miss Pam Burgess, Miss Elaine Hanna and Miss Lynn Haddad.

WEDDING PLANS

August 5 is the date chosen by Miss Martin and her fiance for their wedding which will be solemnized at 4 p.m. in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, New Orleans. Rev. Marshall of Church of the Holy Apostles, New Orleans, will perform the ceremony.

Mr. Hebert is descended from Mr. and Mrs. Leon March Burg of New Orleans and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Adam Hebert Sr., Thibodaux. He was graduated from East Jefferson high school and attended Nicholls State College. Following their marriage the couple will reside in Thibodaux, where both will continue studies at Nicholls.

Tent Dresses Get Nod Over Belted For Hot Weather

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

When designers get hold of what looks like a new trend, they sometimes pursue it with an enthusiasm that leaves out logic. Belts are coming back, did well in spring, high-fashion collection. So many designers are doing them for, of all seasons, summer.

This despite the fact that tent dresses and other loose silhouettes are selling like mad for the hot months.

Warm weather is obviously the wrong time to bring in wrapped waistlines and close-fitting silhouettes, as the designers may find when they try to sell belted dresses to women who want only to be cool and comfortable.

Summer Travelers Need 'Action Hat'

The "pace-setters" have put the simple soft, stylish hat at the top-of-the-list for summer. Young and old alike are revelling in the fashion that catches the fancy of those who love to live the outdoor life.

From the shore of Miami to Porto Fino, millions of vacationers will be headlined with the casual, active look as they ride in autos, shop, spend time at the beaches, sit by pool side, golf, play tennis, cycle their way to remote places or just plain loaf.

Everyone will need and enjoy an "action hat" as a leisure companion.

Working Woman Not One To Sleep Late On Sundays

NEW YORK (AP) — Does a working woman who responds to the alarm clock five days a week ignore it on Sunday to catch up on her sleep?

Is the working mother likely to forsake church in order to find more time for household duties?

Is her day of rest a happy one in which she really does get some rest and enjoys the company of her family? Or is it just another frenzied day of getting her wardrobe, the children, and home life organized for a busy week?

These things have been assumed, but apparently they are incorrect, claims Elmo Roper who recently made an intensive survey of American family.

Of the non - working homemakers he talked to, an astonishing 35 per cent are out of bed on Sunday before 7 a.m. But 25 per cent of the employed wives are up, too.

Approximately 60 per cent of all breadwinner housewives rise by 8 a.m. — just a few less than among the ladies who remain at home throughout the week.

According to the polling, all but 16 per cent of the 1251 women interviewed are stirring around the house before 9 a.m. while 11 per cent of the non-employed are still in their beds after that hour.

Whether the women held outside jobs, or not, seems to make no difference at all in their children's or their own church attendance records.

Of the two groups of homemakers, more employed women say they are happy on Sundays.

MRS. JOSE' ALVARO SALINAS JR.

Salinas-Fussell Vows Read

Solemnized Saturday, June 10 at 4 p.m. in St. Joseph Catholic Church was the wedding of Miss Carolyn Ann Fussell and Jose' Alvaro Salinas Jr. She is the daughter of Mrs. Nerious O'Neal Fussell, 4318 Petain St., and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jose' Alvaro Salinas Sr., 1412 S. Second, all of Monroe.

Baskets of white gladioli and fern decorated the altar where The Rev. Father William Allen performed the double ring vows. Miss Mary Claire Hanson was organist and Mrs. Georgia Filhiol, soloist.

The bride was escorted by her brother, William P. Fussell of Houma, who gave her in marriage. Her floor length gown of white peau de soie featured a fitted bodice with lace sleeves and appliques of lace flowers studded with seed pearls encircling the neck and bottom of the skirt. A chapel train was attached to the back waist by a large bow. Her shoulder veil was held in place by a cluster of hand rolled roses and she carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations centered with a white orchid.

Attired in floor length gowns of blue peau de soie with appliques of lace flowers bordering the hemline, were the bride's attendants, Mrs. George Moore, matron of honor and Mrs. Shirley Gonzales, Monroe; Miss Bonnie Ferrington of Jigger and Miss Delores Hernandez, of this city, as bridesmaids. Short veils were attached to their wedding ring hats of blue peau de soie, topped with fabric bows. Their cascade bouquets were of white Marguerite daisies.

Misses Sandra Hernandez and Rhonda Hernandez, cousins of the groom, were flower girls and wore pink floor length dresses with matching tulle veils secured by wedding ring hats.

Murray Salinas, brother of the groom, was best man and groomsmen - ushers were Felix Hernandez, Joe Gonzales III, John Paul Takewell, Mike Hernandez, West Monroe and Carey T. Fussell, Carswell Air Force Base, Fort Worth, Texas. Ring bearer was Boyd Fussell, nephew of the bride.

At the reception which followed in St. Joseph Hall, Mrs. Fussell, mother of the bride, received guests wearing a navy blue double knit dress with white accessories and a purple orchid. The groom's mother was attired in a pale blue crepe dress with white accessories and a purple orchid.

Centerpiece for the bride's table covered with a white lace cloth over blue, was of white pompons and carnations. The guest book table was covered with a linen cloth and held a memory candle.

The couple will be at home upon return from a wedding trip at 601 Lazarres, West Monroe. For travel the bride wore a pink double knit suit with pink hat and white lizard accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. She attended Northeast and Mr. Salinas attended Pontifical College Josephinum, Washington, Ohio. Both are now employed in Monroe.

MRS. HORACE F. STEGALL

Couple Wed In Lake Charles Saturday Plan Home Here

A double ring ceremony at University Methodist Church in Lake Charles on Saturday, June 10 united in marriage Miss Marie Carol Boese and Horace F. Stegall. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Sam Boese of Lake Charles and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd B. Stegall of Delhi.

The Revs. Roy Stegall and Merlin Merrill officiated at the 3 p.m. ceremony following organ selections by David Ellender and songs by Mrs. Richard Boese, soloist.

Wearing a gown of white silk faille fashioned on empire lines with Venise lace trim, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her fingertip veil of illusion was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses centered with a white orchid.

Mrs. Jack Robinson Jr., served as matron of honor and Miss Janice Johnson was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Carey Winters, of Monroe and Miss Dianne Britt, Minden. Flower girl was Holly McCall and candlelighters were Miss Sandra Johnson, Shreveport and Lorna Stegall, Clayton.

Kermit Burnside of Monroe, served Mr. Stegall as best man and groomsmen were Kenneth Stegall, Clayton; Hank Boese and Jack D. Robinson Jr., West Lake. Ushers were Thomas F. Johnson, Shreveport; Richard Boese and James B. Boese and Jimmy Stegall of Clayton acted as ring bearer.

Upon return from a wedding trip to Hot Springs, Ark., the couple will be at home at 506 Gulpha Drive, West Monroe. The bride was graduated from Louisiana Tech in home economics. Mr. Stegall graduated from Northeast Louisiana State College in Monroe where he is working on his masters degree in biology.

Double Ring Vows Unite Phyllis Peters, Mr. White

In a double ring ceremony Saturday, June 10 at College Place Baptist Church, Miss Phyllis Lyn Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Peters, 305 Ingleside Drive, Monroe, became the bride of Stephen Brian White, son of Mrs. Hazel White, 506 N. 4th, West Monroe and the late Mr. White.

Rev. T. Earl Ogg officiated at the exchange of vows before an arch of greenery, flanked by lighted tapers in branched candelabra and bouquets of white bridal flowers.

Mrs. C. L. Dillingham rendered an organ prelude as guests were seated by the ushers Larry Holbert, Ricky Desindorf and Lynn Hattaway. She also accompanied the soloist, Miss Carolyn Womack.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown of traditional design executed in summer sheer with Chantilly lace. Styled on empire lines, appliqued lace panels highlighted with seed pearls were used profusely on the front and were repeated on the Watteau train. Hre tiered fingertip veil of illusion cascaded from petals of the sheer which were lavishly embellished with pearls. She carried a bouquet of white orchids.

Mrs. John P. Moore, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor and bridesmaids were Miss June Smith, Miss Carolyn Cox, Mrs. Bob Patterson, cousin of the bride. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Sherry Arnold. Their dresses were of modified empire design in camellia pink crepe, with tiny bows accenting the raised waist. Panels of Chantilly lace formed floor length Watteau trains. They carried bouquets of pink and white elegant carnations backed with white lace and showered with streamers.

Serving as best man was Henry Camp and groomsmen were John P. Moore, Travis Heard, James Filtenburger, and Michael Moore. David Moore acted as ring bearer.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Peters selected an ensemble of aqua shantung and lace, topped by a sleeveless coat of matching lace. Her accessories were matching shade and her corsage was an orchid. The groom's mother wore a green lace dress with matching overblouse, green lace hat and green accessories, with an orchid corsage.

For the reception following in the church parlor the bride's chosen colors of pink and white were carried out. Covered with a white lace cloth the reception table was centered with an arrangement of pink and white flowers, flanked by the white cake and pink punch. A memory candle and bride's book were on a separate lace covered table.

The couple will be at home in West Monroe for the summer, returning to Ruston in the fall where both will continue studies at Louisiana Tech. The bride is a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority and Mr. White's fraternity is Phi Mu Alpha.

For their wedding trip Mrs. White changed into a three piece linen ensemble with white accessories and an orchid from her bouquet. The jacket featured a mandarin collar and the Oriental motif was repeated in Schiffli embroidery on the blouse.

CAROL LESTHER MANHEIN

MARGARET ANN BATEMAN

Wedding Plans Announced For Carol Manhein, Jerry Crane

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Manhein, Shreveport, of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Carol Lesther Manhein to Jerry Keith Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Crane of Newellton.

A July 29 wedding is planned in the Women's Department Club at Shreveport, at 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. Howard Mundy of Tulsa, Okla., will attend the bride as matron of honor and chosen as bridesmaids are Miss Judy Jones, Metairie and Miss Susan Murov, Shreveport. Dale Crane of Monroe, will serve as his brother's best man and ushers will include Kirk Crane, Newellton, also his brother; David Melville, Bossier City and Jim Manhein, brother of the bride-elect.

Miss Manhein was graduated from Byrd high school, received her B.S. in speech from Louisiana State University and did graduate work at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio where she served as assistant freshman advisor. She is a member of Sigma Tau Delta sorority and at LSU was president of B'Nai B'rith Hillel.

A graduate of Newellton high school, Mr. Crane is presently attending Northeast Louisiana State College, Monroe, majoring in business administration.

First Presbyterian Church Scene Of King-Jones Vows

Miss Frances Kay Jones, daughter of James L. Jones Jr., 2306 Hawthorne St., and the late Dorothy Hodges Jones, became the bride of Timothy Towers King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hughey Hope King of Baton Rouge, Saturday, June 10 in First Presbyterian Church, Monroe.

Arrangements of white gladioli and greenery with tall candelabra holding white tapers formed a background for the 7 p.m. ceremony performed by Rev. G. Preston Brown. Appropriate music was rendered by the organist, Mrs. Helen Wooldridge, who also accompanied Davis Bingham as he sang.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride was wearing a traditional gown of silk organza and Alencon lace highlighted with seed pearls and crystals. The empire bodice of lace and pearls featured a low, round neckline and Kabuki sleeves, appliqued with reembroidered lace motifs. Encircling the slim skirt near the hemline were two wide bands of the lace and pearl motifs. A detachable train fell in folds to chapel length. Her veil of silk illusion drifted to the shoulders from a pearl and lace shaped rose. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Ann McElroy served as maid of honor and Mrs. Carl W. Statham as matron of honor. Other attendants were Miss Diane Alexander, Mrs. James H. Jones, Shalimar, Fla., bridesmaids; Miss Jill Hodges, cousin of the bride, junior bridesmaid and Miss Kelly Kepper, niece of the groom, flower girl.

They wore formal length dresses of Dior blue chiffon and lace designed on empire lines with short sleeves and low round necklines. The sheath skirts were accented at the waist with narrow satin bands ending in small back bows. Watteau panels of lace fell from the back necklines. Matching veiled hats and shoes completed their ensembles. Each attendant carried a single long stemmed pink rose and the flower girl carried a small basket of pink rosebuds.

Mr. King attended his son as best man and groomsmen were William H. King, brother of the groom, Baton Rouge; James H. Jones, Shalimar, Fla., brother of the bride; Mike Lee, Baton Rouge and Fred Jones, New Orleans. Serving as ushers were Mac Peek, Jimmy L. Kepper, Tom Rouse, all of Baton Rouge and Byron Stringer, Ruston. Ring bearer was Keith Kepper, Baton Rouge, nephew of the groom.

For the occasion Mrs. Jones, stepmother of the bride, wore a blue floor length gown with matching accessories, while the bride's grandmother wore an aqua blue lace model. The groom's mother chose a gown of lime green lace over matching crepe with accessories in lime.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church courtyard. Arrangements of roses were centered on the table with punch bowls at either end. A memory candle encircled with roses was displayed on the bride's book table, while a separate table held the tiered wedding cake in aqua and white, beside which was placed the bride's bouquet.

Miss Sandra Kaye Butler of Shreveport attended the bride's book. Alternating at the two silver punch bowls were Mrs. J. E. Dupuy Sr., Mrs. J. L. Norris, Mrs. William Hochstetler, all of Monroe and Mrs. Roy Smith of George West, Texas. Mrs. O. C. Roddey, Mrs. Davis Bingham, Mrs. R. W. Cretney and Mrs. Shelby Meek served the wedding cake and tea girls were Misses Sue and Ann Norris, Patricia Porter and Maribeth Downing.

For travel when the couple left on a wedding trip to Dallas the bride donned an aqua linen suit with bone accessories. They will be at home at 623 Pennsylvania Ave., in Minden where the bride will begin teaching school this fall while Mr. King continues his studies at Louisiana Tech. Mrs. King is a graduate of Neville high school and Louisiana Tech where she received her B.S. degree in education in May. A graduate of Broadmoor high school in Baton Rouge, Mr. King will complete his B.A. degree at Tech next Spring.

Laundry 'Line' Now In Gay Prints

At last, the ensemble principle has been applied to a group of laundry - time accessories which are coordinated as to both color and printed design.

Included are laundry bags, laundry cart liners, clothespin bags, 3 - bin sorters, and ironing board covers. Obviously, all of these items are just as machine-washable as the clothes which they are intended to help keep clean.

CAROL LESTHER MANHEIN

MARGARET ANN BATEMAN

Wedding Plans Announced For Carol Manhein, Jerry Crane

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Manhein, Shreveport, of the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Carol Lesther Manhein to Jerry Keith Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Crane of Newellton.

A July 29 wedding is planned in the Women's Department Club at Shreveport, at 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. Howard Mundy of Tulsa, Okla., will attend the bride as matron of honor and chosen as bridesmaids are Miss Judy Jones, Metairie and Miss Susan Murov, Shreveport. Dale Crane of Monroe, will serve as his brother's best man and ushers will include Kirk Crane, Newellton, also his brother; David Melville, Bossier City and Jim Manhein, brother of the bride-elect.

Miss Manhein was graduated from Byrd high school, received her B.S. in speech from Louisiana State University and did graduate work at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio where she served as assistant freshman advisor. She is a member of Sigma Tau Delta sorority and at LSU was president of B'Nai B'rith Hillel.

A graduate of Newellton high school, Mr. Crane is presently attending Northeast Louisiana State College, Monroe, majoring in business administration.

First Presbyterian Church Scene Of King-Jones Vows

Miss Frances Kay Jones, daughter of James L. Jones Jr., 2306 Hawthorne St., and the late Dorothy Hodges Jones, became the bride of Timothy Towers King, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hughey Hope King of Baton Rouge, Saturday, June 10 in First Presbyterian Church, Monroe.

Arrangements of white gladioli and greenery with tall candelabra holding white tapers formed a background for the 7 p.m. ceremony performed by Rev. G. Preston Brown. Appropriate music was rendered by the organist, Mrs. Helen Wooldridge, who also accompanied Davis Bingham as he sang.

Escorted by her father who gave her in marriage the bride was wearing a traditional gown of silk organza and Alencon lace highlighted with seed pearls and crystals. The empire bodice of lace and pearls featured a low, round neckline and Kabuki sleeves, appliqued with reembroidered lace motifs. Encircling the slim skirt near the hemline were two wide bands of the lace and pearl motifs. A detachable train fell in folds to chapel length. Her veil of silk illusion drifted to the shoulders from a pearl and lace shaped rose. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Ann McElroy served as maid of honor and Mrs. Carl W. Statham as matron of honor. Other attendants were Miss Diane Alexander, Mrs. James H. Jones, Shalimar, Fla., bridesmaids; Miss Jill Hodges, cousin of the bride, junior bridesmaid and Miss Kelly Kepper, niece of the groom, flower girl.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Mr. and Mrs. Sam L. Correro, 1504 Lexington Ave., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Linda Katherine Correro to Gerald Tyrone Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Douglas Turner of West Monroe. The wedding is planned for August 3 at 10 a. m. in Jesus the Good Shepherd Church, with the Rev. Father Edmund Moore officiating.

Home Vows Unite Wilhelmina Inabnet, Joseph T. Samuels

The wedding of Mrs. Wilhelmina M. Inabnet and Joseph Thomas Samuels of Pittsburgh, Pa., was solemnized Saturday, June 10 at the home of the bride, 2704 Oak Drive in Monroe.

Rev. George W. Harbuck performed the double ring vows at 10:30 a.m. with music provided by Mrs. Harvey W. Nelson, organist and Mrs. Estelle Schulze Sanders, soloist. . .

The ceremony was performed on the patio where an improvised altar was created by an arch garlanded with Southern smilax and white blossoms. At the top of the arch was a sunburst of white gladioli, white pompons and yellow chrysanthemums, Killians and yellow gladioli, with Jade foliage providing a background setting. Matching screens which enclosed the patio were also garlanded with smilax and placed at vantage points were blooming caladium and Spanish daggar plants in full bloom. A prie dieu was placed before the arch.

Mrs. John C. Morris Sr., of Rayville, serving as matron of honor, wore a pink voile dress and carried a nosegay of May Day roses with stephanotis blossoms, outlined in white.

Mr. Morris served as best man for Mr. Samuels.

Following the ceremony guests adjourned to the dining room for the reception where punch was served from a large silver bowl, placed opposite an arrangement of white stock, roses and Fujis in a footed silver compote. An arrangement of the same blossoms filled an epergne on the buffet, flanked by a pair of triple branched crystal candelabra holding white tapers.

The couple departed immediately for Pittsburgh from where they will travel to Canada for Expo '67, returning through the New England States to Monroe where they will be at home.

Gaines-Voss Vows Read In Minnesota

MRS. CHARLES MICHAEL GAINES

The wedding of Miss Alice Lillian Voss, St. James, Minn., to Charles Michael Gaines, Dearborn Heights, Mich., formerly of this area, was solemnized Saturday, June 10 in Calvary Episcopal Church at St. James with the Rev. Ernest Campbell officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Earl Voss of St. James are parents of the bride. Mr. Gaines is the son of Mrs. Charles R. Gaines of Olla and the late Mr. Gaines.

White gladioli, yellow chrysanthemums and greenery formed an altar setting for the exchange of vows following an organ prelude by Rev. Timothy Hallett.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a full length gown of white silk linen with accents of Venise lace at the fitted bodice and bateau neckline. The gown featured bell sleeves, A-line skirt and cathedral train falling from a self fabric bow at the back. Her illusion mantilla was also bordered with Venise lace. She carried a bouquet of white gardenias.

Mrs. Bruce Lodge Spencer Jr., Coronado, Calif., who attended her sister as matron of honor, was wearing a street length dress of yellow silk linen trimmed in Venise lace. Her bouquet was of yellow chrysanthemums.

Major Jimmy Harris of Washington, D. C., uncle of the groom, served as best man and ushers were Terry Burke of St. James and John Edmond Harris Jr. of Olla.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore a pink silk and linen sheath with matching accessories and a corsage of white gardenias. Mrs. Gaines, mother of the groom, wore a sleeveless silk Alaskine skimmer of Florentine gold, with A-shaped skirt and deep panel front. Her headpiece was a coif of gold leaves set over a caged veil and her corsage was also of gardenias.

A reception following the ceremony was held at Homewood, plantation home of the bride's parents, where appointments carried out the yellow and white theme of the wedding. Following a wedding trip through the Midwest the couple will be at home in Dearborn Heights, Michigan.

A graduate of Ashley Hall, Charleston, S. C., the bride attended DePauw University in Greencastle, Ind., and Exeter University, Exeter, Devon, England. She was graduated from the University of Minnesota.

Mr. Gaines attended The Citadel and was graduated from Northwestern State College in Natchitoches.

Donald Ray Ford Claims Linda Leigh As Bride Saturday

MRS. DONALD RAY FORD

Glen Oaks Baptist Church in Baton Rouge was scene of the ceremony Saturday, June 10 which united in marriage Miss Linda Diane Leigh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Roy Leigh and Donald Ray Ford, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Albert Ford of Epps.

Dr. Samuel C. Rushing and Rev. Willard Johnson performed the double ring vows at 3 p.m.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length sheath gown of peau de soie with reembroidered pearl seeded lace daisies, and featuring pleated bell sleeves of the lace. English silk illusion caught to a juliet cap of reembroidered lace daisies formed a dress length veil. She carried a white Bible, crested with a white orchid.

Miss Verona Leigh, sister of the bride, who served as maid of honor wore a mint green crepe sheath featuring a softly flared skirt. Her headpiece was a shell of matching illusion caught to a flat velvet bow. Bridesmaids, attired in identical costumes in soft blue were Miss Janet Anderson, Miss Bonnie Glover, Mrs. Grady N. Snider, Mrs. Raymond F. Winter and Miss Aimee Leigh, sister of the bride, as junior bridesmaid.

Serving as best man was Jerry A. Fletcher and groomsmen were Ronnie E. Laughlin, Gene Leigh, brother of the bride; Richard L. Beeman, Grady N. Snider and David Wayne Ford, nephew of the groom, junior groomsmen. Ushers were Gerald D. Williams, Robert Wade Brian, Jerry Cronan and Johnny Hoychick.

A reception followed in the church fellowship room where the bride's table was covered with a net cloth, accented by sequined wedding bells and orange blossoms.

A graduate of Glen Oaks high school, the bride is a senior at Louisiana College where she is a member of Delta Omicron, honorary music fraternity and Cadmians Social Club. Mr. Ford was graduated from Epps high school and graduated in May from Louisiana College where he was a member of Circle K and Cadmians Social Club. He is presently minister of music at First Baptist Church of Boyce, and will enter New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary in the fall.

MISS ELIZABETH ANN PURCELL

Former Residents Calendar Late July Wedding Date

Of interest to friends here is announcement made by Rev. and Mrs. Ray E. Prager, Montgomery, Alabama, formerly of Monroe, of the engagement of her daughter, Elizabeth Ann Purcell to Richard Lee McNeill. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. McNeil of Dubach, formerly of West Monroe. Miss Purcell is also the daughter of the late Bruce K. Purcell.

The wedding will be an event of July 22 at 4 p.m. in First Baptist Church of Jonesboro.

Miss Purcell is the granddaughter of Mrs. Mabel Gatlin, of Jonesboro and H. M. Gatlin, Magnolia, Ark., and of Mrs. R. C. Purcell of Plain Dealing and the late Mr. Purcell. She attended Louisiana State University and will graduate in June from Louisiana Tech with a B. A. degree in education. She is a member of Kappa Delta sorority.

The prospective bridegroom is the grandson of Mrs. W. D. McNeill of Taylor and the late Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Lent. Mr. McNeill attended Louisiana Tech and is now attending Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning, Ga., scheduled to receive his commission as a second lieutenant in the U. S. Army in July. His fraternity is Sigma Nu.

Scarbrock-Duncan Reception Held At Paragon Jade Room

A double ring ceremony at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, June 3 united in marriage Miss Carol Jean Duncan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Moses, Glenwood Drive and Rodney Scarbrock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Scarbrock, 212 Smith Street, all of West Monroe.

Vows were exchanged in Highland Baptist Church with Rev. Filer J. Seal officiating. Flanking the altar were baskets of white gladioli alternated by wrought iron candelabra holding white tapers.

Mr. Moses gave the bride in marriage. Her waltz length gown of white satin featured a basque bodice with long tapered sleeves and round neckline accented with lace appliques. The bell skirt featured a self bow at the waist and panel of lace at the front hemline. Her veil of imported illusion drifted from a jeweled crown. She carried a bouquet of white feathered carnations surrounding a white cymbidium orchid with streamers of pearls and white satin ribbon.

Miss Deborah Griffith, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a tent gown of multi-summer colors and carried a bouquet of white feathered carnations. Flower girl, Miss Sandra Moses, was dressed in a mint green organza and carried a basket of petals.

John Gerald Moses, brother of the bride, served as best man. Ushers were Don Scarbrock, brother of the groom and Don Royce Guyon, uncle of the bride. David Earle Moses, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Miss Linda Scarbrock, niece of the groom, and J. R. Moses, brother of the bride, were candlelighters. Mrs. Jake Taylor presented a program of organ music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Jerry Kirby.

Mrs. Moses chose for her daughter's wedding a white and green crepe dress with matching accessories. The groom's mother wore a light pink dress with lace accents. Both corsages were of white cymbidium orchids.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Jade Room at the Paragon Supper Club. The refreshment table, covered with an heirloom cutwork cloth, was centered with an epergne of white carnations. Presiding at the punch bowl was Mrs. Morris Bullock and serving the cake was Mrs. Don Scarbrock and Mrs. Don Royce Guyon. A memory candle graced the table which held the guest book, presided over by Mrs. John Moses.

After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in West Monroe. For travel the bride wore a mint green bonded crepe dress.

Primitive Prints Move To Beach

Primitive prints are big fashion this spring. Use an exotic print for a long, flowing caftan, and you have a winner as a beach cover - up or at - home gown.

Textile designers are emphasizing the bright, hot colors and native designs of Old and New World primitive tribes.

A fun way to make your caftan: fashion it from beach towels. Just sew up the sides, an opening for the neck on top.

Constant Use Helps Silver Retain Lustre

Silversmiths point out that the best silver — whether sterling, silverplate or holloware, should not be reserved for special occasions only. The more it is used, the more it gains in beauty and value. Constant use is, in fact, the most effective way of retaining and enhancing the soft lustre which makes silver among the most treasured of gifts.

The modern woman who lavishes upon her family the same service which past generations confined only to guests is practical as well as wise. She can experiment with imaginative table settings and create original ideas, secure in the knowledge that enjoyment increases the attractiveness without reducing the life of silver.

Other hints for the proper care of fine silver offered by silversmiths are:

1 - Never allow rubber bands or any rubberized fabric to remain in contact with silver flatware or holloware. Rubber's high sulphur content will cause rapid tarnishing.

2 - If you must pack your silver, use the specially treated tissue paper designed for the purpose — never facial tissue.

3 - Never use silver vessels for popcorn or salt, which can also produce a chemical reaction harmful to silver.

Pant Suit Shortens To 'Divided Skirt'

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

The pants suit now appears with short pants, and is supplemented by culotte dresses, sometimes called "divided skirts" to reassure the timid. These are supposedly suitable for ordinary day wear.

The number of pants costumes and suits makes plain that designers have faith in them as salable to more than the very young. All the fashion needs is the first secretary to wear them to an office and get thrown out by her boss and make headlines. Pants are blooming like the flowers for spring. Knickers, shorts, culottes, slacks, bell bottoms and the flared pajamas, pants come in every length and variety.

Confident Living Daily Formula

You Achieve If You Believe

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Nobody ever achieved anything .who did not consistently build himself up in his thoughts, telling himself until he believed it as fact that by his own abilities he could accomplish his objectives and goals. Never build a case against yourself in your own mind because the mind tends to develop the thought-image that it holds. Build a case for yourself and it has a big chance of coming to pass as imaged.

PEALE

It also helps to have someone else remind you of your abilities. A famous track coach who has a high percentage of successful athletes says the essence of his training plan is to build his boys up — to make them realize they can do it. He consistently tells them that they have what it takes and that he believes in them. They are compelled to believe in themselves because he firmly belives in them. And, of course, belief in a person always brings out every great element there.

VACATION EXPERIENCE

President Calvin Coolidge spent a summer vacation in the Black Hills. He always attended Sunday services and a Secret Service man was sent out ahead to find a church for the President. Early on a Sunday morning he located a small church where a young man, whom he took to be the janitor, was dusting pews and setting hymn books in the place.

"Good marning," he said, "I would like to speak to the minister."

"I am the minister," the young man answered.

"Do you usually have a large congregation?" the Secret Service man asked.

"Not very big, just a few farmers. You see I'm only a student preacher here for the summer. Don't know much about preaching." he smiled, "but if you would like to stay for services I'll do the best I can. This is my first Sunday."

"I'll be here all right," the other replied. "You see, I've come to tell you that President Coolidge and his official party will worship with you this morning."

The young man's face turned alternately red and white. His teeth all but chattered. "Oh, no, President Coolidge couldn't be coming to this church! I can't do it" he gasped. He grew white around the gills. "Don't have him come here. I can't preach for a President and all those important people."

The Secret Service man put his arm on the young man's shoulders. "Listen, son," he said, "this President of the United States is a plain and simple man. Anyway, he may not hear anything you say for when he goes to church all he does is think about his mother. You just get up there in the pulpit and give it all you've got. You can do it. And I'll be pulling for you."

PREPARATION TIME

The young pastor looked at his watch. "I've got two hours," he said and he rushed to his room. He had prepared in advance seven sermons to cover the seven Sundays he would be preaching in this little church, He picked the best points out of the seven and put these together to make one sermon.

Fearfully and tremblingly he delivered his sermon. Afterward the Secret Service man patted him on the shoulder and said, "Boy, I knew you could do it! You know what the President told me to tell you? That it was the best sermon he has heard in a long while, and since he is going to be here for six weeks he will be in this church every Sunday to hear you." (It would appear the young minister had to do some heavy revising on those dismembered sermons!)

According to reports this young man rose to great preaching heights that summer—because he had a President and a Secret Service man who built him up and told him he could do it. They believed in him; and that stimulated him to belief in himself.

NEED AND DELIVERY

Certainly he would never forget that a President of the United States thought his first sermon was one of the best. If ever again the young minister was haunted by feelings of inadequacy, which attack each of us at times in life, he could remind himself that, when you have to come through, you can do it.

So why not do it always? Think achievement thoughts and make them a part of yourself. Believe in them, and in yourself, through dark days and good. When you face a tough situation make a mental inventory of your qualifications and abilities. Sum these up and affirm them. Remember that the good Lord is on your side and gives you strength equal to your responsibilities.

Ecumenical Proposal Finds Small Following

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Episcopal Bishop C. Kilmer Myers of San Francisco was speaking for a rather small minority when he called upon Anglicans and Protestants to acknowledge the Pope as "the holy father in God of the universal church."

Bishop Myers made his startling ecumenical proposal last Sunday in a sermon preached before an overflow congregation in San Francisco's Grace Cathedral. In a troubled and war-torn world, he said, Christians urgently need one leader "who can speak and witness to the whole human race" as "chief pastor of the Christian family."

The sermon made newspaper headlines across the country. But that's about as far as it's likely to go, at least for the present.

It is generally agreed among those closest to the ecumenical movement—Catholics as well as Protestants—that the time is not yet here, nor even distantly in sight, when the papacy can become a rallying point for Christian unity.

UNITY BLOCKED

On the contrary, nearly all ecumenists, on both sides, share the view expressed by Pope Paul VI in a talk before the Secretariat of Christian Unity in Rome last month. The Pope said, ruefully, that the papacy today is clearly "the gravest obstacle in the path of ecuemism."

Some Protestants, and many Anglican and Eastern Orthodox Christians, have indicated in unity discussions their willingness to accord the Pope a primacy of honor" in recognition of the historic importance of the Roman See. But they have made clear that accepting the bishop of Rome as "first among equals" does not imply a readiness to acknowledge his authoritative jurisdiction over the whole church.

BIGGEST DIFFERENCE

Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, Presbyterian theologian who served as a Protestant observer at the Vatican Council, said recently that "the fundamental hard-core problem" is the Catholic claim that the Pope is infallible on matters of faith and morals.

"When all the other differencies between us have been overcome, this is the one that will remain longest to plague us," said Dr. Brown.

Protestants have not wavered for 450 years in their rejection of papal infallibility. Martin Luther called it "a wicked, base invention for which the papists cannot adduce a tittle of evidence in support."

Few Protestants today, other than extremely "high church" Episcopalians such as Bishop Myers, would hesitate to say "amen" to Luther's view.

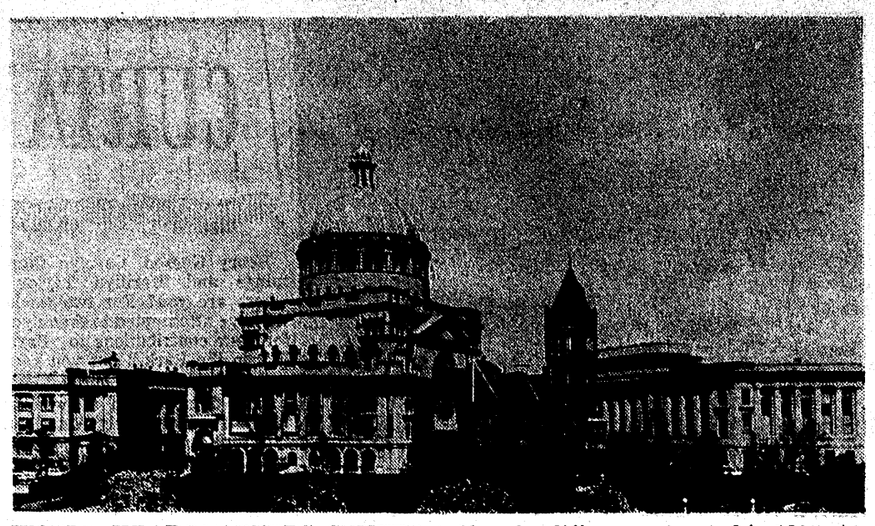
A prominent Lutheran theologian, Dr. Carl E. Braaten of the University of Chicago, has emphasized that certain conditions would have to be attached to any Protestant reapproachment with the Pope.

OTHER VIEWS

"There is one fundamental condition," he told UPI in commenting on Bishop Myers' sermon. "The structure of the papacy must be revised to make it acceptable to all Christians. This could be done, I believe, if ways could be found to transcend or supersede the doctrine of papal infallibility and the claim that the primacy of the Pope rests on divine institution rather than historical developments."

The Catholic Church has made it crystal clear, however, that it has no intention of abandoning either of these claims. The Vatican Council, while acting to decentralize the government of the church by giving greater powers to bishops, emphatically re-affirmed both the supremacy and infallibility of the Pope.

And Pope Paul, in acknowledging last month that the papacy is the chief stumbling block to unity, hastened to add that no Pope can surrender the claims "which come from the function that Christ assigned to us in the church, and which our tradition has sanctioned with such authority."



WORLD HEADQUARTERS CENTER of the Christian Science Church is located in Boston, Mass., at the First Church of Christ, Scientist. The church edifice, domed building in center, known as the Mother Church Extension was built in 1906, its auditorium seats 4,000. Against it is the original Mother Church edifice, constructed in 1895. At the right of the original church is located the Christian Science Publishing House, which soon will be joined to a block - long Colonnade Building. At left is the church's present Administration Building, which will be demolished.

RABBI HENRY SHWARTZ

RABBI ALBERT MICHELS

Installation Of Rabbi Is Held Here

Rabbi Albert A. Michels of Hot Springs, Ark., Congregation House of Israel, participated in the services to formally install Rabbi Henry Leon Shwartz as spiritual leader of the Jewish community here recently.

Rabbi Michels and Rabbi Shwartz had both been students of the late Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in New York City.

President of the congregation, Dr. N. B. Album, welcomed Rabbi Michels and guests of the congregation and introduced Rabbi Michels as the installing rabbi. The theme of Rabbi Michels address and charge in installing Rabbi Swartz was "Judism's Long Journey: Should it End in The Atomic Era?"

The congregation held the traditional Sabbath reception (Oneg Shabat) honoring the two rabbis and their wives, following the service.

DR. C. L. CULPEPPER

Missionary Will Speak At Parkview

Dr. Charles Culpepper, of San Antonio, Tex., missionary emeritus to China, will be pulpit guest at Parkview Baptist Church, of Monroe, today, and will lead in a special mission study at the church Monday night, according to Rev. James R. Edwards, pastor.

He is scheduled to give his personal testimony at the 10:20 a.m. worship service and will also deliver the evening message at the 7:30 service. Monday 7 p.m., he will lead a study entitled "The Holy Spirit and Missions." The study, to which all church members are invited, is being sponsored by the Woman's Missionary Union and Men of the Church organizations.

Appointed by the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board as a missionary in 1923, Dr. Culpepper did field evangelism work and taught in a seminary in North China. He was in China during the so-called "Shantung Revival." He was interned by the Japanese during World War two and was repatriated in 1942.

RETURNED TO CHINA

In 1945 he returned to China and started another seminary in Shanghai, where he taught until 1949, when the Communists took over and stopped mission work. The next year Dr. Culpepper went to Hong Kong, where he served for two years. He moved from there to Formosa, where he helped start another seminary and remained from 1952 until his retirement in 1965. Since then he has been active in promoting missions, filling speaking engagements throughout the nation.

Parkview Baptist Church is located at Forsythe Ave. and N. 10th St.

Christian Scientists Seek Greater Outreach

Christian Scientists gathered from around the world for the Church's annual meeting last week in Boston, Mass., heard a call for sharply expanded outreach to the world and the community.

"Christ Jesus showed his deep involvement with the world of his day," The Christian Science Board of Directors reminded the audience.

Erwin D. Canham, editor in chief of The Christian Science Monitor and retiring president of the denomination, described a "period of unprecedented ferment in the world's religious thought." Each individual has a "mission in the marketplace of human thought and experience," he emphasized. "For Christian Scientists, need and opportunity have never met more challengingly.

"We must not be left by the wayside, preoccupied with ourselves, cloistered behind our own church walls. Our mission is in the world," Canham said. "We must bring to hungering, yearning humanity the word and proof of spiritual food and healing. We must reach out as never before."

NAMED PRESIDENT

Mrs. Beatrice Thayer Pittman, who was elected president for the coming year, described Christian Scientists as "interested in good government, in righteous laws, in bettering the lot of all men. We are devoted to an adequate opportunity for everyone.

"When an opportunity comes to serve in civic, national, or international organizations and we see that we have something constructive to give, one should not hesitate to do so."

About eight thousand members, many from distant parts of the world, filled the auditorium of The Mother Church Extension and the adjoining original church edifice. Closed circuit television carried the meeting to an overflow audience seated in a nearby theater.

A modest ground breaking ceremony took place during the morning, of the first day of the meeting, as the first spadeful of earth was turned for the Church's new Administration Building. The 26 - story structure will be the first of several buildings in the Church's new $15 million Center in the Back Bay area of Boston.

The message of the Board of Directors was delivered by Thomas E. Hurley, chairman. "Today, there is every indication that we are embarking upon a new era," he told the members. "Progress has been going on down the years resulting in continuous expansion of the church organization."

ACTIVITIES SPREAD

He spoke of the "temporary" move of administrative offices over thirty - five years ago. "Church activities have not only filled this building to the bursting point, but they have spread to quarters in seven other buildings. . .As plans for a new building developed," he said, "an opportunity to make a significant contribution to the community became apparent."

Hurley quoted the words of Mary Baker Eddy, who discovered and founded Christian Science, as supplying the key to success in this forward step ("Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," p. 454):

MRS. BEATRICE THAYER PITTMAN

"Love for God and man is the true incentive in both healing and teaching. Love inspires, illumines, designates, and leads the way. Right motives give opinions to thought, and strength and freedom to speech and action."

Reports to the meeting included notice of a 10 per cent increase in circulation of the Church's international daily newspaper, The Christian Science Monitor; expansion of radio broadcasting in Africa and new publications in major African languages, Yoruba and Zulu; the commissioning of five additional Christian Scientists as chaplains in the United States Army, Navy, and Air Force; and extensive relief work in several countries, including Italy, Wales, Tasmania, Turkey and the United States.

KERRY VON SMITH

Kerry Smith In Texas For Revival Work

A 15-year-old West Monroyan, Kerry Von Smith, son of the Rev. and Mrs. B. O. Smith, 744 Smith St., West Monroe, left last week for Texas to take part in a series of revival services at Assembly of God churches.

The evangelist, whose father is pastor of Seigle Assembly of God Church in West Monroe, started his work in the ministry field a year ago. He has been preaching in this area in recent months.

PREACHING, MUSIC

In addition to preaching, he is a talented musician, and can play accordian, piano, guitar and drums. He uses music in his ministerial work, and this will be one of his specialties in the Texas revivals.

His evangelistic work in Texas will be directed at teenagers as well as adults, he said.

He left Friday for a two-week engagement at Boston, Tex., from there he will go to Linden, Tex. for an eight-day revival, then to New Boston, Tex. for about eight days.

He will take out time from his duties in Texas to make a speaking appearance one morning at the Assemblies of God State Youth Camp at Dry Creek, La. He then will return to Texas and complete his revival work there around July 17.

In August he will resume preaching engagements in this area.

A sophmore at West Monroe High School, he plans eventually to enter the full-time ministry.

New Ways To Transmit Christian Faith Sought

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) —Church drama experts are looking for fresh ways of conveying the Christian faith, and they're going to use "Expo '67" as a hunting ground.

"We've been too much bound in the church to writing and speaking, to the loss of other means," said the Rev. Dr. Blaine J. Fister, a National Council of Churches executive who heads the project.

Its stated aim is to gauge "the existing cultural and social situations of our times" as a stimulus to more vivid means of furthering "the life of the church."

Besides using the Montreal fair as a catalyst for ideas, the church specialists themselves will try some improvised, experimental modes of communication in reaction to it—without speech or alphabet.

SEEK BREAK-THROUGHS

"We're hoping for some break-throughs that will help us reflect more sensitively the wonder and reality of the world, and new insights into its truths," Dr. Fister said.

The interdenominational Conference on Religion, the Performing Arts and Technological Media is being sponsored next Aug. 26-Sept. 2 by the Project on Drama of the National Council's Division of Christian Education.

It is expected to draw about 250 specialists on stage, drama, television and films from various Protestant denominational agencies, as well as educators from church institutions.

"This is the first time that we've made the content of our program the real world, as portrayed there at Montreal," Dr. Fister said, noting that annual church media workshops usually are held at some isolated conference center.

"We're hoping to get double mileage out of it. It will be a working conference for serious professionals, primarily as a learning experience. But it will be fun, too—no doubt about it."

Costs of the conference, as in the past, are met chiefly through fees paid by denominational participants—$135 each, which includes a seven-day ticket to the Expo '67 grounds. The total budget for the event including accommodations for those attending, is estimated at $35,000 most of which is expected to be covered by the fees.

A National Council spokesman said the interchurch cooperative agency will spend little on the conference except expenses of about four staff experts who will attend.

Dormitory accommodations have been obtained at McGill University, where the deliberations, technique experimentation and critiques will be held.

The conference comes at a time when churches are increasingly attempting novel ways of preaching the Gospel—through art, theater, folk and jazz music, films and liturgical variations.

As Dr. Fister foresees it, extemporized impressions may be put in pantomine, in quick clay or paper sculpture, in "scratch film"—configurations etched on movie film—Dance-like bodily movements, or art sketches.

Objectives will include developing a "keener perception of today's world," a better understanding of "dramatic forms appropriate to different media in that world," and of new ways Christian concerns can be "legitimately translated into dramatic forms suitable for stage, film and television."

Several church authorities will be leaders and commentators on the proceedings, including the Rev. John M. Culkin a Roman Catholic Jesuit, of Fordham University; the Rev. Dr. Tom Driver, a Baptist theologian of Union Theological Seminary, and sometimes drama critique, and the Rev. Dr. B. David Napier, chaplain and teacher at Stanford University.

Dr. Fister, director of the National Council's Church and Public Education Department, said that the hope was to stimulate some genuine creativity in church communication arts.

Youth Day Observed At Highland

Highland Baptist Church, Arkansas Rd, West Monroe, today will honor its young people with "Youth Sunday" activities.

The young people, ages 13 to 24, will serve in positions of responsibility as teachers and officers of the church. Jimmy Works will be youth pastor. Kenneth Sullivan will serve as choir director, and Mel Shackelford and Jeffrey Thomas will head activities of the Sunday School and Training Union.

SPEAKER

Speaker for the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services will be the Rev. Freddy Wayne Cory, formerly of West Monroe, now filling a full-time pastorate at Marion.

Last Friday afternoon, the young people of the church and their leaders journeyed to Camp Davis near Quitman, for an evangelistic retreat. There they took part in recreational activities, planning for today's services, and a devotional session led by the Rev. Mr. Cory, before returning Saturday night.

Youth Sunday is an annual event sponsored by the Training Union Department.

My Answer

By BILLY GRAHAM

Even though I don't mean to use bad language, the words just seem to come out. How can I keep from swearing? H. B.

Bad words are the consequence of a bad heart. The Bible says: "For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries . . . thefts, false witness, blasphemies." (Lu. 15:19).

The mouth gives expression to what is in the heart: praise or profanity; reverence or irrevance. When the heart is changed, the speech habits will be changed also.

When Peter was out of touch with Christ, he reverted to the old speech habits. Before his accusers, he swore and denied Christ. But when on the day of Pentecost, he was filled with the Spirit, out of his mouth came praise. Jesus said to His disciples: "For I will give you a mouth . . . be acceptable unto your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist." (Luke 21:15).

Shakespeare once wrote, "Ill deeds are doubled with an evil word." We all should say with David: "Let the words of my mouth. . .be acceptable unto three . . . O Lord, my strength and my redeemer."

Guest Speakers Are Announced

The director of Evergreen Presbyterian Vocational School at Minden, the Rev. Ralyn Parkhill, will be guest speaker at the 11 a.m. service today at Memorial Presbyterian Church, N. 4th and Mill, West Monroe.

Guest speaker for the 7 p.m. service will be the Rev. D. L. O'Neal, Choudrant, executive secretary of Red River Presbytery.

Revival Series Scheduled Here

Eastside Baptist Church, 315 80th street, Monroe, will hold a revival starting today and continuing through Sunday, June 18.

Services will begin at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. with the Rev. W. A. LaBuff, of White Baptist Church, Ed Dorado, Ark., as guest pastor.

The Rev. M. L. Graham, pastor of Eastside Baptist, said the nursery will be open during the revival.

RALPH G. PARKS

Former West Monroe Resident To Church Post

Ralph G. Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Parks, Route 2, Farmerville, has accepted a call to El Dorado, Ill., First Baptist Church, where he will serve as minister of music and education.

He is a graduate of West Monroe High School, graduate of Southeastern Louisiana College, and attended New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

He served as minister of music and education at First Baptist Church of Ponchatoula, La., for four years, and was minister of music and education at Metarie, La. He is married to the former Peggy Joy Bayles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Bayles of West Monroe.

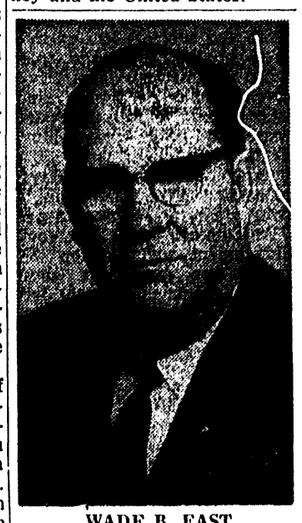
Area Churches Name Speakers

Greenacres Baptist Church, Bastrop, has named Wade B. East, superintendent of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home here, as guest speaker in all worship services today.

Cheniere Baptist Church, West Monroe, has announced that Clarence Powell, director of cottage life at the Children's Home, will be pulpit guest today.

HEAD IN STONE

CHICHESTER, England (AP) — A stone head of Queen Elizabeth II has been hoisted into position atop the lantern of Chichester Bell Tower, alongside the cathedral. Her portrait in stone joins those of Kings Richard II, Henry IV and Henry V, during whose reigns in the 14th and 15th centuries the tower was built.



WADE B. EAST

Wade East Named To Committee

The superintendent of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe, Wade B. East, has been named to a three-year term on the planning committee for the Workshop for Personnel of Homes for Children at the University of Texas.

The workshop is sponsored annually by the Southwestern Association of Executives of Homes for Children of which East is a charter member and past president and secretary, the Texas State Department of Public Welfare, the Graduate School of Social Work and the Extension Division of the University of Texas.

East, a native of Tarrant County, Texas, is a graduate of Oklahoma Baptist University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. He has been in child care work since 1946, coming to the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home as superintendent in August, 1962.

Confident Living Daily Formula

You Achieve If You Believe

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Nobody ever achieved anything .who did not consistently build himself up in his thoughts, telling himself until he believed it as fact that by his own abilities he could accomplish his objectives and goals. Never build a case against yourself in your own mind because the mind tends to develop the thought-image that it holds. Build a case for yourself and it has a big chance of coming to pass as imaged.

It also helps to have someone else remind you of your abilities. A famous track coach who has a high percentage of successful athletes says the essence of his training plan is to build his boys up — to make them realize they can do it. He consistently tells them that they have what it takes and that he believes in them. They are compelled to believe in themselves because he firmly belives in them. And, of course, belief in a person always brings out every great element there.

PEALE

VACATION EXPERIENCE

President Calvin Coolidge spent a summer vacation in the Black Hills. He always attended Sunday services and a Secret Service man was sent out ahead to find a church for the President. Early on a Sunday morning he located a small church where a young man, whom he took to be the janitor, was dusting pews and setting hymn books in the place.

"Good marning," he said, "I would like to speak to the minister."

"I am the minister," the young man answered.

"Do you usually have a large congregation?" the Secret Service man asked.

"Not very big, just a few farmers. You see I'm only a student preacher here for the summer. Don't know much about preaching." he smiled, "but if you would like to stay for services I'll do the best I can. This is my first Sunday."

"I'll be here all right," the other replied. "You see, I've come to tell you that President Coolidge and his official party will worship with you this morning."

The young man's face turned alternately red and white. His teeth all but chattered. "Oh, no, President Coolidge couldn't be coming to this church! I can't do it" he gasped. He grew white around the gills. "Don't have him come here. I can't preach for a President and all those important people."

The Secret Service man put his arm on the young man's shoulders. "Listen, son," he said, "this President of the United States is a plain and simple man. Anyway, he may not hear anything you say for when he goes to church all he does is think about his mother. You just get up there in the pulpit and give it all you've got. You can do it. And I'll be pulling for you."

PREPARATION TIME

The young pastor looked at his watch. "I've got two hours," he said and he rushed to his room. He had prepared in advance seven sermons to cover the seven Sundays he would be preaching in this little church, He picked the best points out of the seven and put these together to make one sermon.

Fearfully and tremblingly he delivered his sermon. Afterward the Secret Service man patted him on the shoulder and said, "Boy, I knew you could do it! You know what the President told me to tell you? That it was the best sermon he has heard in a long while, and since he is going to be here for six weeks he will be in this church every Sunday to hear you." (It would appear the young minister had to do some heavy revising on those dismembered sermons!)

According to reports this young man rose to great preaching heights that summer—because he had a President and a Secret Service man who built him up and told him he could do it. They believed in him; and that stimulated him to belief in himself.

NEED AND DELIVERY

Certainly he would never forget that a President of the United States thought his first sermon was one of the best. If ever again the young minister was haunted by feelings of inadequacy, which attack each of us at times in life, he could remind himself that, when you have to come through, you can do it.

So why not do it always? Think achievement thoughts and make them a part of yourself. Believe in them, and in yourself, through dark days and good. When you face a tough situation make a mental inventory of your qualifications and abilities. Sum these up and affirm them. Remember that the good Lord is on your side and gives you strength equal to your responsibilities.

Ecumenical Proposal Finds Small Following

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Episcopal Bishop C. Kilmer Myers of San Francisco was speaking for a rather small minority when he called upon Anglicans and Protestants to acknowledge the Pope as "the holy father in God of the universal church."

Bishop Myers made his startling ecumenical proposal last Sunday in a sermon preached before an overflow congregation in San Francisco's Grace Cathedral. In a troubled and war-torn world, he said, Christians urgently need one leader "who can speak and witness to the whole human race" as "chief pastor of the Christian family."

The sermon made newspaper headlines across the country. But that's about as far as it's likely to go, at least for the present.

It is generally agreed among those closest to the ecumenical movement—Catholics as well as Protestants—that the time is not yet here, nor even distantly in sight, when the papacy can become a rallying point for Christian unity.

UNITY BLOCKED

On the contrary, nearly all ecumenists, on both sides, share the view expressed by Pope Paul VI in a talk before the Secretariat of Christian Unity in Rome last month. The Pope said, ruefully, that the papacy today is clearly "the gravest obstacle in the path of ecuemism."

Some Protestants, and many Anglican and Eastern Orthodox Christians, have indicated in unity discussions their willingness to accord the Pope a primacy of honor" in recognition of the historic importance of the Roman See. But they have made clear that accepting the bishop of Rome as "first among equals" does not imply a readiness to acknowledge his authoritative jurisdiction over the whole church.

BIGGEST DIFFERENCE

Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, Presbyterian theologian who served as a Protestant observer at the Vatican Council, said recently that "the fundamental hard-core problem" is the Catholic claim that the Pope is infallible on matters of faith and morals.

"When all the other differencies between us have been overcome, this is the one that will remain longest to plague us," said Dr. Brown.

Protestants have not wavered for 450 years in their rejection of papal infallibility. Martin Luther called it "a wicked, base invention for which the papists cannot adduce a tittle of evidence in support."

Few Protestants today, other than extremely "high church" Episcopalians such as Bishop Myers, would hesitate to say "amen" to Luther's view.

A prominent Lutheran theologian, Dr. Carl E. Braaten of the University of Chicago, has emphasized that certain conditions would have to be attached to any Protestant reapproachment with the Pope.

OTHER VIEWS

"There is one fundamental condition," he told UPI in commenting on Bishop Myers' sermon. "The structure of the papacy must be revised to make it acceptable to all Christians. This could be done, I believe, if ways could be found to transcend or supersede the doctrine of papal infallibility and the claim that the primacy of the Pope rests on divine institution rather than historical developments."

The Catholic Church has made it crystal clear, however, that it has no intention of abandoning either of these claims. The Vatican Council, while acting to decentralize the government of the church by giving greater powers to bishops, emphatically re-affirmed both the supremacy and infallibility of the Pope.

And Pope Paul, in acknowledging last month that the papacy is the chief stumbling block to unity, hastened to add that no Pope can surrender the claims "which come from the function that Christ assigned to us in the church, and which our tradition has sanctioned with such authority."

NAMED PRESIDENT

Mrs. Beatrice Thayer Pittman, who was elected president for the coming year, described Christian Scientists as "interested in good government, in righteous laws, in bettering the lot of all men. We are devoted to an adequate opportunity for everyone.

"When an opportunity comes to serve in civic, national, or international organizations and we see that we have something constructive to give, one should not hesitate to do so."

About eight thousand members, many from distant parts of the world, filled the auditorium of The Mother Church Extension and the adjoining original church edifice. Closed circuit television carried the meeting to an overflow audience seated in a nearby theater.

A modest ground breaking ceremony took place during the morning, of the first day of the meeting, as the first spadeful of earth was turned for the Church's new Administration Building. The 26 - story structure will be the first of several buildings in the Church's new $15 million Center in the Back Bay area of Boston.

The message of the Board of Directors was delivered by Thomas E. Hurley, chairman. "Today, there is every indication that we are embarking upon a new era," he told the members. "Progress has been going on down the years resulting in continuous expansion of the church organization."

ACTIVITIES SPREAD

He spoke of the "temporary" move of administrative offices over thirty - five years ago. "Church activities have not only filled this building to the bursting point, but they have spread to quarters in seven other buildings. . .As plans for a new building developed," he said, "an opportunity to make a significant contribution to the community became apparent."

Hurley quoted the words of Mary Baker Eddy, who discovered and founded Christian Science, as supplying the key to success in this forward step ("Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," p. 454):

MRS. BEATRICE THAYER PITTMAN

"Love for God and man is the true incentive in both healing and teaching. Love inspires, illumines, designates, and leads the way. Right motives give opinions to thought, and strength and freedom to speech and action."

Reports to the meeting included notice of a 10 per cent increase in circulation of the Church's international daily newspaper, The Christian Science Monitor; expansion of radio broadcasting in Africa and new publications in major African languages, Yoruba and Zulu; the commissioning of five additional Christian Scientists as chaplains in the United States Army, Navy, and Air Force; and extensive relief work in several countries, including Italy, Wales, Tasmania, Turkey and the United States.

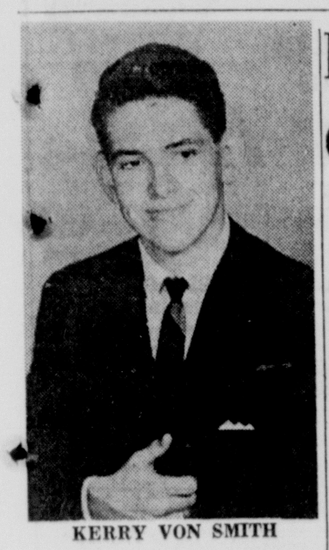
WADE B. EAST

Wade East Named To Committee

The superintendent of the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home in Monroe, Wade B. East, has been named to a three-year term on the planning committee for the Workshop for Personnel of Homes for Children at the University of Texas.

The workshop is sponsored annually by the Southwestern Association of Executives of Homes for Children of which East is a charter member and past president and secretary, the Texas State Department of Public Welfare, the Graduate School of Social Work and the Extension Division of the University of Texas.

East, a native of Tarrant County, Texas, is a graduate of Oklahoma Baptist University and Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary. He has been in child care work since 1946, coming to the Louisiana Baptist Children's Home as superintendent in August, 1962.



KERRY VON SMITH

Kerry Smith In Texas For Revival Work

The evangelist, whose father is pastor of Seigle Assembly of God Church in West Monroe, started his work in the ministry field a year ago. He has been preaching in this area in recent months.

PREACHING, MUSIC

In addition to preaching, he is a talented musician, and can play accordian, piano, guitar and drums. He uses music in his ministerial work, and this will be one of his specialties in the Texas revivals.

His evangelistic work in Texas will be directed at teenagers as well as adults, he said.

He left Friday for a two-week engagement at Boston, Tex., from there he will go to Linden, Tex. for an eight-day revival, then to New Boston, Tex. for about eight days.

He will take out time from his duties in Texas to make a speaking appearance one morning at the Assemblies of God State Youth Camp at Dry Creek, La. He then will return to Texas and complete his revival work there around July 17.

In August he will resume preaching engagements in this area.

A sophmore at West Monroe High School, he plans eventually to enter the full-time ministry.

New Ways To Transmit Christian Faith Sought

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) —Church drama experts are looking for fresh ways of conveying the Christian faith, and they're going to use "Expo '67" as a hunting ground.

"We've been too much bound in the church to writing and speaking, to the loss of other means," said the Rev. Dr. Blaine J. Fister, a National Council of Churches executive who heads the project.

Its stated aim is to gauge "the existing cultural and social situations of our times" as a stimulus to more vivid means of furthering "the life of the church."

Besides using the Montreal fair as a catalyst for ideas, the church specialists themselves will try some improvised, experimental modes of communication in reaction to it—without speech or alphabet.

SEEK BREAK-THROUGHS

"We're hoping for some break-throughs that will help us reflect more sensitively the wonder and reality of the world, and new insights into its truths," Dr. Fister said.

The interdenominational Conference on Religion, the Performing Arts and Technological Media is being sponsored next Aug. 26-Sept. 2 by the Project on Drama of the National Council's Division of Christian Education.

It is expected to draw about 250 specialists on stage, drama, television and films from various Protestant denominational agencies, as well as educators from church institutions.

"This is the first time that we've made the content of our program the real world, as portrayed there at Montreal," Dr. Fister said, noting that annual church media workshops usually are held at some isolated conference center.

"We're hoping to get double mileage out of it. It will be a working conference for serious professionals, primarily as a learning experience. But it will be fun, too—no doubt about it."

Costs of the conference, as in the past, are met chiefly through fees paid by denominational participants—$135 each, which includes a seven-day ticket to the Expo '67 grounds. The total budget for the event including accommodations for those attending, is estimated at $35,000 most of which is expected to be covered by the fees.

A National Council spokesman said the interchurch cooperative agency will spend little on the conference except expenses of about four staff experts who will attend.

Dormitory accommodations have been obtained at McGill University, where the deliberations, technique experimentation and critiques will be held.

The conference comes at a time when churches are increasingly attempting novel ways of preaching the Gospel—through art, theater, folk and jazz music, films and liturgical variations.

As Dr. Fister foresees it, extemporized impressions may be put in pantomine, in quick clay or paper sculpture, in "scratch film"—configurations etched on movie film—Dance-like bodily movements, or art sketches.

Objectives will include developing a "keener perception of today's world," a better understanding of "dramatic forms appropriate to different media in that world," and of new ways Christian concerns can be "legitimately translated into dramatic forms suitable for stage, film and television."

Several church authorities will be leaders and commentators on the proceedings, including the Rev. John M. Culkin a Roman Catholic Jesuit, of Fordham University; the Rev. Dr. Tom Driver, a Baptist theologian of Union Theological Seminary, and sometimes drama critique, and the Rev. Dr. B. David Napier, chaplain and teacher at Stanford University.

Dr. Fister, director of the National Council's Church and Public Education Department, said that the hope was to stimulate some genuine creativity in church communication arts.

Youth Day Observed At Highland

Highland Baptist Church, Arkansas Rd, West Monroe, today will honor its young people with "Youth Sunday" activities.

The young people, ages 13 to 24, will serve in positions of responsibility as teachers and officers of the church. Jimmy Works will be youth pastor. Kenneth Sullivan will serve as choir director, and Mel Shackelford and Jeffrey Thomas will head activities of the Sunday School and Training Union.

SPEAKER

Speaker for the 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services will be the Rev. Freddy Wayne Cory, formerly of West Monroe, now filling a full-time pastorate at Marion.

Last Friday afternoon, the young people of the church and their leaders journeyed to Camp Davis near Quitman, for an evangelistic retreat. There they took part in recreational activities, planning for today's services, and a devotional session led by the Rev. Mr. Cory, before returning Saturday night.

Youth Sunday is an annual event sponsored by the Training Union Department.

CURTAIN CALL

Henry Gerson, Carolyn Cummings and Marillyn Taylor - where are you? For two weeks we have attemepted to thank you for your contributions to "Barefoot in the Park," but you keep getting lost in the shuffle.

Since Mr. Gerson allowed us to use the fine Early American furniture for the run of the play, and Carolyn and Marillyn came forth with other urgently needed props and furniture, we want everyone to know how grateful we are for their generosity. Thanks again.

Many of Murray Burfford's good friends were on hand Sunday for the final performance of "Androcles and the Lion," which the cast and crew dedicated to her as a farewell gesture.

MUSICAL FAREWELL

Following the show the cast and audience assembled in the lobby and began singing a wild chorus of "So Long Murray" to the tune of "Hello Dolly"--a little surprise cooked up by Ann Bernhardt and Marilyn Taylor, with lyrics by Taylor.

Visiting, cake and soft drinks in the Green Room wound up the bittersweet celebration of the end of a most successful show, Murray's departure and the closing of the Theatre School.

The end of the regular theatre season does not mean there will be no activity on Lamy Lane this summer. In fact, tryouts for Dr. George Brian's summer production, "Sleeping Beauty," were in progress Sunday afternoon shortly after the curtain closed on "Androcles." It was a madhouse, is what it was, and a lesser man would have fled in terror. But Dr. Brian stuck it out, had a fine attendance, and was able to cast his show.

"Sleeping Beauty" will open at the Little Theatre July 7, for a three day run, with Cookie Young playing the role pf Princess Beauty; Bill Chandler, Prince Charming; Philip Maniscalco, Fairy Godfather; Philip Bacilla, King; Barbara Coats, Queen; Chuck Abbott, Page; Linda Lawrence, Bad Fairy; and Sandy Knoblock as the Good Fairy.

TRYOUTS HELD

Monday and Tuesday nights Bill Haddad held tryouts for the Little Theatre's summer musical "Half a Sixpence" and we had such a large and enthusiastic group of talented young hopefuls and "mature" men and women that they were singing, dancing and reading far into the night at both sessions. It's a shame the script doesn't call for a "cast of thousands", 'cause we had 'em.

Alternating nights Helen Wooldridge and Ronnie Brothers accompanied the singers on stage while others waited their turns or tried out a few basic dance steps under the excellent tutelage of Mary Louise Buckingham, stationed in the lobby.

Members of the cast have since been selected and rehearsals are already under way, but Bill has asked us to thank all those who attended the auditions and to express his regret that he was unable to use everyone. He emphasizes however, that the coming season will offer many more opportunities for our friends interested in acting and hopes to see you again at future auditions.

Bill also points out that "Sixpence" demands a large number of backstage helpers and hopes anyone with time on their hands will come out and work to help make this show the tremendous success he anticipates. We'll need the usual set builders, painters, prop folks and state crew, and urge everyone interested to call Bill or just stop by and pitch in--no experience necessary.

...On Dit...

by Marillyn Taylor

Summer is the season for entertaining out of town visitors. Hot weather is fine for many things — baseball, water skiing, swimming, outdoor meals — all of which are part of the fun drawing guests to Monroe.

Here for two months are PAT MADDEN and her children CONRAD, BRENDA, DEBRA, and KAREN. Husband and father JACK will be in and out, dividing his time with his family here and his work in North Carolina. The Maddens lived here for a number of years and still love to come to Monroe when schedules permit. This summer, while Conrad is attending summer school at Neville, the family will be living in Chateau apartments.

Pat was welcomed home with a two table bridge - luncheon party Friday in the home of BETH McGOUGH on Park avenue. The ladies enjoyed a lunch of chicken casserole, congealed pear salad, hot cheese biscuits, and fresh orange - coconut cake.

This party was also a going-away for JANICE CALDWELL. With her husband RALPH, Janice leaves tomorrow for a tour of Europe. They will travel with the Louisiana Teachers' Association for five weeks abroad. They leave from New York on Wednesday.

Another party was given by Beth earlier in the week, on Wednseday, when she invited neighbors for coffee with SARAH (Mrs. J. Randolph) BAKER of Goldsboro, North Carolina. Sarah was visiting her daughter and son-in-law, JEAN and FRED McCALL, en route home from a trip to Hawaii. For the coffee, Beth used masses of daisies in her living room. The refreshment table in the den was decorated with pink petunias. With coffee, she served hot coffee cake, banana chips, and frosted mints.

On Wednesday at noon, Sarah was honored by granddaughter RANDE McCALL and a group of her friends. Sarah had entertained the girls last year at a house party at her summer home at Atlantic Beach, N. C. Those making up the party, with Rande, were SADIE HADDAD, VEE MARSHALL, JERRY ACKEL, PATSY KELLY, and FRAN HARBUCK, who took their guest to Bayou DeSiard country club for lunch.

Guest in the home of CLIO and DICK BRIGHT this week was MRS. J. S. HART of Dallas, who was here from Monday until Friday. She came over for a visit while her children are in Europe. During her stay, she was entertained by JANE HOLLOWAY and CAROLINE McBEE.

Last weekend, the Brights had as their guests CLAIRE and HARRIS NAYLOR, who stopped off en route home to Dallas after two months in Europe.

The Brights, and their sister DOT MEREDITH, plan to leave on Tuesday for a ten day visit to Texas. They will go first to Houston, for a baseball game at the Astrodome: then on to San Antonio and the June Fiesta. On the way home, they plan a stop in Austin to visit a brother there.

Here from Belleville, N. J., were ANN HANRAHAN AND BILL HANRAHAN, who visited their grandparents, EULALIA and W. E. McCOY in their home on Cole avenue. The young people drove down, making the trip in just twenty-four hours. During their week's stay, they were entertained at a barbecue supper with the HUGH VICKS hosts in their home on Lincoln road; and at a bridge party given by ANN HAYES at her home on Bon Aire.

Most of the shouting and tumult of graduation has died down, but there are still a few "specials" planned for graduates. One of these was the luncheon given by ADELAIDE LAWSON in honor MARIANNE SALISBURY, complimenting the honoree on her continuation of music study until graduation, and her service to music in her activities as choral accompanist. Marianne received a gold initialed pin and a cymbidium orchid corsage as gifts from her hostess.

The table in the Rose Room at Bayou DeSiard country club was appointed with ruby red goblets and centered with a Victorian arrangement of pale pink carnations, ivy, fuchsia and lavender gladioli. Ten places were marked by cards which matched the floral centerpiece.

Each guest received a book of poetry, tied with black and gold embossed musical notes. The menu included spiced tomato juice, shrimp salad, finger sandwiches; and for dessert, charlotte Russe with coffee.

On Friday evening, ANNA CLAIRE and ED SEYMOUR, JR., PAT and STAN BAGWELL were hosts at a small supper party at the Bagwell home on Point drive. Guests assembled in the gardens overlooking Bayou DeSiard. A barbecue supper was served at a table covered with red checked tablecloth.

Several sailing enthusiasts from Monroe were in Jackson, Mississippi, last weekend for the Jackson Yacht Club Regatta. Those attending, with their sailboats, were JUDY and GENE WORTHEN, FRANK CLINE and his children. COLLEEN, and FRANK III.

Bayou DeSiard country club has never looked lovelier than Wednesday night, when the ballroom was decorated for the dinner following the rehearsal of the wedding of AMANDA COBB and NEIL MORGAN. Hosts for the party were his parents, LOUISE and G. L. MORGAN. Flanking the entrance to the ballroom were tall candle stands, each holding a silver wine cooler filled with a mass arrangement of Tropicana roses, yellow Fuji mums, and white stock.

Focal point in the ballroom was a circular tiered tray swinging from the ceiling. Massed on each tier were dozens of chrysanthemums in white and yellow.

About eighty diners were seated at individual tables for eight. Each table was covered with a moss green floor length cloth accented with a runner striped in white, green, and yellow. Centering each was a tall wooden candle holder, painted yellow, and holding yellow carnations, Tropicana roses, white and yellow Fuji mums, and burning tapers. Chairs were covered with green and white slipcovers. In each corner of the room were tall masses of eucalyptus and ivy.

Just in case our readers thought that Nobel prize poetry had to be gloomy, we decided to give them this work on cats by Nobel poet T. S. Eliot:

You've seen them both at work and games,
And learnt about their proper names,
Their habits and their habitat:

But
How would you ad-dress a Cat?
First your memory I'll jog.
And say: A CAT IS NOT A DOG.

Now Dogs pretend they like to fight;
They often bark, more seldom bite;
But yet a Dog is, on the whole,
What you would call a simple soul.
And far from showing too much pride
Is frequently undignified.
He's very easily taken in—
Just chuck him underneath the chin
Or slap his back or shake his paw,
And he will gambol and guffaw.
He's such an easy-going lout,
He'll answer any hail or shout.

Again I must remind you that
A Dog's a Dog—a CAT's A CAT.

With Cats, some say, one rule is true:
Don't speak till you are spoken
to.
Myself, I do not hold with that—
I say, you should ad-dress a Cat.
But always keep in mind that he
Resents familiarity.

Before a Cat will condescend
To treat you as a trusted friend,
Some little token of esteem
Is needed, like a dish of cream;
And you might now and then supply
Some caviare, or Strassburg
Pie,
Some potted grouse, or salmon
paste—
He's sure to have his personal taste.
(I know a Cat, who makes a habit
Of eating nothing else but rabbit,
And when he's finished, licks his paws
So's not to waste the onion sauce.)
A Cat's entitled to expect
These evidences of respect.
And so in time you reach your aim,
And finally call him by his NAME.

So this is this, and that is that:
And there's how you AD-DRESS
A CAT.

CALIFORNIA FLAVOR

1 tablespoon gelatin
4 tablespoons lime juice
1 tablespoons lemon juice
2½ tablespoons sugar
12-ounce bottle ginger ale
Green coloring

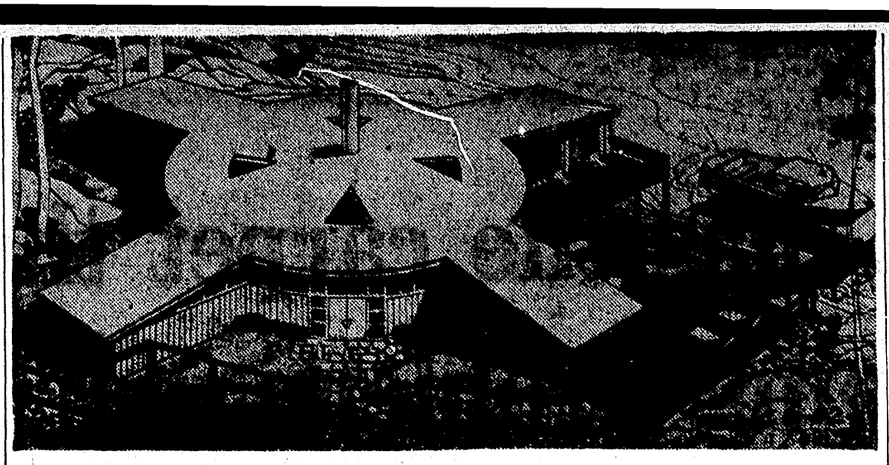
Soften gelatin in fruit juices. Heat over hot water to dissolve. Add sugar.

Slowly add ginger ale. Add green food coloring if delicate tint is desired. Chill until well thickened.

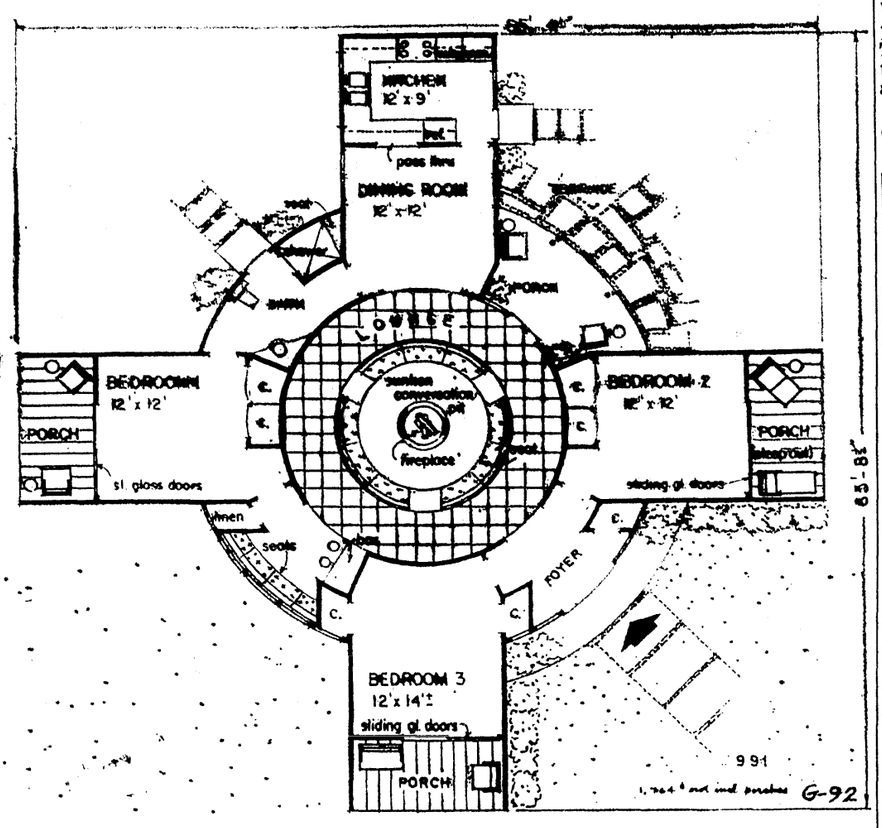
3 ounce package cream cheese
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
1½ cup chopped walnut meats
6 pear halves

Cream cheese, honey and mayonnaise together. Add nuts; mix well. Form into 6 balls.

Put cheese ball into center of each pear half. Arrange in shallow buttered pan; spoon gelatin mixture around and over pears. Chill until firm. Serve with mayonniase or French dressing. Serves 6.



DELUXE INFORMALITY: the family or guests approaching this uncommon house could not help but feel the vacation atmosphere it is intended to convey; the architect has taken special care to see that its dramatic design does not interfere with practical living.



FLOOR PLANS: While these floor plans might at first glance appear to be a new kind of game, a study of them will show that they include a room layout which affords a variety of features, including areas, of privacy, and relaxation as well as dining comfort.

Circular Core Type Vacation House Has Dramatic Design

By ANDY LANG

Unusual designs are generally more acceptable in vacation houses than year-round residences. Where informality is the keynote, conventional construction often is not necessary and, in some cases, is not desired.

If drama is a requirement for a vacation home, this design offers the ultimate. It's a showplace for the family that wants something highly individual—a large circular core with four wings projecting beyond. Actually, it's like an auto wheel, with the hub containing the lounge and the tire portion containing the bath, a refreshment bar nook, the front foyer and a porch. The four wings house three bedrooms, each with a private "sleep-out" porch, and a dining room and kitchen.

The circular lounge is 23' in diameter, with a sunken conversation pit, including a circular seat and an open log-burning area. Architect Rudolph A. Matern suggests that this central portion of the house could have a flat floor, with the circular fireplace raised to that level, should the prospective owner desire to eliminate the sunken effect. (Some families with children feel that a sunken area is not practical.)

The interior walls, like the exterior, are finished in stained wood for the minimum in maintenance. The ceiling is slightly pitched and is pierced with four triangular sky domes. Consider the effect of being able to look up at the blue sky; the sunlight and moonlight shafts that would stream in; and the interesting visual pattern that would be formed on a rainy day.

With maximum separation between, the three bedrooms offer privacy not often available. Guests would feel more comfortable. Even the porches, which are entered through sliding glass doors in the bedrooms, are fenced and screened off from one another. The bedroom adjacent to the large bath has direct access to it. The bath has another interior entrance to it as well as an exterior door. This outside entrance is excellent for restricting sandtracked floors, dripping bathing suits etc., to the bathroom. An oversized shower stall is directly at the door for duck in-duck out use.

One of the four wings includes a dining room, unusual in summer homes and cottages, and a U-shaped kitchen. The latter has a counter-unit hot water heater and a washing machine with a side door leading to an outdoor terrace for fresh-air dining. Incidentally, the dining room could double as a sleeping space in an emergency.

The exterior rendering shows this house located near a body of water, a typical setting for a vacation home, with the basic plan built on a concrete slab. Varying site conditions might dictate different construction treatments, which could be handled by a competent contractor at the location.

There isn't much doubt that this is a house that some persons will consider "way out." But neither is there any doubt about its livability for the vacationing family that likes to spend its time off in a frank atmosphere of complete relaxation.

Trees, Shrubs Need Feeding

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Trees and shrubs have about finished their first spurt of growth and used up their food supply by the end of May. If you want them to make their maximum possible growth between now and midsummer, then get at the job of the second feeding right now.

Almost everyone knows how to feed trees by the hole punching method in which we pour into 18 - inches deep holes in concentric circles underneath the trees a complete fertilizer. The amount to use is often estimated at the rate of about one pound per each inch of circumference of the tree trunks measured just above the bulge.

The most immediately effective tree feeding is done by the commercial tree companies that force liquid fertilizer into the ground under pressure. If you cannot afford this operation, you can drive the sharp end of a pick into the ground in circles underneath your trees and pour on liquid fertilizer yourself.

TREE THINNING

Nothing is more destructive than the "Topping" of trees. Why this murder of good trees persists is difficult to understand. Apparently those addicted to this practice really believe that "topping" trees by cutting off their limbs will make them grow into better shape. Nothing is farther from the truth; trees treated this way are doomed to untimely death from bad growth and rot.

On the other hand, judicious thinning of extra thick growth on shade trees can let in light and lighten trees that have become top heavy. In heavy windstorms, such trees are often blown over or have their branches wrenched off.

No harm is done by the removal of the lower branches of your shade trees. This practice lets in air and some light. Together with an occasional thinning it will help any shrubs you may grow beneath your trees. Azaleas, of course, do not do too well in much shade. Camellias can take more of it. but both are benefitted by the lightening of the canopy over them when it gets too thick to allow for normal flowering.

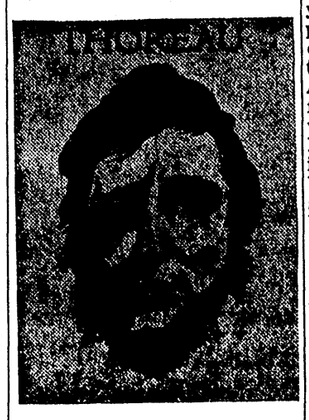
New Stamp Is Tribute To Thoreau

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Henry David Thoreau, a philosopher and author of the 19th Century who believed in the dignity of man, will be honored on a new U.S. 5 - cent stamp to be issued on July 12. The date is the 150th anniversary of Thoreau's birth. Place of issuance will be Concord, Mass., where he was born and is buried.

The new stamp will be vertical on white paper with the portrait of Thoreau in black. The name "Thoreau" is at the top in red and the "U.S. 5 Cents" at the bottom in green.

Not far from Concord is Walden Pond. Here Thoreau secluded himself for two years in a self-built cabin to contemplate, to observe nature and to write. The book that came from this experience, "Walden," has appeared in some 150 editions in 50 languages.



Collectors desiring first - day cancellations of this new stamp may send their addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Concord, Mass. 01742. The envelope to the postmaster should be endorsed "First - Day Covers 5 cent Thoreau Stamp." Request must be postmarked no later than July 12.

The famous "Schultzmantelmadonna" from Fraustein Castle in Upper Austria is featured on a new 3 - schilling stamp issued by Austria. The green, blue and black stamp depicts the famous wooden statue and commemorates the "Gothic Art in Austria" exhibit being held from May 19 to Oct. 15 at Krems-Stein in Lower Austria. Among the most outstanding examples of gothic art in Austria are St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna and the Franciscan Church in Salzburg.

Canada will issue a special 5 - cent "Royal Visit" stamp on June 30, the day before Queen Elizabeth takes part in centennial ceremonies in Ottawa. The medium-size stamp will have a horizontal format featuring the Queen's portrait from a photograph by Anthony Buckey of London. The centennial symbol will be at the left of the portrait. There will be laurel leaves above the Queen's head.

Surinam's religious semi-postal set issue at Easter time consisted of five stamps. All designs were symbolic representations of the Good Samaritan. Also issued by that country were two stamps honoring the Central Bank of Surianam. Each showed a different view of the bankbuilding.

The Republic of Cyprus marked the completion of its "Five Year Development Program" by issuing five new stamps, reports the Crown Agents Stamp Bureau. The program has been characterized by an ambitious plan of public development in the fields of agriculture, water conservation, road building, harbor and port expansion, electricity improvement, telecommunications, rural development and tourism. The five new stamps depict the following scenes: the new electric power station at Moni, Limassol; Arghaka-Maghouda dam in the northwest Cyprus hills; new highway to the Troodos mountain resorts; new hotel in Nicosia, harbor at Famagusta.

Use Cool Type Motifs In Summer

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

You can make your home seem many degrees cooler in summer by changing your decorative scheme, says interior designer Michael Greer.

Greer gives his own apartment the low-thermometer treatment every summer. The cool-as-a-lettuce-leaf look is achieved with sleight of hand that includes summer slipcovers, straw rugs and a whole set of different accessories.

SPLASHY PRINTS

"If you do not change the rug, it is best to stick basically to the same color fabrics you had before. If the room has numerous plain color fabrics in winter, you can get a pleasant change by using nice splashy prints," he points out.

He uses striped cotton in neutral colors and a straw rug "of almost no color" because he uses bright colors in winter. The change from hot to cool decorating is a psychological coup in itself.

"One fringe benefit of using slipcovers is that it gives you the opportunity of altering the look of a room completely, even though you use the same furniture. A very neutral summer scheme, the direct opposite of a very bright winter look can provide a whole new mood.

Greer slipcovers just about everything that will take it, even the ottomans. He upholsters the fireplace screen in the same fabric. This is a chic effect in contrast to the emptiness of the hearth one normally faces in summer. The beige, gray and white striped cotton fabric is used on chairs and a sofa. Straw rugs that cost $25 take the place of his winter Aubussons.

He likes to change accessories in summer and substitutes clear crystal and amber glass for porcelains and objets d'art.

Many people find storage of seasonal accessories a nuisance, but he has found that if one reserves a closet shelf or storage area for these objects, it will be merely a matter of moving one set in and the other out. The idea is to take the giant step and make the space available. After that, there should be no problem.

One great advantage of the seasonal accessory look is that it can solve clutter. Lovely things often are so crowded together that they can never earn full appreciation of the beholder. The objects should be sorted, and some of them stored. You'll appreciate them more when you can see your treasures in proper perspective.

Greer is a guest speaker for many women's groups and unravels many questions about home furnishings terminology for the ladies. He is likely to tell them a "toile" is the same as a chintz, and that chintz isn't always glazed or big flashy floral prints, that dark stained floors are in better taste than light ones, and that one should try for an "architectural" look at windows and doors to give a room character.

The popular interior designer wrote the book "Inside Interior Design," now in its fourth printing.

Home, Garden Week Planned

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, want to get up-to-date gardening information, then make plans now to attend our Home and Garden Week on the campus of LSU August 22-25.

Definite plans for the gardening programs have not been announced as of yet, but will give you this information real soon in my column. Circle the dates on your calender. You may stay in one of the lovely dormitories while attending the three-day event at no cost for lodging. The only cost will be for meals which are quite reasonable. So if you can take the time, make your plans now.

If you, Mrs. Gardener, give proper care to the annuals in your landscape, the blooming period can be extended to a considerable degree. First cultivate to a very shallow depth. Annual's roots are near the surface of the soil. Deep cultivation will cut important feeder roots. Remove the old blooms. Flowering will cease when seed pods begin to form. Cut back tall spindly plants to encourage new branching.

PLANT FOOD

Fertilize annuals for a second time during June. Two pounds of a complete fertilizer per 100 square feet of growing area is generally recommended for most annuals.

Water during periods of drouth by giving a thorough soaking to encourage deeper root system. Water in the early morning rather than at night to help prevent the spread of disease-frequent sprinkling aid little.

Be sure to remember to control plant pests.

Prune climbing roses. Blossoms will be gone and new shoots appearing. Cut the oldest canes.

Cut dahlias back to about one half their growth after the first crop of blooms. The plants will branch and produce a good crop of fall blooms.

Dig, divide and replant bearded iris.

This is June Dairy Month, and Ouachita Parish is joining the other states of the nation in making special efforts toward letting all people know the importance of milk in the diet of all ages. Mrs. Homemaker, let's make a comparison of the cost of milk. Mrs. Consumer, you buy most of your food by the pound so - one quart of milk weights 2.15 pounds - an average cost of twenty nine cents per quart. This is slightly more than fourteen cents per pound. If you serve husband two eight-ounce glasses of milk per day, this is about 14 cents. You are providing a big step toward a balanced diet. These two glasses of milk supply for moderately active adult man 26 per cent of the protein, 72 per cent of his calcium, and adults need calcium, just as much as growing children, 49 per cent of his riboflavin, thirteen per cent of his thiamine, and about 11 per cent of his daily calorie needs.

Remember that children need about three to four glasses of milk each day.

OUTDOOR FURNITURE

Mr. A. S. McKean, forestry specialist for the Louisiana Cooperative Extension Service, gives you, Mrs. Homemaker, some excellent information on care of your outdoor furniture. He says that years of service can be added to wooden outdoor furniture by treating it with a wood preservative and a water repellant. The heartwood of cedar, cypress and catalpa will resist decay for a longer period than other woods.

All types of outdoor wooden furniture should be protected with a preservative treatment of pentachlorphenol with an added water repellent known as "Penta WR." The preservative should be mixed with mineral spirits and be the paintable type. It can be obtained in either concentrated or ready to apply from your building supply store.

Be sure to check the label and make certain that both penta and the water repellant are present. Penta safeguards the wood against decay and the water repellant provides resistance to moisture absorption.

THOUGHT:

The best way to succeed in life is to act on the advice you give to others.

Garden Center Notes

June Bride Motifs Shown

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Garden Study Club of Monroe presented "Designs for The June Bride." June is the month for flowers and weddings, so this was a most timely and beautiful program.

Mrs. Archie Dickerson, president of the group, with several of the club's members, brought the six outstanding designs which ranged from wedding bouquet to the groom's table design.

Mrs. Morris Harrison designed a patio party decor using the iron grill candle holders, six in the group, with diamond cut candle glass holders. Stephanotos and baby ivy entwined throughout the grill work. Simplicity was the keynote.

Mrs. Archie Dickerson made a design for the groom's table using a three tiered gold ceramic (fountain type) flower holder. Oasis was anchored into place on each of the three bowls with twistem. Large (burbank) daisies and two types of small ivy formed the entire free-standing design. A small amount of the arbre vitae fern was used as a filler.

For the church or entrance hall, Mrs. C. H. Tait and Mrs. C. T. Johnson made a large design using the large (Burbank) daisies as the main flower against a background of a spidestra foliage. Holly foliage and contenester filled in for contrast. Small clusters of ivy were used low to soften the edge of the large green glass container.

BRIDE'S BOUQUET

The bride's bouquet was made by Mrs. John P. Lewis. In every detail this was truly ideal for the bride. The tussy-mussy design made on a background frame held gathered sheer net (alusians) at the outer edge. This was in white to match the white flowers that filled in the central section. Glad florets, lily - of - the-valley, stephanotos and one beautiful white Dutch Iris with gold markings, completed the assortment of flowers. White satin ribbon and a cluster of lace formed streamers and bow flowing from the flowers. The only greenery was the small leaves of the stephanotos and the arbre - vitae fern.

Mrs. Henson Coon made the bride's reception table. A pyramid design of gardenias with the foliage as a background was made in a silver epergne which had a beautiful carved, silver base with the cone shaped glass holder attached to the top to hold the tall placement of flowers. Oasis in the bowl held the stems and kept the blooms fresh. This lovely formal design was flanked on either side with the three tiered silver candle holders. White candles completed the design.

WICKER UMBRELLA

For the luncheon - shower table, a very unusual and beautiful design was created by Mrs. J. Norman Coon and Mrs. Artis Caldwell. A wicker umbrella was placed inside a glass bowl filled with oasis that had been wired into place. Deep pink Rudbeckia (cone flowers) and pink Radiance roses filled the lower and upper section of this large design. Red barberry formed the over - all line, blending perfectly with the rose tones of the flowers. At the tip of the umbrella handle a variegated ribbon bow was placed as the finishing touch, blending with the colors of the flowers.

A clever place card was also exhibited on the program made of pink linen, a miniature umbrella with a white pipe cleaner stem anchored on a small round piece of styra foam to attach the card to.

Many came by for a closer look at these lovely designs. Many were looking for ideas for bride parties — and appreciated these lovely designs.

Wednesday, the Jonesboro-Hodge High School Gardeners will present the program. Miss Valerie Barnum is their sponsor.

Pat was welcomed home with a two table bridge - luncheon party Friday in the home of BETH McGOUGH on Park avenue. The ladies enjoyed a lunch of chicken casserole, congealed pear salad, hot cheese biscuits, and fresh orange - coconut cake.

This party was also a going-away for JANICE CALDWELL. With her husband RALPH, Janice leaves tomorrow for a tour of Europe. They will travel with the Louisiana Teachers' Association for five weeks abroad. They leave from New York on Wednesday.

Another party was given by Beth earlier in the week, on Wednseday, when she invited neighbors for coffee with SARAH (Mrs. J. Randolph) BAKER of Goldsboro, North Carolina. Sarah was visiting her daughter and son-in-law, JEAN and FRED McCALL, en route home from a trip to Hawaii. For the coffee, Beth used masses of daisies in her living room. The refreshment table in the den was decorated with pink petunias. With coffee, she served hot coffee cake, banana chips, and frosted mints.

On Wednesday at noon, Sarah was honored by granddaughter RANDE McCALL and a group of her friends. Sarah had entertained the girls last year at a house party at her summer home at Atlantic Beach, N. C. Those making up the party, with Rande, were SADIE HADDAD, VEE MARSHALL, JERRY ACKEL, PATSY KELLY, and FRAN HARBUCK, who took their guest to Bayou DeSiard country club for lunch.

Guest in the home of CLIO and DICK BRIGHT this week was MRS. J. S. HART of Dallas, who was here from Monday until Friday. She came over for a visit while her children are in Europe. During her stay, she was entertained by JANE HOLLOWAY and CAROLINE McBEE.

Last weekend, the Brights had as their guests CLAIRE and HARRIS NAYLOR, who stopped off en route home to Dallas after two months in Europe.

The Brights, and their sister DOT MEREDITH, plan to leave on Tuesday for a ten day visit to Texas. They will go first to Houston, for a baseball game at the Astrodome: then on to San Antonio and the June Fiesta. On the way home, they plan a stop in Austin to visit a brother there.

Here from Belleville, N. J., were ANN HANRAHAN AND BILL HANRAHAN, who visited their grandparents, EULALIA and W. E. McCOY in their home on Cole avenue. The young people drove down, making the trip in just twenty-four hours. During their week's stay, they were entertained at a barbecue supper with the HUGH VICKS hosts in their home on Lincoln road; and at a bridge party given by ANN HAYES at her home on Bon Aire.

Most of the shouting and tumult of graduation has died down, but there are still a few "specials" planned for graduates. One of these was the luncheon given by ADELAIDE LAWSON in honor MARIANNE SALISBURY, complimenting the honoree on her continuation of music study until graduation, and her service to music in her activities as choral accompanist. Marianne received a gold initialed pin and a cymbidium orchid corsage as gifts from her hostess.

The table in the Rose Room at Bayou DeSiard country club was appointed with ruby red goblets and centered with a Victorian arrangement of pale pink carnations, ivy, fuchsia and lavender gladioli. Ten places were marked by cards which matched the floral centerpiece.

Each guest received a book of poetry, tied with black and gold embossed musical notes. The menu included spiced tomato juice, shrimp salad, finger sandwiches; and for dessert, charlotte Russe with coffee.

On Friday evening, ANNA CLAIRE and ED SEYMOUR, JR., PAT and STAN BAGWELL were hosts at a small supper party at the Bagwell home on Point drive. Guests assembled in the gardens overlooking Bayou DeSiard. A barbecue supper was served at a table covered with red checked tablecloth.

Several sailing enthusiasts from Monroe were in Jackson, Mississippi, last weekend for the Jackson Yacht Club Regatta. Those attending, with their sailboats, were JUDY and GENE WORTHEN, FRANK CLINE and his children. COLLEEN, and FRANK III.

Bayou DeSiard country club has never looked lovelier than Wednesday night, when the ballroom was decorated for the dinner following the rehearsal of the wedding of AMANDA COBB and NEIL MORGAN. Hosts for the party were his parents, LOUISE and G. L. MORGAN. Flanking the entrance to the ballroom were tall candle stands, each holding a silver wine cooler filled with a mass arrangement of Tropicana roses, yellow Fuji mums, and white stock.

Focal point in the ballroom was a circular tiered tray swinging from the ceiling. Massed on each tier were dozens of chrysanthemums in white and yellow.

About eighty diners were seated at individual tables for eight. Each table was covered with a moss green floor length cloth accented with a runner striped in white, green, and yellow. Centering each was a tall wooden candle holder, painted yellow, and holding yellow carnations, Tropicana roses, white and yellow Fuji mums, and burning tapers. Chairs were covered with green and white slipcovers. In each corner of the room were tall masses of eucalyptus and ivy.

Just in case our readers thought that Nobel prize poetry had to be gloomy, we decided to give them this work on cats by Nobel poet T. S. Eliot:

You've seen them both at work and games,
And learnt about their proper names,
Their habits and their habitat:

But
How would you ad-dress a Cat?
First your memory I'll jog.
And say: A CAT IS NOT A DOG.

Now Dogs pretend they like to fight;
They often bark, more seldom bite;
But yet a Dog is, on the whole,
What you would call a simple soul.
And far from showing too much pride
Is frequently undignified.
He's very easily taken in—
Just chuck him underneath the chin
Or slap his back or shake his paw,
And he will gambol and guffaw.
He's such an easy-going lout,
He'll answer any hail or shout.

Again I must remind you that
A Dog's a Dog—a CAT's A CAT.

With Cats, some say, one rule is true:
Don't speak till you are spoken to.
Myself, I do not hold with that—
I say, you should ad-dress a Cat.
But always keep in mind that he
Resents familiarity.

Before a Cat will condescend
To treat you as a trusted friend,
Some little token of esteem
Is needed, like a dish of cream;
And you might now and then supply
Some caviare, or Strassburg Pie,
Some potted grouse, or salmon paste—
He's sure to have his personal taste.
(I know a Cat, who makes a habit
Of eating nothing else but rabbit,
And when he's finished, licks his paws
So's not to waste the onion sauce.)
A Cat's entitled to expect
These evidences of respect.
And so in time you reach your aim,
And finally call him by his NAME.

So this is this, and that is that:
And there's how you AD-DRESS A CAT.

CALIFORNIA FLAVOR

1 tablespoon gelatin
4 tablespoons lime juice
1 tablespoons lemon juice
2½ tablespoons sugar
12-ounce bottle ginger ale
Green coloring

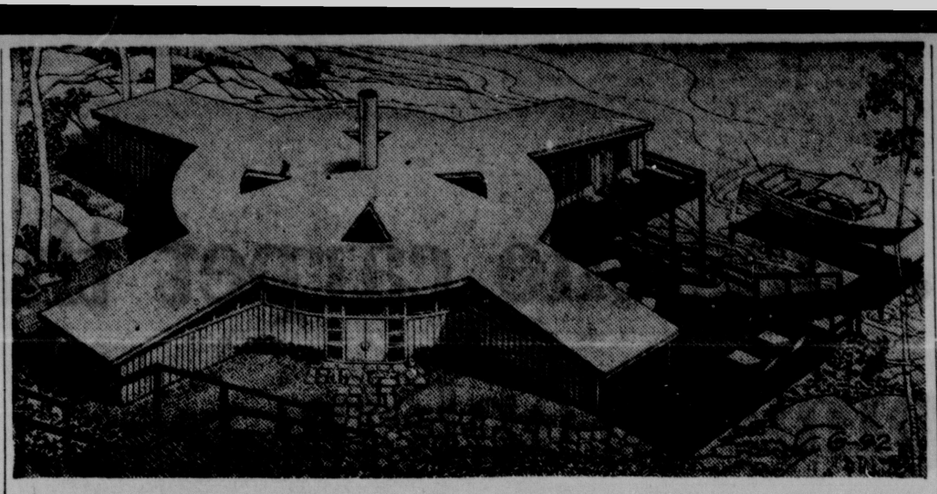
Soften gelatin in fruit juices. Heat over hot water to dissolve. Add sugar.

Slowly add ginger ale. Add green food coloring if delicate tint is desired. Chill until well thickened.

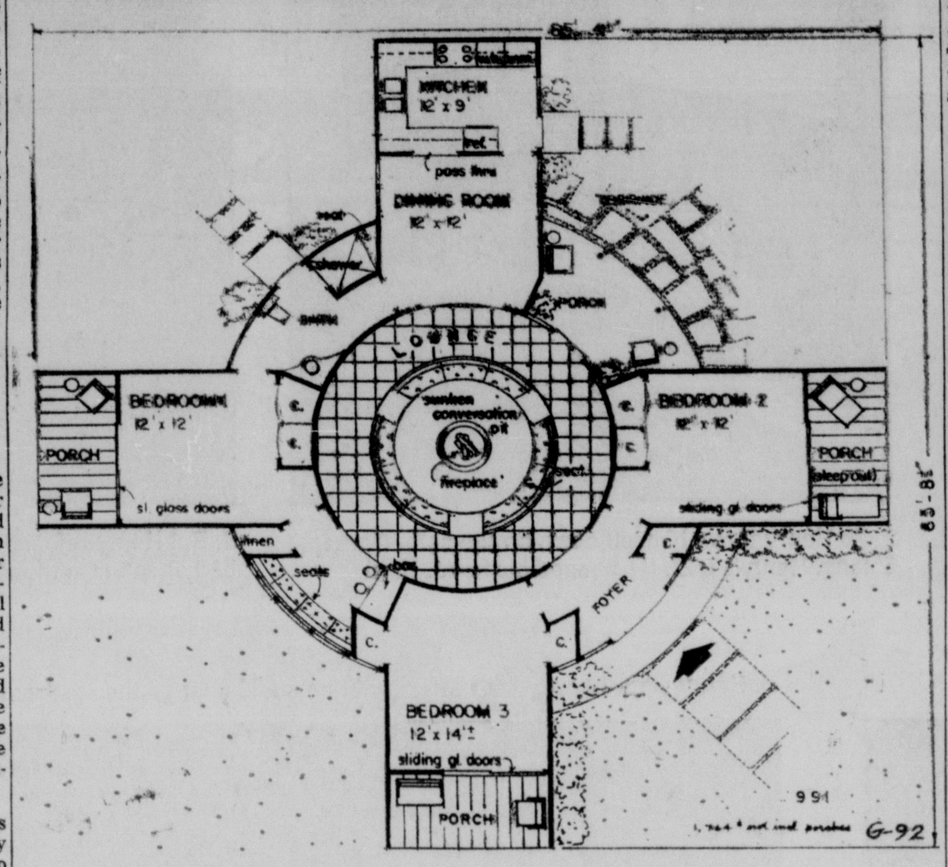
3 ounce package cream cheese
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
1½ cup chopped walnut meats
6 pear halves

Cream cheese, honey and mayonnaise together. Add nuts; mix well. Form into 6 balls.

Put cheese ball into center of each pear half. Arrange in shallow buttered pan; spoon gelatin mixture around and over pears. Chill until firm. Serve with mayonniase or French dressing. Serves 6.



DELUXE INFORMALITY: the family or guests approaching this uncommon house could not help but feel the vacation atmosphere it is intended to convey; the architect has taken special care to see that its dramatic design does not interfere with practical living.



FLOOR PLANS: While these floor plans might at first glance appear to be a new kind of game, a study of them will show that they include a room layout which affords a variety of features, including areas, of privacy, and relaxation as well as dining comfort.

Circular Core Type Vacation House Has Dramatic Design

By ANDY LANG

Unusual designs are generally more acceptable in vacation houses than year-round residences. Where informality is the keynote, conventional construction often is not necessary and, in some cases, is not desired.

If drama is a requirement for a vacation home, this design offers the ultimate. It's a showplace for the family that wants something highly individual—a large circular core with four wings projecting beyond. Actually, it's like an auto wheel, with the hub containing the lounge and the tire portion containing the bath, a refreshment bar nook, the front foyer and a porch. The four wings house three bedrooms, each with a private "sleep-out" porch, and a dining room and kitchen.

The circular lounge is 23' in diameter, with a sunken conversation pit, including a circular seat and an open log-burning area. Architect Rudolph A. Matern suggests that this central portion of the house could have a flat floor, with the circular fireplace raised to that level, should the prospective owner desire to eliminate the sunken effect. (Some families with children feel that a sunken area is not practical.)

The interior walls, like the exterior, are finished in stained wood for the minimum in maintenance. The ceiling is slightly pitched and is pierced with four triangular sky domes. Consider the effect of being able to look up at the blue sky; the sunlight and moonlight shafts that would stream in; and the interesting visual pattern that would be formed on a rainy day.

With maximum separation between, the three bedrooms offer privacy not often available. Guests would feel more comfortable. Even the porches, which are entered through sliding glass doors in the bedrooms, are fenced and screened off from one another. The bedroom adjacent to the large bath has direct access to it. The bath has another interior entrance to it as well as an exterior door. This outside entrance is excellent for restricting sandtracked floors, dripping bathing suits etc., to the bathroom. An oversized shower stall is directly at the door for duck in-duck out use.

One of the four wings includes a dining room, unusual in summer homes and cottages, and a U-shaped kitchen. The latter has a counter-unit hot water heater and a washing machine with a side door leading to an outdoor terrace for fresh-air dining. Incidentally, the dining room could double as a sleeping space in an emergency.

The exterior rendering shows this house located near a body of water, a typical setting for a vacation home, with the basic plan built on a concrete slab. Varying site conditions might dictate different construction treatments, which could be handled by a competent contractor at the location.

There isn't much doubt that this is a house that some persons will consider "way out." But neither is there any doubt about its livability for the vacationing family that likes to spend its time off in a frank atmosphere of complete relaxation.

Trees, Shrubs Need Feeding

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Trees and shrubs have about finished their first spurt of growth and used up their food supply by the end of May. If you want them to make their maximum possible growth between now and midsummer, then get at the job of the second feeding right now.

Almost everyone knows how to feed trees by the hole punching method in which we pour into 18 - inches deep holes in concentric circles underneath the trees a complete fertilizer. The amount to use is often estimated at the rate of about one pound per each inch of circumference of the tree trunks measured just above the bulge.

The most immediately effective tree feeding is done by the commercial tree companies that force liquid fertilizer into the ground under pressure. If you cannot afford this operation, you can drive the sharp end of a pick into the ground in circles underneath your trees and pour on liquid fertilizer yourself.

TREE THINNING

Nothing is more destructive than the "Topping" of trees. Why this murder of good trees persists is difficult to understand. Apparently those addicted to this practice really believe that "topping" trees by cutting off their limbs will make them grow into better shape. Nothing is farther from the truth; trees treated this way are doomed to untimely death from bad growth and rot.

On the other hand, judicious thinning of extra thick growth on shade trees can let in light and lighten trees that have become top heavy. In heavy windstorms, such trees are often blown over or have their branches wrenched off.

No harm is done by the removal of the lower branches of your shade trees. This practice lets in air and some light. Together with an occasional thinning it will help any shrubs you may grow beneath your trees. Azaleas, of course, do not do too well in much shade. Camellias can take more of it. but both are benefitted by the lightening of the canopy over them when it gets too thick to allow for normal flowering.

Use Cool Type Motifs In Summer

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

You can make your home seem many degrees cooler in summer by changing your decorative scheme, says interior designer Michael Greer.

Greer gives his own apartment the low-thermometer treatment every summer. The cool-as-a-lettuce-leaf look is achieved with sleight of hand that includes summer slipcovers, straw rugs and a whole set of different accessories.

SPLASHY PRINTS

"If you do not change the rug, it is best to stick basically to the same color fabrics you had before. If the room has numerous plain color fabrics in winter, you can get a pleasant change by using nice splashy prints," he points out.

He uses striped cotton in neutral colors and a straw rug "of almost no color" because he uses bright colors in winter. The change from hot to cool decorating is a psychological coup in itself.

"One fringe benefit of using slipcovers is that it gives you the opportunity of altering the look of a room completely, even though you use the same furniture. A very neutral summer scheme, the direct opposite of a very bright winter look can provide a whole new mood.

Greer slipcovers just about everything that will take it, even the ottomans. He upholsters the fireplace screen in the same fabric. This is a chic effect in contrast to the emptiness of the hearth one normally faces in summer. The beige, gray and white striped cotton fabric is used on chairs and a sofa. Straw rugs that cost $25 take the place of his winter Aubussons.

He likes to change accessories in summer and substitutes clear crystal and amber glass for porcelains and objets d'art.

Many people find storage of seasonal accessories a nuisance, but he has found that if one reserves a closet shelf or storage area for these objects, it will be merely a matter of moving one set in and the other out. The idea is to take the giant step and make the space available. After that, there should be no problem.

One great advantage of the seasonal accessory look is that it can solve clutter. Lovely things often are so crowded together that they can never earn full appreciation of the beholder. The objects should be sorted, and some of them stored. You'll appreciate them more when you can see your treasures in proper perspective.

Greer is a guest speaker for many women's groups and unravels many questions about home furnishings terminology for the ladies. He is likely to tell them a "toile" is the same as a chintz, and that chintz isn't always glazed or big flashy floral prints, that dark stained floors are in better taste than light ones, and that one should try for an "architectural" look at windows and doors to give a room character.

The popular interior designer wrote the book "Inside Interior Design," now in its fourth printing.

New Stamp Is Tribute To Thoreau

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Henry David Thoreau, a philosopher and author of the 19th Century who believed in the dignity of man, will be honored on a new U.S. 5 - cent stamp to be issued on July 12. The date is the 150th anniversary of Thoreau's birth. Place of issuance will be Concord, Mass., where he was born and is buried.

The new stamp will be vertical on white paper with the portrait of Thoreau in black. The name "Thoreau" is at the top in red and the "U.S. 5 Cents" at the bottom in green.

Not far from Concord is Walden Pond. Here Thoreau secluded himself for two years in a self-built cabin to contemplate, to observe nature and to write. The book that came from this experience, "Walden," has appeared in some 150 editions in 50 languages.

Collectors desiring first - day cancellations of this new stamp may send their addressed envelopes, together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, Concord, Mass. 01742. The envelope to the postmaster should be endorsed "First - Day Covers 5 cent Thoreau Stamp." Request must be postmarked no later than July 12.

The famous "Schultzmantelmadonna" from Fraustein Castle in Upper Austria is featured on a new 3 - schilling stamp issued by Austria. The green, blue and black stamp depicts the famous wooden statue and commemorates the "Gothic Art in Austria" exhibit being held from May 19 to Oct. 15 at Krems-Stein in Lower Austria. Among the most outstanding examples of gothic art in Austria are St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna and the Franciscan Church in Salzburg.

Canada will issue a special 5 - cent "Royal Visit" stamp on June 30, the day before Queen Elizabeth takes part in centennial ceremonies in Ottawa. The medium-size stamp will have a horizontal format featuring the Queen's portrait from a photograph by Anthony Buckey of London. The centennial symbol will be at the left of the portrait. There will be laurel leaves above the Queen's head.

Surinam's religious semi-postal set issue at Easter time consisted of five stamps. All designs were symbolic representations of the Good Samaritan. Also issued by that country were two stamps honoring the Central Bank of Surinam. Each showed a different view of the bankbuilding.

The Republic of Cyprus marked the completion of its "Five Year Development Program" by issuing five new stamps, reports the Crown Agents Stamp Bureau. The program has been characterized by an ambitious plan of public development in the fields of agriculture, water conservation, road building, harbor and port expansion, electricity improvement, telecommunications, rural development and tourism. The five new stamps depict the following scenes: the new electric power station at Moni, Limassol; Arghaka-Maghouda dam in the northwest Cyprus hills; new highway to the Troodos mountain resorts; new hotel in Nicosia, harbor at Famagusta.

Home, Garden Week Planned

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

If you, Mrs. Gardener, want to get up-to-date gardening information, then make plans now to attend our Home and Garden Week on the campus of LSU August 22-25.

Definite plans for the gardening programs have not been announced as of yet, but will give you this information real soon in my column. Circle the dates on your calender. You may stay in one of the lovely dormitories while attending the three-day event at no cost for lodging. The only cost will be for meals which are quite reasonable. So if you can take the time, make your plans now.

If you, Mrs. Gardener, give proper care to the annuals in your landscape, the blooming period can be extended to a considerable degree. First cultivate to a very shallow depth. Annual's roots are near the surface of the soil. Deep cultivation will cut important feeder roots. Remove the old blooms. Flowering will cease when seed pods begin to form. Cut back tall spindly plants to encourage new branching.

PLANT FOOD

Fertilize annuals for a second time during June. Two pounds of a complete fertilizer per 100 square feet of growing area is generally recommended for most annuals.

Water during periods of drouth by giving a thorough soaking to encourage deeper root system. Water in the early morning rather than at night to help prevent the spread of disease-frequent sprinkling aid little.

Be sure to remember to control plant pests.

Prune climbing roses. Blossoms will be gone and new shoots appearing. Cut the oldest canes.

Cut dahlias back to about one half their growth after the first crop of blooms. The plants will branch and produce a good crop of fall blooms.

Dig, divide and replant bearded iris.

Feed chrysanthemums with a complete fertilizer at the rate of one and one half to two pounds per 100 feet of row.

This is June Dairy Month, and Ouachita Parish is joining the other states of the nation in making special efforts toward letting all people know the importance of milk in the diet of all ages. Mrs. Homemaker, let's make a comparison of the cost of milk. Mrs. Consumer, you buy most of your food by the pound so - one quart of milk weights 2.15 pounds - an average cost of twenty nine cents per quart. This is slightly more than fourteen cents per pound. If you serve husband two eight-ounce glasses of milk per day, this is about 14 cents. You are providing a big step toward a balanced diet. These two glasses of milk supply for moderately active adult man 26 per cent of the protein, 72 per cent of his calcium, and adults need calcium, just as much as growing children, 49 per cent of his riboflavin, thirteen per cent of his thiamine, and about 11 per cent of his daily calorie needs.

Remember that children need about three to four glasses of milk each day.

OUTDOOR FURNITURE

Mr. A. S. McKean, forestry specialist for the Louisiana Cooperative Extension Service, gives you, Mrs. Homemaker, some excellent information on care of your outdoor furniture. He says that years of service can be added to wooden outdoor furniture by treating it with a wood preservative and a water repellant. The heartwood of cedar, cypress and catalpa will resist decay for a longer period than other woods.

All types of outdoor wooden furniture should be protected with a preservative treatment of pentachlorphenol with an added water repellent known as "Penta WR." The preservative should be mixed with mineral spirits and be the paintable type. It can be obtained in either concentrated or ready to apply from your building supply store.

Be sure to check the label and make certain that both penta and the water repellant are present. Penta safeguards the wood against decay and the water repellant provides resistance to moisture absorption.

Garden Center Notes

June Bride Motifs Shown

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

The Garden Study Club of Monroe presented "Designs for The June Bride." June is the month for flowers and weddings, so this was a most timely and beautiful program.

Mrs. Archie Dickerson, president of the group, with several of the club's members, brought the six outstanding designs which ranged from wedding bouquet to the groom's table design.

Mrs. Morris Harrison designed a patio party decor using the iron grill candle holders, six in the group, with diamond cut candle glass holders. Stephanotos and baby ivy entwined throughout the grill work. Simplicity was the keynote.

Mrs. Archie Dickerson made a design for the groom's table using a three tiered gold ceramic (fountain type) flower holder. Oasis was anchored into place on each of the three bowls with twistem. Large (burbank) daisies and two types of small ivy formed the entire free-standing design. A small amount of the arbre vitae fern was used as a filler.

For the church or entrance hall, Mrs. C. H. Tait and Mrs. C. T. Johnson made a large design using the large (Burbank) daisies as the main flower against a background of a spidestra foliage. Holly foliage and contenester filled in for contrast. Small clusters of ivy were used low to soften the edge of the large green glass container.

BRIDE'S BOUQUET

The bride's bouquet was made by Mrs. John P. Lewis. In every detail this was truly ideal for the bride. The tussy-mussy design made on a background frame held gathered sheer net (alusians) at the outer edge. This was in white to match the white flowers that filled in the central section. Glad florets, lily - of - the-valley, stephanotos and one beautiful white Dutch Iris with gold markings, completed the assortment of flowers. White satin ribbon and a cluster of lace formed streamers and bow flowing from the flowers. The only greenery was the small leaves of the stephanotos and the arbre - vitae fern.

Mrs. Henson Coon made the bride's reception table. A pyramid design of gardenias with the foliage as a background was made in a silver epergne which had a beautiful carved, silver base with the cone shaped glass holder attached to the top to hold the tall placement of flowers. Oasis in the bowl held the stems and kept the blooms fresh. This lovely formal design was flanked on either side with the three tiered silver candle holders. White candles completed the design.

WICKER UMBRELLA

For the luncheon - shower table, a very unusual and beautiful design was created by Mrs. J. Norman Coon and Mrs. Artis Caldwell. A wicker umbrella was placed inside a glass bowl filled with oasis that had been wired into place. Deep pink Rudbeckia (cone flowers) and pink Radiance roses filled the lower and upper section of this large design. Red barberry formed the over - all line, blending perfectly with the rose tones of the flowers. At the tip of the umbrella handle a variegated ribbon bow was placed as the finishing touch, blending with the colors of the flowers.

A clever place card was also exhibited on the program made of pink linen, a miniature umbrella with a white pipe cleaner stem anchored on a small round piece of styra foam to attach the card to.

Many came by for a closer look at these lovely designs. Many were looking for ideas for bride parties — and appreciated these lovely designs.

Wednesday, the Jonesboro-Hodge High School Gardeners will present the program. Miss Valerie Barnum is their sponsor.

Unless I remembered to tell the people in charge, they wouldn't know what flavor it was, and people would come along looking at the cakes, trying to guess what kind they were.

The other day I made a lemon cake for a bake sale and came up with this little idea: I put white icing on it and a yellow border around the edges with yellow flowers and green leaves. Then on top I wrote, "I'm A Lemon Cake" in yellow icing.

I don't mean to brag, but it did look pretty.

A chocolate cake with white icing and chocolate decorations and writing should also work out real nice.

Mrs. Jack Davis

DEAR HELOISE:
Before I put the lid on a clean jar I put in a piece of paper towel to prevent odors and to absorb any remaining moisture.

Old-time friend

DEAR HELOISE:
A nice vase or flower bowl usually comes with a gift of flowers ordered by wire.

Before the fresh flowers wither and must be discarded, I duplicate the type of flowers, greens and arrangement with plastic flowers, using the same gift vase.

I then have an everlasting decorative memento of the pleasant occasion on which the flowers were received.

Kathryn Wilson

DEAR HELOISE:
The coffee cans with the plastic lids are very handy if you have a child who gets carsick.

Insert a plastic food bag in the can, open the bag and fold it out and down over the sides of the can, and secure it in place with a rubber band. Then place the lid on the can until needed.

After being used, simply close the bag with the rubber band and throw it in a garbage can or put the lid back on the can and place it in the car trunk until you reach home.

Madolin

DEAR FOLKS:
When you want to drain the juice off canned peas, beets, peaches, etc., open the can, hold the lid in place with your finger, and pour off the juice.

After the lid is cut all the way around it will fit down into the can. There will be enough space around the cut lid to let the juice drain out while the contents of the can will be held in.

After the juice is drained off, throw away the lid and pour out the food.

FOR POLE WATCHERS

DEAR HELOISE:
Here is a trick I use to be sure the wind doesn't blow down my wash line propoles, and to prevent anyone from taking them for other uses.

I screw a large screw-eye in the top end of the propole, put the line through the eye and tie it to the end pole.

Mrs. N. F. E.

DEAR HELOISE:
When my baby first started eating baby food, I soon learned that about half a jar of each was all he would eat at a meal.

I saved some of the baby-food jars and sterilized them. Then when I opened his jars of food I would put half of each kind into clean jars and save it for his next meal.

About 15 minutes before his next meal, I would take the jars of food out of the refrigerator and set them on the pilot light of my stove. His food would be just the right temperature at feeding time.

Dividing baby food into the right amounts for each meal is especially good when someone else is going to take care of your baby. There is no question that your baby gets the right amount of food, since all you have to do is mark the tops of the jars with a felt pen . . . such as "breakfast", "lunch" and "supper".

Mrs. Pool

ALL SQUARED OFF!

DEAR HELOISE:
When stirring mush or any sticky sauces, stir them with a square-ended pancake turner instead of a rounded spoon. It will help to prevent the sauce from sticking to the bottom of a pan.

Allie Lilto

DEAR HELOISE:
I used to spill laundry detergent when the box would fall over in the car on the way to or from the laundromat. Now I tuck a small plastic bag in that perforated opening at the top of the detergent box and push the flap of the box down to hold it. Even if the box falls over on its side, not a grain spills on the car seat.

Gran

DEAR HELOISE:
I just could not keep the blanket on the baby in his baby bed or on the older child in his junior bed. So I bought two inexpensive pairs of men's suspenders that have clips on both ends.

I put the suspenders under the bed springs with the clip parts hanging out a little on each side. Then, when the children go to bed, I attach the suspender clips to the edge of the blankets.

Since the suspenders are elastic, the blanket gives, but yet the child is never completely uncovered.

Mother

DEAR HELOISE:
To make plants that grow in water look more attractive, put a few drops of blue and green food coloring in a huge snifter (or any clear glass container). Fill with water and add plants.

Sure makes green plants look different in that lovely sea-green water!

Vickie

DEAR HELOISE:
After waxing your bathroom floor with paste wax, if you immediately place your rugs on the floor, they will cling to the floor for days.

Of course, I don't advise doing the frug on them!

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:

I have baked quite a few things for cake sales and usually wrote the kind of cake it was on a piece of paper and stuck it on the plate. Many a time the label was lost before I arrived at my destination.

Unless I remembered to tell the people in charge, they wouldn't know what flavor it was, and people would come along looking at the cakes, trying to guess what kind they were.
